6th WEEK and continued success of Miss JENNIE LEE
JENNIE LEE JENNIE LEE
and
Mr. J. P. BURNETT

SECOND GRAND PRODUCTION
of the
JENNIE LEE SEASON.

The Managers beg to draw public attention to the fact of the great success achieved by Miss Jennie Lee everywhere the GRASSHOPPER has been represented. It was performed for eight consecutive weeks in Melbourne to crowded houses nightly. The character of "GRASSHOPPER" presents MISS JENNIE LEE in COMEDY, and in perfect contrast to her wonderful interpretation of "JO," while it is equally excellent, and displays her marvellous versatility to the fullest extent.

FIRST PRODUCTION IN SYDNEY of the Farcical, Musical, and Romantic Comedy in 3 acts, entitled
THE GRASSHOPPER
or the CHANCES of the CARDS.
Adapted by Mr. J. P. BURNETT from Mielach and Halevy's great Parisian success, LA CIGALE.

Special Engagement of the old Sydney favourite Comedian
Mr. H. R. HARWOOD

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS.

OUR LATEST VENTURE.

THE NEW TAILORING DEPARTMENT.

HORDERN BROTHERS,
beg to thank those gentlemen who have honoured them with their orders during the past few weeks, and desire to inform them and the public generally that, in consequence of the unprecedented success of their new department, and the large trade done therein, they have considerably augmented their stock of Woollens by judicious purchases of
NEWEST and BEST TWEEDS
FANCY COATINGS
and
FINEST BROADCLOTHS and DOESKINS.

HORDERN BROTHERS
also beg to inform the public that all goods made at their establishment are invariably soaked for twenty-four hours, thus ensuring to their customers that EVERY GARMENT IS THOROUGHLY SHRUNK.

HORDERN BROTHERS
would further intimate that they use none but the best trimming in the making up of their Tailoring Orders, and therefore customers can rely that they will not be annoyed by the linings, pockets, &c., of their garments proving unserviceable before their clothes are half worn out, as is too often the case.

HORDERN BROTHERS, speaking by the unanimous verdict of the large number of customers who have patronised their TAILORING DEPARTMENT, can assure the public that all goods made to order at their establishment will fit to the satisfaction of those who have to wear them.

HORDERN BROTHERS therefore invite one and all to leave their Tailoring Orders with the new Cutter of the Pitt-street Tailoring Department, where every garment is cut on SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES by an artist who has proved himself to our numerous customers to be a thorough master of his profession.

HORDERN BROTHERS tell the public their prices cannot be beat.

They make TWEED TROUSERS from 18s.

They make TWEED SUITS from 50s,
and
They make every other garment equally cheap.

FRENCH PROTESTANT COLLEGE,
BEDFORD, ENGLAND.

DIRECTRICE: MADAME DE MARCHOT.

In his Report for 1882, the Examiner sent by the Oxford and Cambridge Board says:—"I have examined the French Protestant College in Divinity, Latin, Euclid, Algebra, History, Geography, English Grammar, and Literature. The general results of both oral and written Examinations were highly satisfactory. I would especially commend the neatness of the writing and the correctness of the spelling in all the papers; and in the viva voce examination I was much pleased with the brightness and intelligence of the girls. The Euclid was very well done by most of the girls; the average marks in Algebra were much higher than what usually finds in boys' schools for Elementary Algebra. I am very glad that Mathematics are thus so successfully studied by the girls. I am sure it helps to make them more ready, more accurate, and more thoughtful in all their studies. The Latin shows much improvement from last year and is fair throughout. The History papers were very good, showing much mental grasp, besides a full knowledge of facts. The Grammar paper proved really too easy a test; all the girls showed a careful acquaintance with Analysis as well as Elementary Grammar. I also set a paper on Shakespeare with most satisfactory results. I am greatly pleased with the thoroughness of the work all round, and I can well judge from the appearance of the girls that they combine with their studies a due amount of recreation. I know that the College is famed for its French education, but I am glad to find that so much attention is devoted to other subjects."

The Examiner in French and German, sent by the same University Board, says:—"I am glad to report so favourably of both languages. It was really a relief, after the usual stumbling and blundering so common among boys' schools, to find such good pronunciation and such bright answering. The papers are most excellent; while everything shows great conversational acquaintance with the language. Throughout the school the goodness of the pronunciation and fluency of expression are very striking. It is rare to find such good results attained in an English school."

The List of Honours gained by the Pupils at the Cambridge Higher Examination for Women, the Oxford and Cambridge Public Schools Leaving Examination, Girton College, Cambridge Local Examination, Oxford Local Examination, Royal Academy of Music Examination, South Kensington Science and Art Examination, St. John's Ambulance Association, &c., can be had on application.

Musical Instruments.

AN ENTERPRISING FIRM.
Messrs. NICHOLSON and CO.
take credit for completely revolutionising the Piano and Music Trade of Australia.

The introduction of the following well-known makers—
THE RONISCH PIANO
THE STEINWAY PIANO
THE HAGSPIEL PIANO
THE SCHIEDMAYER PIANO
THE KAPS PIANO
was due to the enterprise of Messrs. NICHOLSON and CO.; and not to be alone, but still keep the lead, Messrs. NICHOLSON and CO., have excelled all their previous efforts by the introduction of their NEW MODEL PIANOS,
but especially by the MIGNON PIANO,
the
GREATEST SUCCESS OF THE AGE.
It is really marvellous with what rapidity this piano has taken hold upon the people of Australia; and no wonder, for the MIGNON is the GRANDEST MEDIUM-SIZED PIANO EVER BROUGHT TO AUSTRALIA.

Everything in the MIGNON is of the best. All old notions have been discarded. The general construction combines the greatest possible strength and solidity. For volume and duration of tone the MIGNON
IS NOT EQUALLED BY ANY SIMILAR VALUE PIANO YET MADE.

The quality of the tone is of the purest and most sympathetic, whilst the touch is exceedingly light and elastic, and gives the greatest freedom to the performer. It is perfect in repetition.
The Mignon has a grand iron frame, is double oblique (overstrung), trichord, and seven octaves in compass—machine tuning plate. The Mignon is encased in walnut, or can be had in walnut and gold engraved or ebonised and gold engraved, exquisitely designed.

THE MIGNON PIANO
IS THE WONDER OF THE PRESENT DAY.

As was naturally to be expected, the introduction of the Mignon brought forward a host of would-be imitators—feeble efforts—but we have no fear for the Mignon; it would more than hold its own against them all. The reputation of the
is an established fact, and this can be proved if necessary by the hundreds of letters received in its praise, and by an inspection of Messrs. Nicholson's books, which will show the large sales constantly effected.

Messrs. NICHOLSON and CO.
would draw attention to their fine
GRAND COTTAGE PIANO,
MODEL No. 11,
overstrung, iron-framed, and possessing volume and quality of tone equal to some of the best semi-grand pianos.

THE No. 11
is a really superb instrument in every respect. These models are warranted for seven years.
They can be sent without fear to the most remote parts of the colonies.

These Pianos have not competed at any exhibition; consequently Messrs. Nicholson and Co. cannot advertise them as having received first prizes at exhibitions. We would warn the general public against PLACING ANY RELIANCE UPON EXHIBITION PRIZE MEDAL PIANOS.
In general but especially at the late Sydney and Melbourne Exhibitions was it noticeable, the utter worthlessness of the distinctions given, because such were distributed indiscriminately. This intention to so distribute became so apparent that quite a number of first-class makers, including such names as
STEINWAY (German)
RONISCH
LIPP PLEYEL
and others
REFUSED TO COMPETE
and the prizes then fell into the hands of INFERIOR MAKERS;
therefore we repeat that prize medal pianos as a rule are to be avoided.

SEASON 1883-84.

HILL, CLARK, and CO.,
SYDNEY.

TO THE WOOL GROWERS OF NEW SOUTH WALES AND QUEENSLAND.

The rapid approach of the incoming wool season reminds us to tender our thanks for the very liberal support which has been accorded to us during past years; and while doing so we take the opportunity to solicit a continuance of the same support in the future which we have enjoyed in the past.

On referring to our circular issued last year we find that we therein anticipated a large increase in the quantity of wool which would be sold in these colonies, and the result proved that we were correct. We also predicted that the prices obtained in the colonies would be in favour of those growers who sold in the

and this also has been fully borne out by facts.

We are also glad to say that this market all through the last season was extremely active, and the large quantity of wool sold proves that is fast becoming what it is destined to be in future the

WOOL MARKET OF AUSTRALIA.

We have therefore no hesitation in urging upon growers the advantage of first offering their wool here, where buyers from all the manufacturing countries of Europe and America attend to supply their wants from

FIRST HANDS.

Failing sales in Sydney we are prepared to ship to our London Agents, making liberal cash advances.

When sales are effected

OUR CHARGES

are made on as low a scale as possible, and all wool offered in our Warehouses, and not sold, is subject only to the nominal charge of which covers receiving, delivering, weighing, and storage accommodation.

ONE SHILLING PER BALE,

Our Warehouses are particularly well lighted, and are most conveniently arranged for the display of wool in any quantity, to the greatest advantage.

The most careful attention is given to the valuing of every lot both large and small, so that nothing will be sold under the full market value.

Way-bills and all further information forwarded upon application.

DARLINGHURST.

GREEN and PAGE
have much pleasure in submitting their PRICE LIST of TEA, Coffee, Cocoa, Sugar, Fruit, Spices, &c., &c., which for price and superior quality will be found upon inspection and comparison as low as any other house, with the advantage of prompt delivery, civility, and attention; and having had many years' practical experience in the market, possess a thorough knowledge of the value of every article connected with the trade, and can with confidence recommend the quality of all goods introduced.

G. and P. also take this opportunity of thanking their numerous patrons for their very liberal support, and trust, by strict attention to business, to merit a still larger support of public patronage. Soliciting the favour of your orders,

We remain,
Your obedient servants,

FOR PRIVATE SALE.

MAGNIFICENT VINEYARD, situated about 2½ miles from the RAILWAY STATION at SOUTH WAGGA WAGGA, for PRIVATE SALE, by order of the PROPRIETOR, the Honorable WILLIAM MACLEAY, M.L.C.

The UNDERSIGNED have been instructed to bring into the market the NOTED
WOLENJERIE VINEYARD
ESTATE, situated on and having about ONE and A-HALF MILE FRONTAGE to the northern shore of LAKE ALBERT,
near Wagga Wagga.

The ESTATE consists of about 500 ACRES of the RICHEST LAND, and is all securely fenced, and subdivided into three paddocks.

The VINEYARD occupies an enclosed space of about 40 acres, well trenched, admirably laid out, well kept, and in splendid order. It contains about 43,000 STRONG and HEALTHY VINES of the best varities of grape. The ANNUAL YIELD being about 10,000 GALLONS of WINE, UNSURPASSED IN QUALITY. The casks' and cellars' space are sufficient for 50,000 gallons.

The wine on hand, about 30,000 to 40,000 gallons, ranges in age from 1877 to last vintage, and will be included in the sale at a lump sum—or at per gallon, as may be determined.

The other buildings consist of a brick cottage for proprietor's residence, a manager's residence, severals men's huts, press room, still-house, &c.

A better opportunity than this for a man of practical knowledge as a VIGNERON very rarely offers, everything about the place is complete and in the best order, and no further outlay of any kind is required, excepting what is necessary for the ordinary working expenses.

Further particulars may be obtained on application to

THE CORONATION FESTIVITIES AT MOSCOW.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT AT MOSCOW.)

MOSCOW, MAY 29.

The coronation festivities of the Russian Czars have always been famous for their Oriental splendour and magnificence, and for the many pageants by which the public at large is to be entertained on these occasions. The Russian Czars would by their own nation not be regarded as being really the rightful sovereigns of all the Russias before they have been crowned and anointed in the holy city of Moscow, and only after that ceremony has been accomplished the Russian Emperors appear to the orthodox believers the real representatives of all Divine and human authority. A great mystery had almost to the last surrounded the preparations for the coronation of Emperor Alexander III., for affairs in the heart of Russia bore a very sinister face, and it was to be feared that the festivities would be disturbed by the Nihilists by a new attempt on the life of the Czar. The preparations were therefore conducted amid circumstances of gloom and it was only after the police had taken the most extensive measures so as to render a disturbance of the festivities most impossible that the Emperor resolved to announce, urbi et orbi, the day of his coronation. During the last few weeks the interest of the whole political world has therefore been concentrated on the proceedings in the Russian Empire, and from all parts of Europe official ambassadors with large suites have been sent to Moscow in order to be present at the festivities, which, according to the wish of the Emperor, were to be heralded with the old pomp and ceremonies. The leading journals of Europe, as well as of the other civilised continents, had sent special correspondents. The greater part of the representatives of the foreign press left for Moscow with the idea that they would not be well received by the Russian authorities. We were, however, at once provided with all the necessary cards and invitations, and it was evident that the Russian Government was quite willing to afford to us every opportunity for seeing as much as possible, and for making ourselves thoroughly acquainted with Russian life and customs, and with the real state of home affairs, in order that the whole world might become acquainted with the immense resources of Russia, and with all the institutions for the improvement of Russian private and State life. It cannot be denied that the greater part of the foreigners who had to be present at the festivities undertook the journey to the far East with a feeling of uneasiness on account of the Nihilistic propaganda; but as soon as we arrived at Moscow, and with our own eyes saw what preparations had been made by the police and military authorities for securing the lives of the Imperial family and their guests, a feeling of complete security returned at once, and even on the day of the State entry of their Majesties at Moscow, the "city of bells," nobody could any longer entertain the least fear that the ceremonies would be disturbed or interrupted by a crime.

My journey to St. Petersburg was not very interesting, though the trains were crowded by the many official deputations who went to the Russian capital. St. Petersburg presented itself in its loveliest spring attributes, and made a splendid and striking impression as one generally connects the picture of St. Petersburg with surroundings of snow and ice. The capital was like the great head-quarters of an army; but the latter had this time only come for peaceful purposes. It was very difficult to get the necessary documents for receiving permission to be present at the coronation festivities, and it was still more difficult to get a ticket for an express train to Moscow, as all seats had been taken long before. The Russian authorities were, however, very amiable, and I therefore overcame at last all difficulties, and found myself soon en route for the "mother" Moscow. The journey from St. Petersburg to the old capital took more than 17 hours, but the compartments of the trains were so comfortable, and the restaurants at the different stations where we had to make longer halts in order to refresh ourselves, were so well provided with all that is good to eat and drink, that the journey did not fatigue us very much; besides, not the least feeling of fear was entertained by those who were present. The whole railway line from St. Petersburg to Moscow was closely watched by sections of troops, who had their camps along the railroad, and who, in their clean white tunics, looked quite proud and happy.

At last we safely arrived at the Holy City, and were lodged in a comfortable hotel. Every one who entered this semi-oriental capital, with the history of which that of the whole Russian empire is so intimately connected, was charmed by the impression which this city, with the famous Kremlin, the thousands of churches and chapels, the splendid palaces and old huts, the broad and airy boulevards, the oriental splendour and luxury, conveyed to the mind. The most striking contrasts are to be noticed here, and the picture becomes all the more interesting through the hundreds and thousands of visitors who have come from the different provinces of the vast empire, from the north of Siberia, from the far East; from the Chinese, Afghanistan, and Persian frontiers; from the steppes of Central Asia, and from the borders of the Caspian sea and the Trans-Caucasian territories. All the human races seem to have given each other a rendezvous here, and the different languages which are spoken here remind us of the biblical story of the building of the tower of Babel. The most famous chiefs of the Tekkes, Bokhara, and Khiva districts have accepted the invitation of the great white Tzar.

We have thus the best opportunity to become personally acquainted with the celebrated warriors and patriarchs who have hitherto so bravely resisted Russian supremacy. By the side of these very serious-looking men, in their richly embroidered garments and caps and hats of sheepskin, we notice representatives of a great many other races—Kirgheeses, Kalmucs, Therkesses, &c.; and apart from these specimens of the Mongol race, we observe the different Slav races in their picturesque costumes, who have likewise come from different parts of Europe in honour of their great protector. The population of Moscow in itself is quite as interesting, and the thousands of Mujiks, who have arrived from the farthest districts (hundreds of miles distant), in all kinds of carts, also deserve our attention. They have to live in the streets and public places for several weeks, which, however, they do not mind as long as they catch a glimpse of the Emperor and the Imperial family, and can partake of the banquet which, according to an old custom, the Czar offers to the poorer classes in the plains round the castle of Petrowski. Wherever we look our eyes meet new and interesting scenes of Russian public life, and we can never grow tired of looking again and again on these interesting groups, which are so very different from all that we have been accustomed to see in other countries.

Though months ago the preparations for the coronation of the Czar had begun, thousand of architects, painters, and workmen of every kind were still occupied adorning the city, and particularly those streets and places along which the Imperial cortege was to take its way. Till the moment of the arrival of the Czar everybody seemed busy laying the last hand on the work, which, however, did not make such a pompous and striking effect as we had anticipated. In Western Europe the adorning of the streets and squares is on such opportunities undertaken under the superintendence and after plans and sketches of first-rate artists and architects, who paint fine pictures, model beautiful statues referring to the history of the events in question, while the public have to adorn the houses as much as possible after one given style, thus producing an official via triumphalis. The decoration of Moscow, however, does not give much proof of artistic taste, but the goodwill of the population must here be appreciated all the more. The streets and houses were adorned as well as possible with banners and flags of every kind and shape, and also with many pictures of saints and of the members of the Imperial family, which, however, scarcely deserved the name of likenesses. Flowers were nowhere to be seen, though the finest spring weather had already set in at Moscow, and flowers were in full bloom. The want of garlands and wreaths was of course to be noticed, and the via triumphalis made therefore not a very bright and striking impression, but the magnificence and splendour of the Imperial procession contrasted all the more with it.

No remarkable buildings stand on the road which the Emperor had to take from the Palace of Petrowski to the Kremlin, only the gate where the chapel for the icon of the Iberian Mother of God has been erected is worthy to be particularly mentioned. This chapel, where the Emperor and Empress had to pay their devotions, is in itself very simple, but the gate of the resurrection is so situated, leading from the China town to the red place, that it is like the heart of Moscow. At the right and left of the chapel are to be seen monuments which have been erected in memory of important events in the history of Russia.

Before describing the festivities themselves, I must give your readers some interesting historical particulars about the coronations of the Czars in general.

The first grandduke who was crowned was Wladimir Monomach, to whom Emperor Alexius, of Byzans, made present of a cross cut from a piece of the Identical Cross of Christ, a crown in the shape of a gold brocaded bonnet set with precious stones, and a chain of Arabian gold. The Metropolitan of Ephesus was commissioned to bring these regalias to Kief and to crown the Grand Duke. The custom that the Grand Dukes and Czars were crowned by the representatives of the church was kept up to the time of Peter I., who abolished the institution of patriarchs and crowned himself, but then the custom of the anointing was not yet known. This custom was introduced by Czar Feodor in 1584, who at the same time received from the heads of the archbishop the sceptre and the ball of the Empire. The coronation of Michael, first monarch of the house of Romanoff, was celebrated with great splendour. On this occasion the famous throne was inaugurated which is still in use for these ceremonies, and which is set with more than a thousand rubies, turquoises, pearls, &c. Feodor was the last Czar who was crowned with the regalia of Monomach. Peter the Great crowned himself with a new crown, and also had a new crown made for the Empress. This crown was decorated with a great ruby and with 2564 diamonds. To these regalia were afterwards added by Peter the Second the holy banner, the holy sword, and the chain of the newly initiated order of St. Andrew. Paul I. was the first Emperor who made a great State entry from the Petrowski Palace to the Kremlin, in the same style as is still in use, and it was this Emperor who deposited on the altar of the Ascension Church the law about the succession to the throne in Russia, by which the rule of primogeniture was introduced. Alexander I., Nicholas I., and Alexander II. have altered nothing in the old customs, and Alexander III. sanctioned for his own coronation the same ceremonies which had been in use for his august predecessors.

All the different members of the Imperial family had already arrived at Moscow some days before their Majesties, while the foreign princes and several of the foreign ambassadors had, according to the Emperor's wish, postponed their arrival until the Czar had safely reached his old capital. Great preparations were made for the Imperial journey from St. Petersburg to Moscow and for the guarding of the station at Petrowski, where the Emperor was to stay till the day of his state entry. The Imperial couple had left St. Petersburg during the night of Saturday, with the Grand Dukes Alexis and Paul, and arrived on Sunday afternoon, at 6 o'clock, at Moscow, where all the grand dukes, grand duchesses, and a large suite of generals and high officers were assembled on the station in order to receive their august Sovereign. More than 200 policemen and voluntary guards of peasants had undertaken to watch over the safety of their Majesties. As soon as the train arrived the Emperor left his saloon carriage, and after having shaken hands with all his kinsmen and intimate friends, he reviewed the guard of honour. Then the 20 State carriages were mounted, and amidst the loud and enthusiastic cheers of the multitude, the Imperial couple drove to the Castle of Petrowski, where once Napoleon I. had taken refuge after Moscow had been destroyed. The whole road from the station to the castle, about three English miles long, was framed with a line of troops, behind which, at a certain distance, the crowd was allowed to take position. The people behaved very well indeed, and it could be noticed that everybody seemed happy that the Czar had at last safely reached his capital, and that his arrival took place so far under favourable auspices. Until the following Tuesday the Imperial couple took up their residence at the charming castle, which is surrounded by splendid parks, and which is famous by many historical traditions, as Peter the Great was educated there. On the next day, Monday, the Emperor received the many foreign princes and ambassadors, but no festivities took place, as the Imperial couple had to remain en retraite till the day of the coronation, and to undergo a great many rather fatiguing religious ceremonies. Their Majesties only took constitutional drives through the parks, and many touching scenes were on these occasions to be witnessed, as the lower classes of the population surrounded the Imperial carriages, in order to kiss the hands of the Emperor and the Empress, and to wish them all happiness and good luck. In those two days the Emperor must have received the conviction that he still possesses the love and heart of his people, and that only a small minority of his subjects were erring off on the wrong path, and that he could still hope that his reign might become a happy and blessed one for himself and the nation.

At last the first act of the coronation festivities was to take place in the State entry of their Majesties into Moscow. On Tuesday, the 22nd of May, the weather was not very fine, for the sky was clouded and slight showers of rain were repeatedly coming down. Nevertheless a crowd of half a million people and more lined the road between Petrowski and the Kremlin, and held their places occupied for many hours before the ceremony, in order to witness the magnificence of the Imperial procession, which indeed surpassed everything of this kind that we have ever seen. At noon the thunder of the cannons from the walls of the Kremlin gave the signal for the ringing of the bells of the 400 churches of Moscow. This was also the signal for all the princes, high officials, and deputations to drive to Petrowski, in order to take their reserved places in the State procession. At 2 o'clock the Emperor mounted his richly decorated horse—a splendid white steed; after which the Empress, with her daughter, Princess Xenia, mounted the gilded gorgeous State coach, drawn by eight white steeds. The procession began, and united all that the vast Russian Empire can show of splendour and richness. The head-master of the police and 12 gens'd'armes opened the procession. Then the deputations of the Imperial Life Guards, Cossacks, and Dragoons followed, whose splendid and varying uniforms gave a wonderful contrast to the different more or less dark complexions of the men themselves. After these, the interest of the foreign spectators was attracted by the appearance of the many deputations of the different Asiatic races who have become tributary to Russia. There were to be seen the most famous chiefs of the warrior nomads, with their swarthy faces and shaved heads, splendidly dressed individuals, and covered with skull caps. The variety of the costumes and the interesting figures of the men made a grand impression; but we had scarcely enough time to allow our eyes to study this charming picture, because new scenes passed again and again before our eyes. After the Circassians, Mingrelians, Calmuks, Tekke-Turcomans, &c., had passed, hundreds of generals in their glittering uniforms followed, who preceded the cavalcades of the nobility of the different governmental districts, wearing, for the greater part, the rich costumes of the Bojares, which are for this occasion studded with gems and precious stones. The Imperial huntsmen, in their stately uniforms and liveries, concluded this part of the procession.

The next procession, however, surpassed, if possible, even the richness and splendour that we have seen until now. A dozen of piqueurs had this section, and after them appear, in sumptuous phaetons, each attended by four outriders and six running footmen with staves, the Ministers and grand officials of the Imperial household, the members of the Imperial Council, &c. A section of the lifeguards concluded this part, which, with its number of liveried servants, was truly magnificent. Now the cheers of the thousands of people are increasing, and the chorus of the human voices sounds like approaching thunder.

The Emperor, who wears the great uniform of a Russian General, and the ribbon and star of the high order of St. Andrew, appears. He looks pale, and very serious, and though he is anxious to acknowledge in the kindest manner the greetings and cheers of the crowds, it is to be seen that his thoughts wander back into the past, and try to penetrate the future. The Emperor is accompanied by the grand dukes and the foreign princes and by a large suite of his adjutants, masters of ceremony, &c. The ladies of the Imperial family follow in gilt coaches of which that of the Empress Alexandra is, of course, the most beautiful, and drawn by eight white steeds, which are led by masters of the horse in state uniforms, almost covered with gold. Outside the carriage on the box rail two young pages are standing, with their backs to the horses and the gorgeously dressed coachman, so that their fresh and happy countenances are just before the Empress and the Grand Duchess Xenia, who has her seat by the side of her mother. The Empress looks a little fatigued and weary, but she also bows continually to the enthusiastic masses. The carriage is a masterpiece of work. Rich garlands surround the ceiling of it, and a large crown is on the top of it. A large group of mounted masters of the horse, of cossacks, lacqueys, &c., closely follow the Imperial carriage. Those of the other princesses are likewise very beautiful, and glitter all over of gold and coloured stones; they are drawn each by six horses with velvet trappings and harness of gold cords. All the ladies wear the old Russian national costume, consisting of the sarafau (petticoat), of silver brocade, with rich golden embroideries, and with a bodice and train of yellow velvet, adorned with golden arabesques. The whole waist is decorated with precious stones, and on the heads are to be seen the Russian head-gears, composed of diamonds, emeralds, pearls, and the finest antique laces. One of the State carriages deserves to be particularly mentioned, as it was given as a present to Catharina II. by Frederic the Great. The inside of it is decorated with lovely pictures of Watteau and Boucher.

The princesses who take part in the procession are:—The Grand Duchess Marie Pawlowna, wife of the Grand Duke Wladimir; the Grand Duchess Alexandra Tossisofna, wife of the Grand Duke Constantine; the Duchess of Edinburgh, sister of the Czar; Grand Duchess Olga Feodorowna, Duchess Wera of Wurtemberg, Duchess Katharine of Oldenburg, Princess Marie of Baden, and Princess Eugenia of Oldenburg. Immediately behind the princesses follow sections of the Life Guards Cuirassiers, after which come all the ladies in waiting, and the procession is at last concluded by sections of Guards Hussars and Guards Lancers.

As soon as the head of the procession has reached the gate of triumph, the cannons give an Imperial salute and the bells ring. The Emperor has now to pay his devotions to the icon of the "Mother of God" from Mount Athos, which stands in a little shrine within the gate of resurrection. The Emperor and all the grand dukes dismount, and the Empress and the other Imperial and Royal ladies leave their carriages in order to pray before the icon. They are received by the high clergy of Moscow, Kieff, and Nowgorod, and they have to kiss the cross which is presented to them by the Metropolitan of Nowgorod.

Just at this moment a slight shower of rain began to descend, but it could not disturb the really grand impression of the holy ceremony. The thousands of spectators who have assembled on the tribunes and all round the icon have all uncovered their heads and are kneeling on the ground when the Imperial family ascend the steps of the altar and perform the orisons before the famous image, which is of course reputed to have miraculous properties. The whole ceremony does not take long, and the procession proceeds. Now the Imperial cortege enters the Kremlin through the Saviour's Gate, where the Emperor is received by the Commander-in-Chief of Moscow, who is surrounded by a large suite of generals and high officers. There are, however, still several other religious duties to be performed. Their Majesties and the Imperial guests had to proceed on a round of all the churches, chapels, and shrines within the Kremlin, in order to salute the other relics and icons, till they have at last reached the Imperial Palace, and are allowed to retire into their private apartments amid the thunder of another Imperial salute and the merry peals of all the bells. The Emperor has at last taken his residence in the palace of his forefathers, and it almost seems as if everybody feels relieved that this part of the coronation ceremonies has been accomplished without any disturbance. The preparations which the police had made for protecting the Imperial family were indeed excellent. The whole road from the Petrouski Palace to the Kremlin, about seven English miles long, was lined with a triple chain of soldiers, behind which a free space was left open for the patrols on horseback, who had to ride up and down the road in order to watch the masses. Among the spectators thousands of voluntary detectives were mixed, who watched the movements of all the people in their vicinity, and thus it was rendered almost impossible to cause any disturbance of the festivities.

It was late in the afternoon when we were able to leave the Kremlin, and to take a short rest at our hotel. As soon as darkness began to set in all the streets and public places were lit up with thousands of lamps and flames, and offered an almost fairy-like aspect. But the rain began to fall heavier, and the streets were therefore not crowded for very long, and towards midnight the whole town was quiet and the streets began to be empty. In the many restaurants and public-houses, however, the happy event was still duly celebrated by the patriotic Russians, who are, on the whole, very fond of this way of celebrating festivities.

The day after the State entry into Moscow the Czar and the Czarewna had to take their retraite in order to prepare themselves by prescribed fasting, and by the performance of several strict religious duties for the coronation. Before their Majesties left the Kremlin for a palace situated outside Moscow, near the Sparrow Hills, the holy banner of Russia was blessed by the high clergy in the presence of the whole Imperial family. Each new Czar has to give a new banner, which has to be waved thrice by the Emperor before the altar on the day of the coronation, and on which he has to take the oath that he is resolved to perform his duties of the father of the people. This ceremony took place in the Trophy Hall, where a great number of French, Polish, and Hungarian banners captured in the different wars are kept. The Trophy Hall is situated near the one where the Crown insignia and regalia are kept. Besides the members of the Imperial family and the high officials of the Russian Empire, only the Duke of Edinburgh and the Prince of Denmark, as the two nearest relatives, were admitted to the ceremony. The banner, embroidered and bordered with gold fringes, shows on gold brocade the Russian eagle, surrounded by a chain composed of the arms of all Russian provinces, while the border is formed by branches of oak and laurel leaves. The banner has on its point a golden ball, and is decorated with silk streamers in the Russian colours, and with the cords of the Order of St. Andrew. The Emperor, in Russian General's uniform, entered the hall with the Empress, who was dressed in a beautiful dark purple velvet robe, and with the young Czarewitch. They greeted the noble assembly, and took their position near a small prayer stand, while the Metropolitan Basanoff, who had formerly officiated as priest at the wedding of the Duke of Edinburgh addressed the Emperor, handing to him the holy banner, and beseeching him always to be a just and clement Sovereign. After the Imperial family had kissed the cross and the hand of the venerable priest, the ceremony was over and their Majesties left the Kremlin for their retraite.

This retraite did not suspend the festivities of all sorts which were offered by the Russian Grand Dukes, by eminent Russian aristocrats, and by the different special ambassadors, amongst which the festivities at the English and German missions were very brilliant. Lord Thornton had long before hired a splendid house in the street through which the state entry had to take place, and he was amicable enough to place the large rooms at the disposal of his diplomatic colleagues, who had not been lucky enough to find such splendid localities as the representative of Great Britain. General Schweinitz, the German Ambassador, had, as the head of the diplomatic corps, to give larger festivities, and the Emperor had been kind enough to accept an invitation to the German embassy for a great State ball. The distinguished foreign guests did, therefore, not want in amusements of various kinds. The public at large was entertained during the three days before the coronation by another very pompous ceremony. Heralds, surrounded by the great dignitaries of the Empire, and by sections of troops, had to announce to the people that Alexander the Third was to be crowned on the following Sunday. The places before the Kremlin were, therefore, every morning besieged by a crowd which was anxious to witness the spectacle which was to be displayed in the streets and places of Old Moscow. At 9 o'clock in the morning two squadrons of Life Guards took up their position in a line with a music band on each wing. Before the front of these troops stood the Commander-in-Chief, two secretaries of the Senate, two adjutants-general, two masters of the ceremonies, and a herald, behind which were four trumpeters on horseback. As soon as the signal had been given, the trumpeters began a fanfare, after which the proclamation was read aloud to the people, the national anthem was then played by the bands, and thousands of copies of the proclamation were distributed among the people. Horses with splendid rich harnesses are then brought for the masters of the ceremonies, heralds, &c., and the procession leaves the Kremlin in order to repeat the same ceremony at different places of the town. This proclamation went on all Friday and Saturday. On the latter day the regalia was brought from the Ornsheunaja Palace to the Hall of St. Andrew. The highest dignitaries have for this purpose to enter the hall, under the superintendence of the highest master of the ceremonies, and they have to receive the different crowns, the sceptre, the ball of empire, the sword, the banner, and the mantles, which are all fixed on cushions of purple velvet, and have to be brought to the above-mentioned hall, where they are received by other dignitaries. The procession is heralded and concluded by sections of palace guards, who, after the insignia and regalia are deposited on tables, have to remain in the hall in order to guard them till they are to be brought next day to the cathedral for the coronation ceremony, which is preceded by a holy service on the Saturday in the Cathedral of the Redemption, at which all the members of the court have to be present.

THE CORONATION.

A bright and splendid spring morning rose on the day of the coronation. Early in the morning the streets and squares were filled with dense crowds, and particularly the gates of the Kremlin were surrounded by thousands of spectators, who wished to gain a look on the stately processions of foreign royalties and embassies. At 7 o'clock the thunder of cannons gave the signal that the reading of the Holy Mass had already begun at the Uspenski Cathedral, and from that moment all those dignitaries and officials who had to be present at the ceremonies began to enter the cathedral, which had the drawback of being much too small, so that in reality every inch was occupied. The cathedral was soon filled, and the ladies, with their splendid toilettes and their sparkling Russian headgears, offered a most striking picture. An almost more imposing impression was, however, made by the several hundreds of priests of every grade who had assembled round the altar, and who were standing there in their silken robes, with golden and jewelled crosses, like statues of saints. After some time the famous Iwan Veliski began to ring, and its powerful tones were soon accompanied by the ringing of all the bells of the many other churches. The clear voices of the choristers began the "Kyrie Eleison," and during the strains of this old and touching tune the diplomatic corps, headed by General Schweinitz, the German ambassador, made their entrance. As there was only a small box reserved for the diplomatic corps, only the chiefs of the different embassies and special missions, with their ladies, were present in the cathedral, while a special tribune was reserved for all other diplomatists outside the cathedral, where large crowds had likewise assembled, who warmly cheered all the arriving guests. Lord Thornton, Earl Clanwilliam, and Lord Wolseley of Cairo had, of course, their seats in the Cathedral. The entrance of the diplomatic corps offered a very gorgeous aspect, which was, however, by far surpassed by the procession of the Court and all the Royal guests. As soon as the drums of the guards outside the Cathedral were heard, the higher priests went with the ritualistic paraphernalia of welcome to the entrance door, in order to receive the young Caesarewitch, who headed the procession of the Imperial family. The young Crown Prince looked somewhat pale and nervous when he walked up the step to the altar, near which he had to take the most prominent part among the many celebrated princes from all parts of Europe. The eyes were almost blinded by the splendour of gold, pearls, diamonds, silk, velvet, and purple which glittered on the dresses of the Royal ladies, and it is almost impossible to remember and to describe the details of this more than dazzling sight. Besides, we had far too little time to take all the details well in, for again all the bells began to ring a most merry peal, and again the roll of drums was heard which announced the arrival of a new procession. The great peers of the Russian Empire entered now with the insignia and regalia, which had, up to this moment, been deposited in the famous hall of the order of St. Andrew, in the Imperial Palace, and where they had been guarded by high officials and by a military guard of honour. The glittering crowns of the Emperor and the Empress, the sceptre, the ball of empire, and the wonderfully embroidered mantles were all lying on cushions of purple velvet embroidered with gold. They were deposited upon a side table on the throne, while the bearers of the holy banner and sword took their places near the thrones of John III. and Michael Feodorowitch, which have served at all coronations since Peter the Great. Four officers of the Guards Cuirassiers, decidedly the tallest and most handsome men in the Russian army, stood at both sides of the throne as a guard of honour. After all these preparations were finished, and all the august guests were assembled, enthusiastic and loud cheers from the outside reached our ear. Again the priests on the altar left their places and went to the door in order to receive their Majesties, who were led to the altar by the Metropolitan of Nowgorod. After the Metropolitan had presented to them the cross and the holy water, the Emperor and Empress bowed thrice before the altar, kissed the sacred images, and ascended the steps of the altar, where they took their places before the throne. The Emperor wears the uniform of a Russian general, with the order and star of St. Andrew. His Majesty looks very serious, and seems deeply impressed by the importance of the moment. Perhaps he remembers the sad fate of his august father, whom Russia called "the Czar liberator," and who nevertheless found his death through the hands of murderers. What will his own fate be? Will this day turn out a blessing for him, the Russian Imperial house, and for the vast Empire, or will a similar fate be reserved to Alexander III. as to his father? The Empress looks pale and rather nervous, but her countenance bears the same amiable and kind look as ever. Her dress consists in a robe of drap d'argent, and is covered with precious stones, gems, and diamonds. But it is not the splendour and blaze of gold and silver which attracts our looks towards the august lady; the charming and simple manners of the Empress excite our sympathies, and remind us of her charming sister the Princess of Wales. The Metropolitan of Nowgorod approaches the Sovereign with the holy book, and the Emperor then begins with a sonorous voice amid the deep silence of the assembly to read aloud the holy creed. Then the Grand Dukes Wladimir and Alexis, the two brothers of the Czar, approach his Majesty in order to adorn him with the gorgeous mantle, which is presented to him on two cushions. The Emperor then bows before the Metropolitan, who makes the sign of the cross to him, and after this his Majesty receives from the hands of the old and venerable-looking priest the crown, which is almost covered with pearls and diamonds, and beneath its cross is fixed the big ruby which is so famous for its wonderfully flashing and sparkling light. The Emperor places the crown with his own hands on his head, takes the sceptre in the right and the ball of empire in the left hand, after which he takes his seat on the throne, while the Empress remains standing. After a few seconds the Czar rises and takes his crown off. The Empress then approaches her august husband, who takes his crown and places it for a moment upon the brow of the Empress, who kneels on a purple velvet cushion. After this a smaller crown is brought to the Emperor. It is likewise almost covered with precious stones, and adorned with a splendid sapphire. This crown the Emperor places on the Empress' head. Now the ladies in waiting bring the mantle of her Majesty and the collar of the order St. Andrew, and after the Emperor has invested his august consort with the insignia of this most famous Russian order, both Majesties embrace each other. The members of the Imperial family and all the foreign princes ascend at the same time the steps of the throne in order to congratulate and embrace their Majesties likewise, who after this take their seats on the throne, while the Metropolitan of Moscow reads out aloud all the titles of the Emperor of All the Russias.

Throughout all these ceremonies prayers were said and canticles sung by the clergy and a chorus of 300 voices. The tunes were very impressive, and the voices most wonderful indeed. But the most important and striking part of the ceremony was still to be performed, for the Czar had still to be made the "Lord's anointed." A carpet of crimson velvet, richly embroidered with gold en relief, was spread by masters of the ceremonies from the altar to the "Sanctuary," whither the Emperor and Empress had now to walk, headed by the peers of the Empire bearing the regalia, and the large suites. As soon as the Emperor had reached the door of the Sanctuary, the Metropolitan of Nowgorod, holding a silver bowl full of holy oil, in which a piece of Christ's Crown of Thorns has been immersed, took a golden palm-branch, and after having dipped it into the holy oil, touched with it the Czar's brow, his eyelids, ears, lips, and the palms of his hands, after which the attendants opened the Czar's vestments and the Metropolitan traced a cross on the skin of the bare chest with the oil, saying at the same time the "Veni Creator Spiritus." While this ceremony was taking place the cannons gave an "Imperial" salute, and the bells rang again. Now the Empress approached the Metropolitan, who traced with the holy oil a cross upon the brow of her Majesty. The sacrament of the holy communion was then given to their Majesties, and after they had performed their religious devotions the Emperor solemnly knelt down, and together with him the clergy and the whole assembly prostrated themselves. The chorus sang a glorious "Te Deum laudamus," another Imperial salute was given, the ringing of the bells was renewed, and the Lord's anointed was cheered by many thousands of people.

The coronation ceremonies in the Cathedral had lasted several hours, so that everybody felt very tired—all the more so as the sight of so much pomp is almost as fatiguing as the wearing of it must be. However, with the coronation and the anointment only one part of the ceremonies has been accomplished. The official programme was not yet exhausted. The Emperor and the Empress and all the Royal guests had to leave the Cathedral, and had to move in a stately procession to the famous Archangel Cathedral, where new religious duties had to be performed, and where orisons were to be said on the vaults of the old Czars. As soon as their Majesties left the Cathedral guns were again fired, the bells rang, and the voices of more than 50,000 people cheered the Czar, who had now become the true autocrat of all the Russias. The sun shone beautifully, and the glitter of gold and silver and the brilliant fire of the many precious stones was reflected a thousandfold during this procession through the courtyards of the Kremlin. How different and much less beautiful would the scene have been if at this moment, when the whole assembly appeared outside the church, it had begun to rain. Prince Woronzoff-Daschkoff, the grand master of all the coronation ceremonies, was certainly grateful to St. Peter that Queen's weather was also granted to Moscow on the day of the Czar's coronation. After the Emperor and Empress had prayed at the vaults of their august predecessors, and before the different holy icons, they left the Archangel Cathedral, and mounted the steps of the large open staircase leading to the Imperial Palace. As soon as they had reached the platform they turned their faces again to the crowd, which once more enthusiastically cheered the august couple.

Their Majesties were then allowed to retire for a very short time, while the diplomatic corps was entertained with a sumptuous luncheon, which was laid out for them in the Golden Chamber. At 3 o'clock the great coronation dinner took place, in the splendidly decorated Granovoaja Palata, where on a haut pas under a dais the Imperial table was placed, on which, however, were only laid two covers, at the right for the Emperor, at the left for the Empress. The table was guarded by the commander of the chevalier guards regiment, who had to stand with drawn sword between both Majesties, who were still in the full ornate of the coronation. As soon as the Emperor had given the order that the dinner should be served, the head-master of the coronation ceremonies and all other high attendants bowed before their Majesties and left the hall in order to bring and serve the dishes. The Emperor now handed the crown, the sceptre, and the ball of empire to the high dignitaries, and the Metropolitan of Moscow began to read the usual prayers. After the Emperor had received the first course and the first drink from the hands of the high dignitaries, he dismissed them, and they, as well as the members of the high clergy, took the seats which were reserved for them at the tables in the middle of the hall. The members of the Royal family and the other Royal guests had their dinner in a hall beside the Granovotaga Palata, while the members of the Diplomatic Corps had to be present in the latter hall until the Emperor had been served with soup and wine, after which they left the palace. For more than 300 generals and high officers a tent was erected on the Place of Wladimir and on the place before the Cathedral of the Redemption, while in another tent 600 high officials were entertained at dinner. At all these tables the health of the newly-crowned Imperial couple was duly proposed and drunk, amid the cheers of thousands of people, and under the thunder of an Imperial salute.

After the dinner was over their Majesties went from the dining hall, again in State procession, to the Hall of St. Andrew, where, under great ceremonies, the regalia was deposited; and then at last the Emperor and Empress retired.

During the whole day the streets and public places of Moscow had, of course, been crowded by thousands and thousands of true Russians, who kissed each other, crossed each other, and had only one and the same greeting for each other—"Long live the Czar."

The weather remained very fine, apart from a very slight shower of rain in the afternoon, whereby, however, the illumination of the city was not in the least influenced. As soon as it began to darken, the signal for the general lighting up was given, and as electric light was to be employed almost everywhere, it only took a few minutes to bring before our eyes, like by enchantment, pictures which reminded us of the tales of the Arabian nights. All the domes and belfries of the several hundred cathedrals and churches were lighted with Edison lamps, which showed us the outlines of the buildings in the most brilliant light, and it must be confessed that the impression of the beautiful buildings, which seemed to swim in a sea of light after having been in almost total darkness only a few seconds before, was perfectly marvellous—can, however, only be put into practice at a time and in a country where money need not be taken into consideration. More than two million pounds of electric wire were employed for illuminating only the churches of the Kremlin, and the quantity which was employed in the town itself appears even more fabulous. The dome-roof the Twan Velicki alone was lighted by 3500 electric lamps, and it is easy to understand how splendid the effect of this ocean of light was.

No pen is able to describe the wonderful picture of the holy city, with its hundred thousands of lights and lamps in all colours, and the impression was all the more picturesque as Moscow in its architecture is quite different from any other city we had seen before, representing a strange mixture of the Oriental and northern character. The crowds moved up and down the streets, the greatest merriment, the best humour reigning everywhere, and everybody seemed relieved that all the ceremonies had passed without any disturbance. Only early next morning the public places began to become a little emptier, and the old Russian capital scarcely went at all to rest that night. This day, however, had not yet exhausted the programme of the coronation festivities, which will, on the contrary, last till the 10th of June, when the Imperial family will return to St. Petersburg, and when the Royal guests will leave Russia. On the day after the coronation their Majesties had to receive all the deputations from the many Russian cities and provinces, each of them presenting valuable golden and silver plates with bread and salt. They were all warmly addressed by the Emperor, who expressed special thanks to every deputation. Every night a State ball or a gala performance at the Imperial Theatre took place, while the illumination was repeated in the same grand style for three successive nights. Among the festivities which are still to follow, the most conspicuous will certainly be the grand fete which is to be given to the population in the vast grounds round the Petrowsky Palace. Preparations have been made for providing more than 300,000 people with food and drink, and to amuse them with all kinds of games and spectacles. The neugiks have, of course, come from near and far for these festivities, and it is to be expected that this part of the programme will be the best remembered amongst the population of Russia.

The coronation festivities have so far proved a complete success, and the Emperor can certainly look back upon them with great satisfaction. But it is still to be doubted whether the hopes will be realised which the Russian Government and people had attached to these glorious days. Emperor Alexander has published, on account of the coronation day, a long manifesto to the Russian people, in which he has granted many benefices to the poorer classes, and to all those who have been condemned to lighter punishments for different kinds of crimes. The manifesto, however, contained nothing about a pardon for political criminals, and no paragraphs about reforms in the public administration of Russia. The manifesto has therefore created a good deal of general disappointment, not only in Russia, but also abroad. It must, however, be remembered that the position of the Czar was a very precarious one with regard to this matter, and that the large masses of the Russian people are as yet by no means advanced enough in civilisation for political institutions like those of Western Europe. The Russian Czars will for a long time to come have to remain autocrats. It will be long before they will be able to grant constitutional liberties to their people, which consists of so many different races and elements. Emperor Alexander III. has, however, expressed in a letter addressed to Baron Giers, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, his intention to inaugurate a policy of peace, and to maintain good relations with foreign countries as much as possible. This statement has everywhere been received with the greatest satisfaction, and it is therefore to be hoped that the pompous and glorious festivities at Moscow which we had the opportunity to witness will mark the beginning of a happy era not only for the welfare and benefit of Russia but also for the rest of Europe.

MODERN BLUE-JACKETS AND THEIR OFFICERS.

(From the Pall Mall Gazette.)

What may be called the theatrical, or at all events the transpontine theatrical, conception of the British blue-jacket still prevails among large numbers of Englishmen and still larger numbers of Englishwomen. The good-natured busy-bodies who, having plenty of spare time on hand, think that they can best employ it by looking after the religious exercises and private morals of others, like to hold the belief that the "man-of-war's-man" of to-day is just as was his predecessor of half a century back. They see, and would have others see, in every man clad in navy blue cloth and serge a jolly fellow ignorant of the ways of the world, addicted to drink, a squanderer of hard-earned pay on Bet or Sue of "Point" or "Common Hard," with only such theological convictions as are displayed by an exceptional grotesqueness of imprecation and a dislike to putting to sea on Fridays. As some idle people become amateurs of art and some of literature, while others take to sport or to foreign travel, so do many kindly enthusiasts, comfortably satisfied of their own perfection, come forward as amateurs in religion or morals to instruct and reform the sailors of the navy. With this object societies in aid of seamen's missions, of total abstinence afloat, and the like, are started, and subscriptions demanded with suitable persistence. It is a pity that these good people should be unaware that they are nearly a generation behind time. The picture which they are fond of drawing is no more like the blue-jacket of to-day than are such portraits as Squire Western or Commodore Trunnion accurate likenesses of contemporary country gentlemen and naval officers. To begin with, a large and increasing proportion of those who wear the recognised costume of men-o'-war's-men is composed of men not sailors even in name, but stokers, blacksmiths, carpenters, and other respectable artisans who have been attracted by the prospect of certain pay, and of a good pension at 40 or earlier, to follow their trade in the navy instead of on shore. Then, too, of the full-grown men of the fleet many, the great majority perhaps, are married, and are known to be in general exemplary husbands and fathers. Even out of Laputa there are persons so intent upon discovering failings among those whose lives are passed far from them that they are blind to the vice and misery in their immediate neighbourhood. No doubt it would take a long time to persuade them that the British tar is not now such as they love to think him.

If the common conception of this person is erroneous, the popular estimate of his officers is equally at fault. Likely enough, the ordinary landsman has no particular ideas on the subject of naval officers. If he ever thinks of them, he probably dismisses them with a careless non ragionam di lor, and passes on to some more interesting subject. Though no opinion is more generally professed among us than that the efficiency of the navy is essential to the security of the country, there is no branch of the public service concerning the internal condition of which so little is known. The persuasion that the captain of a man-of-war is a peremptory despot, given to "mast-heading" his midshipmen and flogging his sailors, probably lingers no longer even in the minds of the elderly ladies who subscribe to induce blue-jackets to go without grog. Still, there are many otherwise well-informed people who suppose that a naval officer at his best is nothing more than a brave man with a knowledge of seamanship. In reality, an efficient officer was always more than this; and now he must be a good deal more. The progress that is manifest in all professions has been simply prodigious in the navy, and officers have had to keep themselves abreast of the times.

It has often been pointed out that to be a seaman is as necessary for an officer as ever it was, though the seamanship of to-day may differ in some points from that of Nelson's time. No man can now be a perfect seaman unless he have some knowledge of the management of steamers. Physical geography of the sea is hardly a generation old, and of this science no one likely to be entrusted with the command of a ship of war can remain ignorant. Modern meteorology is even younger; but it would be difficult to find even a sub-lieutenant knowing nothing of its laws. A practical knowledge of nautical astronomy and of the use of that delicate instrument the chronometer must be credited to every officer capable of holding the rank of lieutenant afloat. Few landsmen can be aware of the immense change wrought in the position of the well-known and apparently simple mariner's compass by the general introduction of iron and steel into the building and equipment of modern vessels. To make a useful servant and real guide of the compass some acquaintance with terrestrial magnetism is essential. In all these matters instruction is necessary to officers of the merchant service as much as to their brother seamen of the Royal Navy; but efficiency in the latter demands many other acquirements. As regards the armament of ships, naval officers have to be competent artillerists. In knowledge of gunnery the officers of the British fleet are not surpassed by any in the world, even by those whose occupation begins and ends with the use of guns. They distinctly give the law in this, as in most other matters connected with their profession, to the navy of every foreign State. The Excellent—our great gunnery school—is the model for similar institutions throughout the maritime world. The Royal Engineers form a separate branch of the army with a sphere of its own; and of the Engineers a particular section, and a particular section only, is charged with conducting the operations of submarine warfare. In the navy, training in the use of torpedoes of all kinds, even of those not handled by the Royal Engineers, is obligatory on all officers. Yet in numberless instances captains and others go from the gunnery school or from the torpedo school straight to the command of ships, which they conduct throughout every sea with a confidence and success that can leave no doubt of their efficiency as seamen and leaders of men. The acquirements that a naval officer is expected to possess by no means end here. While commanding a ship he is sure, sooner or later, to find himself the official representative of his country, often with the responsibility upon him of determining as to the course of action which may have very far-reaching consequences. The question of peace or war with enemies quite as formidable as those with whom we have thought it creditable to fight of late years not rarely depends upon his decision. More often than is pleasant he has so to handle affairs which he is called upon to deal with that the susceptibilities of foreigners, or the still more tender susceptibilities of our envoys or consuls or of colonial officials, are not offended. For the sanitary state of his crew, in the monetary accounts of his ship, and for the expenditure of her stores to the minutest particular, he has a real responsibility, which would be certainly brought home to him if he overlooked any neglect on the part of any of the officers specially charged with attending to them. It may be asserted with perfect truth that scarcely a month passes without our naval officers amongst them being required to perform all the duties indicated in the above outline of their professional employments, and that few men can pass through a period of command—even before reaching the yet more responsible and difficult position of admiral—without having had to carry out nearly the whole of them. Of course mistakes are sometimes made in a navy nearly equal numerically to those of all the other great powers put together. But it will be generally acknowledged that in spite of the multitude of demands made, and the heavy responsibilities resting upon individual officers, important errors are wonderfully few.

MR. JOHN BRIGHT, M.P., ON THE DECEASED WIFE'S SISTER BILL.—The announcement that Mr. John Bright, M.P., was about to marry for the third time, and that the lady to whom he was to be united was the sister of his first wife, has again attracted attention to the conflicting nature of the marriage laws in the colonies and the United Kingdom. Mr. Bright, in a speech delivered at the Metropolitan Tabernacle on May 2, apropos of the attitude of the bishops and clergy of the Established Church in regard to the Deceased Wife's Sister Bill, asserted that "a handful of ecclesiastics . . . . . condemn thousands of families to unhappiness during their lifetime, and condemn thousands of children who are wholly guiltless, as I believe their parents are guiltless." The Rev. A. R. Tucker, of Clifton, requested an explanation of the words italicised, which Mr. Bright supplied in the following terms:—"I spoke of those who are married, but whose marriage is by the existing law not legal in this country. These marriages are legal in Canada and in the Australian colonies, and hence a man may have a legal wife in the colonies, and another legal wife in England. He may bring his Canadian legal wife to England, where, when she touches our shores, she is not a legal wife, and where her children born here are not legitimate. If you can justify this, I will not argue with you. Excuse me, if I do not discuss the main question with you. It is asserted, I believe truly, that the Queen is in favour of the change of law. It is known that the Prince of Wales is so. In the Lords I learn there is a majority in favour of the change; last year the bishops prevented it. In the Commons a majority of 150 or more support the change. When it becomes law your Church, bishops, and clergy will have to support it, which I doubt not they will do without much difficulty. I only regret they do not see the light before it is forced upon them. When I speak of a handful of ecclesiastics, I refer to the members of convocation who have been discussing this question." The report of Mr. Bright's intended marriage has been since denied.

HEARTFELT THANKS.—"I thank you from the bottom of my heart," writes an old gentleman cured of Salt Rheum by the Cuticura Resolvent (blood purifier) internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap (the great skin cures) externally. "I feel that the few days that remain to me may now be days of happiness, made so by your great medicines."—[ADVT.]

NEW ZEALAND NOTES.

By J. H.

XIV.—THE SOUTHERN CAPITAL.

Twelve years tell their tale alike upon cities as upon citizens. Yet we cannot but think of both places and persons as remaining what they were when we last saw them. Even after 24 years of absence from my native village of London I could not but think of all there as being much as I left it. The disappointing fact was that instead, and in truth, I found that when there I knew no one, and none knew me. I am thinking of Dunedin in a similar way when about to repeat there in this '83 the visit that I made to it so long back as '71. To see better its landward approaches, I go longest way round to it—landing at that southernmost headland of the south island called The Bluff. The sea voyage is so made a day longer, though the sea and myself were never very friendly, notwithstanding our frequently renewed acquaintanceship. But I want to see Southland, and to such good end the little evil of that "sea sorrow" of which Shakespeare speaks, is scarcely countable as obstacle.

The Bluff has a wintry look about it to an Australian, for though "in the prime of summer time," the weather awaiting me is both cold and wet. So much so that I have to seek for a waterproof overcoat at one of the stores, and to purchase another umbrella—the third that I have had to buy in two months, so necessary are such things in New Zealand, and so often are they lost. A steamer has come in from Melbourne this morning, via Hobart, and many of her passengers are apparently like minded with myself as to going overland. They could go round by their steamer and be landed at Port Chalmers at about the same time that the train going hence will run them into Dunedin. They think, however, with myself, that there is more to be seen by land than by sea and that the land is more friendly to man. Also they are, or most of them, not on business bent but tourists only. The reason whereof is that the Union Steamship Company of New Zealand is about giving the annually given special excursion from Dunedin to the West Coast Sounds.

This novel and attractive trip to the Sounds becomes yearly more popular and, alike to the tourist, artist, naturalist, and geologist, has special attractions. To the mere holiday-maker, in search of a change of scene and air for a month, the world has scarcely a better thing in that way to offer. Hence it is that the incoming steamer has brought a large and varied assortment of humanity hailing from all parts of the world. Knights are among them, and professors many, as also some travellers of note, with lawyers, clergymen, and doctors in goodly numbers. As one who is bound on the same errand I gladly see what a stocktaking there will be when on the voyage for those who make a study of character finding "their books," not only in "woman's looks," but also in men and manners.

There is but just time for a hurried breakfast at the Bluff before the train starts thence, at 8 a.m., on the overland trip. Our vessel lies outside of that other arrival here, over the deck of which I have to cross. In that way I am mixed up with those who have to pass their baggage through the Custom-house ordeal. I am late, and nearly last, and have not a minute to lose, if I will not lose the whole day that would be lost by losing this outgoing train. Having but a light bag with me, there is nothing for me but to "run the blockade" of the Customs officials, to whose loud calls I give no heed. It was either that or losing the train, and I had that clear conscience of "nothing to declare," which fortifies those who do, as I was doing, that which is right in their own eyes. The officials had, seemingly, similar thoughts about it, for no chase was given to me on this run of mine to the railway station.

An hour's ride upon the rails brings one to Invercargill—an inland town of large extent, and but as yet partly built. Here, on a plain as level as a pancake, are laid out long streets, at right angles, running far away as the eye can see, and finishing everywhere in the fields. Large gaps occur between the houses that are, however, springing up rapidly. Invercargill is, in this way, something like that rising town of Omaha, which the traveller across the American continent stays at for awhile by the way. What supports the existence of Invercargill and its population I have but too little time to inquire. I shall probably see something of it in that day's journey of 10 hours which I have yet to take across the length of Southland.

Invercargill, even to those who have shortest time to spend in it, affords, however, evidence enough that it both has been and is a prosperous place. There is a look about it that convinces one that it will be yet a prospering one, and that those who secured land here a long time back made a good investment. Building lots have been cut up everywhere out of what was probably once sold by the block of many acres as suburban land. It is to these outlying places that the long streets seem to run, and here villa and cottage dwellings are building and likely to be built by those who cannot make easy terms for town lots. There are all the elements, save a waterside situation, at Invercargill that promise in the future a busy inland city. Banks and insurance offices seem in their many established branches here to have taken that view of the matter equally with the merchants. The population has a strong infusion of Scottish elements.

The wind has lulled and the rain is done, when the train again starts on its longer journey. A bright blue sky, a warm sun, and a refreshing air lend their charms to the scene and promise a pleasant day. That scene is one of green fields, backed in the distance or near at hand with low and grass-covered hills that are outlying on either side. Southland, as here seen, is one expanse of well-grassed downs, picked out with cheerful-looking homesteads. These and the prospects of grazing cattle and ever-nibbling sheep are subjects for the traveller's contemplation and envy for the whole length of the ride. The outskirting hills are all treeless, it is true, but cattle and horses on their sides and summits well supply such want of the picturesque. The pastoral interest would seem here to be in a paradise, so well grassed is the land, and so free from all apparent drawbacks to grazing, and to sheep and wool growing.

Southland, as a squatters' country, is not to be beaten anywhere. As a squatting run it looks as strange to Australian eyes that some leviathan of a squatter did not, in the years gone by, somehow appropriate such a prize as this tract of country all to himself. On a journey from Melbourne to Sandhurst the rail goes for some two hours or more of time through land nothing like so well grassed as is this, and all the purchased property of one proprietor. As it is, no such ill luck has happened here, and one sees instead, with gratified mind, a proper division of the land into wayside villages and happy-looking homes of well-doing farmers. To these the land is as great or greater blessing than to the grazier, for no soil yields larger crops than these pleasant-looking fields of Southland.

I forget the large number of bushels per acre that the farmers report as the yield of this prolific soil. I should be afraid almost to quote it, did I exactly recall it, so great did the figure seem. The price of the land, however, was plainly enough stated as being per acre from £15 to £25.

Shakespeare bids us report of "rare, noteworthy objects seen in travel," and in this spirit let me note something seen of humanity within the train in which I travel. The readiest witted woman I ever met with turns up here as a fellow passenger. She is young and pretty also, which doubly interests one in her smart sayings. Seemingly she is of the half-caste, and her wit, which I often hear, is wholly a mother one. A fellow passenger is showing her a Japanese ring, and explaining that the two figures on it indicate the two sounds heard in his name. He evidently knows hers when he says, "Your name being of one syllable and a simple sound, would be easily expressed in this language, where signs stand for sounds." "Yes, it may be easily written," she says, "but I find it such a difficult one to change." At a wayside station she is vexed with one, to whom she speaks at the carriage window, who does not remember her as vividly as she evidently does him. "You have the advantage of me," is the commonplace remark with which he answers her greeting. "Yes, and so has everybody who has common sense," was her ready and tart reply hurled at him, as the train moved onwards. It is vexatious, no doubt, to young ladies to find their faces forgotten, but the punishment of that reply would have sufficed for something worse.

Quite a Benedick and Beatrice encounter of wit occurs again at our next stage, where a stay is made for luncheon. Our Beatrice there meets with a cousin who is in Volunteer uniform, and is in holiday mood, carrying a rose between his lips. To him I hear Beatrice banteringly say, "When did flowers take to grow from your lips?" His reply was the vivacious one of "Ever since they touched yours." Her answer to that is ready, and given with a twinkling eye, "That must be a long time ago, and I never remember disagreeable things." Benedick, not taken aback, is quick with the rejoinder, "Yes, it was some time ago, and when you had good sense." Her ready repartee capped it when she replied, "Ah, I've got better taste now; and the best is yet to come, and for somebody that's not you." The laugh that followed this had not subsided as I passed on out of further hearing.

It is as well watered as grassed, this fine country that we are crossing—rivers, rivulets, creeks, and lakes being every now and again passed on the way. Chief of such streams appears to be the Clutha, which in earlier days was, I believe, better known by its other name of the Molyneux River. This river gives its name to the township of Balclutha, at which we stay for a twenty minutes' lunch. It is a clean-looking and well-built little place for what there is of it, as indeed have been all the other little townships which we have passed. It tells well, I suppose, for the appetising nature of the air that I shall remember for long, with watering mouth, the keen relish with which this dinner was eaten. Here and there about the world one picks up an extra good appetite, or else it must be that what is eaten at such places is of a more than usually good sort. Whether it be that the beef and mutton of this locality are, as very likely they would be, superlatively good, I will not say; but I shall stay at Balclutha of a certainty for a second dinner when next the opportunity occurs.

So delighting to the eyes are the scenes from the carriage windows that the passengers neglect the reading of the newspapers eagerly bought at Invercargill, as also those brought to them at some of the wayside stations. To look about one, and to ask questions and exchange opinions on what is seen, seems a quite sufficient occupation. I do not recall another ten hours' ride in which I did not occupy fully one-half of it in reading. But this trip has been passed otherwise, and the time must have been pleasantly spent, because that it seems as short indeed when the train runs unexpectedly with me into the station at Dunedin. Let no traveller in New Zealand miss taking this pleasant ride over Southland on landing at the Bluff—unless it is a certainty with him that he can take it on his way back from Dunedin.

The Free Church of Scotland selected well, indeed, when choosing the site of Dunedin for a city. They did well also in selecting as a name for this new Edinburgh the ancient name of the picturesque capital of their native country. But 35 years back the little village, that is now a city covering nearly 900 acres, numbered but 300 of population: it now has 30,000. The one or two straggling roadways of that time are represented by no less than 91 streets of goodly width, though, as to some of them of awful steepness. It is well that the visitor finds these very sloping footways asphalted, and so not of a slippery nature. Were the paving of granite I am not sure that I could always have kept my feet upon it coming downwards. To the eyes of one who, like Ulysses, has seen many cities, this new Edinburgh stands almost second to none for the picturesque character of its position. The capital of Scotland has a fame all its own in this respect, but it is lacking in the fine water views that the eye lights with such pleasure upon around Dunedin. Its harbour is a shallow tidal stream, but of goodly width, and runs up for 14 miles between grandest-looking cliffs.

Dunedin is indeed, altogether a pleasant surprise to the visitor, wheresoe'er he may hail from. The surprise comes in various ways, the picturesque situation it occupies being of course first among them. Next comes the consideration of the astonishing strides it has made in its progress since that eventful 1862 when Australia poured into it, in one year, 11,000 of her enterprising people. Ireland takes a malicious pride in iterating that her emigrants peopled Scotland, and, following suit, Australians may, in like manner, and more truthfully, claim similar honours for their people as supplying most of New Zealand's population. Whatever may have been the inducement with the ancient Irish to settle in Scotland, there is no mystery about it that it was for gold-mining and its attendant wants that Australians came here. It is no wonder, however, that so many of them stayed. The climate is cool and invigorating, and the land but lightly timbered on this, its eastern, coast. Tired with their mining work beneath its surface, there was inducement enough to stay and cultivate that upper crust of it of which Southland shows so fine a sample.

Princess-street Dunedin is a finer street and a longer one than its namesake of Edinburgh. It is built upon on both sides also, and is not the mere terrace that the Scottish one represents. It is questionable whether any street in the southern hemisphere will in a few years' time be found to equal this magnificent thoroughfare, which, with a needless change of name to George-street for one part of it, is of nearly three miles in length in an almost straight line. During the 12 years of my absence from the city it has seemingly doubled in size, and added to it many suburbs. To get to these, and to the end of its long streets, and to the tops of the hills, up which the cross streets run, Dunedin has established tramways. No less than three companies are working these aids to locomotion, and in three different ways. Two of them, the Mornington Company being the first to do so, adopt the cable form of draught, following in that matter the example of San Francisco. In respect to its hilly side streets, before told of, Dunedin is like California's capital, and so needs similar means of mounting hills to which horse power would be unequal. Adown Princess-street, and the long streets parallel to it, the tramcars are drawn by horse or motor power; but the latter form of draught is not in general favour here any more than it is at Sydney.

There is no question that the tramways seen in Dunedin, Christchurch, and Wellington have done much to help to the settling of those cities and their suburbs. Auckland, which is without tramways, seems dull and slow-going when compared with its sister cities. The omnibus is not, however, without its opportunities in Dunedin. By its aid I am taken at the foot of the cliffs, a pleasant drive of 10 miles or so, to Portobello. On an eminence here I find what I may call Larnach Castle, as denominating both the name of the owner and the style of the building. This castellated and costly erection, however, modestly is called "The Camp," and stands on the most romantic of situations. Placed high upon a cliffy headland, its windows look to every point of the compass, and the views all around are simply enchanting. To visit this pet place—built as a country residence at a cost of some forty thousand pounds—is the excursion, above all others, that the visitor to Dunedin is forbidden to neglect. To walk or drive back from Portobello on the Cliff-road is a splendid change from the ride to it along the Strand, the omnibuses on which look from the heights above as but tiny things. Mr. Larnach's princely mansion is made a showplace to visitors, and as such is almost as much or more of an attraction as the other beauties of the scene to be enjoyed by the Portobello Cliff-road.

The visitor to Dunedin from Australia will find his walks about the city much interrupted by the friendly greetings of old acquaintances—settlers here, or visitors like himself. If he thought to be unknown in New Zealand, his error in that thought will soon be rectified, and each day will show him how well his features have been held in remembrance. The hospitality offered will likely keep one here for some time if advantage could be taken of it. The only trespass I make upon it is to get shown around the city and taken to its most notable suburbs. It is in that way that I get taken on a rival ride to the Portobello one, and in the opposite direction. This drive is also of some 10 miles or so in length along the cliffs to an outlying suburb curiously called Blueskin, a name to most people redolent only of Jack Sheppard remembrances. This excursion, like of that of the day before, shows the city and its surroundings in all aspects, and each of them picturesque. The windings of the bay leading up from the port to the city are pleasantly conspicuous from Junction-hill here, as are also the little side settlements wherever the cliffs afford level land enough for villas and gardens. The city itself, as a headpiece to it all, is seen here far below in the distance, as also is that little toy-looking thing—the train—at the foot of the cliff, making its way onward from the port.

The "City Belt" is another of the sights of Dunedin that a kindly volunteer will insist on giving best part of a day to assist me in seeing. It is worth all the trouble, and would be doubly more so could more time be given to it. The bush about some parts of this Belt is very umbrageous and pretty, the fuchsia plant that here grows wild helping much to the latter aspect. The Belt proves to be a nicely-made road on the high ground about the city, and (divided into about four afternoon walks) nothing could well be better to show Dunedin's suburbs at a near-to-hand view of them.

It is with difficulty that a visitor to Dunedin can come to believe that all he sees is but the growth of some thirty-five years only. The University and other public buildings, and the grand exterior that the many banks and insurance offices display, seem indicative of a city at least a century old. The offices of the daily newspapers are in the American style, altogether in the way of showy buildings. Law offices are here represented in one way that puzzles the visitor who has seen only the dingy rooms and pigeon-holed chambers in which legal practitioners elsewhere house themselves. In the busiest part of the leading street of the city I come upon a building, bank-like both in exterior and interior form. Entering between polished stone pillars, over a tessalated passage-flooring, I push aside folding doors of elegantly figured glass, and am then in a marble-floored and bank-looking rotunda, having an elaborately constructed dome of various coloured glass. Polished rosewood fittings are all around, at the desks of which clerks are sitting. By a staircase, as tastefully constructed as is everything else here, I mount to a circular gallery overlooking the chamber below. Around this are the rooms of other clerks, each having its occupant's name displayed on the exterior in lettering of coloured glass. Outside each door are chairs, lounges, tables, and newspapers to help pleasantly to pass the time of those who may have to wait. The client so waiting, and looking around, will have time to see how much in the way of luxury can be done by lawyers who have taste thus to expend money. Nowhere else in the world can be seen such a lawyer's office as this, though it is questionable if it be not calculated to frighten some clients.

The legal professions are amalgamated in New Zealand—barrister and attorney being here the "two single gentlemen rolled into one." To my inquiries, as an Australian, I learn that such combination is not altogether found to work well. My principal informant on the matter is a solicitor who has been for years in partnership with a barrister, who jointly occupy the office on which their names appear. He tells me that the professions so united nevertheless divide themselves quite as naturally here as they do where divided by etiquette and custom. The barrister member of the firm is mostly away attending court, and often up country for a week at a time. He is so little at the office that clients never ask for him, and briefs of the cases for trial or hearing have to be left on his table as they would be at his chambers elsewhere. The fees paid to him are charged in the bills against the client much the same as they would be if such counsel were not a member of the firm. "It comes to just the same in the end" is thus the summing-up of the matter. He with whom I speak has been in practice in Australian cities, and as so had adequate experience of both systems. As I get similar opinions from others with whom I talk on the subject, my thoughts upon it change with these lessons of their experience, and I see that in such matter innovations are not always improvements.

Half a day's ramble, assisted by that best of guides, a volunteer friend, is given now to an excursion up the valley of the Leith. To that end we go by tramcar adown Princess-street and its continuation to the Botanical Gardens, looking in at the Museum by the way. The inspection of the gardens finished, we cross rustic bridges from side to side over the rumbling and shallow mountain stream to which the early Scotch settlers—"old identities," as they are called—gave the name of Edinburgh's river when giving to Dunedin the ancient name of Scotland's capital. It is a pretty excursion along the banks of this Water of Leith, the sides of which have been selected as sites for many pretty villas and humbler cottages. Not all of the water of this stream is allowed, however, to run for picturesque purposes only. A paper mill, among other industries, is established at one part of it, and some of the native grasses have been worked into a pulp that I see afterwards as stout and strong wrapping papers.

Compliments to Australia are seen in many of the fashions adopted, and especially in that of introducing the blue-gum as an ornamental tree in reserves and gardens about Dunedin. In legal matters the Australian system of land transfer has also been adopted here. Dunedin altogether has much of a Melbourne aspect about it, as Auckland has of a Sydney one—due, probably, to the settlers of each place coming mainly from one or the other of those Australian capitals. The climate of Auckland seems in like way imported, being much that of Sydney, while that of Dunedin is altogether different, and in its coldness, windiness, and wet, is more Melbourne-like in character. In this summer time I find myself never going abroad unprovided with overcoat or umbrella, and generally in need of such aid some time of the day or night. That the townspeople of Dunedin are easier-going than those of the Australian capitals named is seen in many things. To mention but one only, that of the General Post Office may be cited, closing as early as five in the afternoon. The theatres, two in number, are supplemented as places of amusement by several halls. The pieces and the players were both of those which I had seen in Sydney and Melbourne, and were here on circuit only.

The hour has come, however, for leaving further exploration about Dunedin to another time. The new steamer, the Tarawera, finest of the company's fleet, waits at the port on its start for a special visit—the one only of a year—to the West Coast Sounds. It is only by forethought and a little favour that I am numbered among her crowd of passengers. The forethought lay in a telegram sent by me to the manager from Auckland many days back. The favour lay in the courtesy shown to the arguments urged on such manager's attention. He had been, he said, forced to refuse many applicants already, but mainly those who required better accommodation than a single-handed and carpet-bag traveller like myself was gladly willing to take. Where there's a will there is said to be a way, and I had not come all the way round from Australia to be disappointed of this grand sight of the Sounds. Had all legitimate means failed, I had determined to again "run the blockade," and go as a stowaway, the good end in view quite justifying such means. Extreme measures proved, however, to be unnecessary, as some 'tween deck accommodation had been improvised by the ship carpenter, which sufficed very well indeed for the 10 days for which it would be wanted.

THE APPRECIATION OF GOLD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In turning over the reports of the debates in Parliament on the Inscription of Stock Bill I was somewhat astonished at the statement put forward by Mr. Stewart to the following effect:—"It was obvious to most people that the price of money was not rising, but was going down all over the world, and in this country the fact had become recognised. Our resources enabled us to pay as certainly as England could, and we were exempt from various causes which affected securities there. The probabilities were that in five or 10 or 20 years we would be able to borrow money at less than 4 per cent. per annum, and if we bound ourselves now to pay 4 per cent. we would be unable to take advantage of that reduction in value."

In the files of English journals recently to hand appears a synopsis of an address delivered by Mr. Goschen, M.P., a recognised financial authority at home, I believe, delivered before the Institute of Bankers. It will be noticed that he differs somewhat from Mr. Stewart, for he said,—"He did not think any of them would be ignorant of the fact of the withdrawal of an immense amount of gold, which, according to the ordinary rules of trade, would have passed into the currencies of gold-using countries; that an enormous amount of that sum had been used for what he might call a practically new purpose—viz., for supplying the currency of Germany, Italy, and the United States. If they took the amount of gold currency which had been absorbed within the last 10 years by those three countries they would arrive at the stupendous sum of about £200,000,000, which had been applied to purposes for which 10 or 14 years ago it would not have been necessary so to apply it. There had been a falling off in the annual supply of gold. They had had an extraordinary demand of £200,000,000 coming upon £20,000,000 sterling. It was estimated by an eminent authority that the amount of gold used annually in the arts and manufactures was £10,000,000, of which £5,000,000 was used in the United Kingdom alone. Deducting this, there was left an annual supply of gold for circulation of £10,000,000 only, and in that case the extraordinary demand for the £200,000,000 would absorb the production, not of 10 but of 20 years. Such phenomena as he had mentioned must, he contended, be followed by a great fall in the prices of commodities generally; and he quoted statistics showing that this had been so. They might run through most of the great articles of consumption and they would find that we had them cheaper now than we had 10 years ago, and he maintained that as the purchasing power of gold increased the wages of labour ought to fall, and he doubted whether they were quite so high now as they were during the highest time."

It seems that Mr. R. Giffen, of the Board of Trade, who followed Mr. Goschen, expressed his belief that the previous speaker was quite justified in assuming that the sovereign went a great deal further now than it did before, and that there was permanent appreciation in its value.

As it occurs to me that the foregoing extracts may be interesting, I ask you to publish them.

Yours, &c., THOS. MOSER.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

We have received a copy of St. James's Gazette to June 5, from which the following items of European news are extracted:—

FRANCE AND CHINA.

Paris, June 5.—A despatch from Moscow received here states that the Chinese Ambassador, in an interview with the correspondent of a Paris paper, declared that diplomatic relations between France and China had not yet been broken off, but would certainly cease if France operated in Tong-kin without previously coming to an understanding with the Chinese Government—seeing that Tong-kin was a dependency of Annam, and that the latter state was incontestably under the suzerainty of China. The Marquess Tseng is further represented to have expressed doubts regarding the success of M. Tricou's mission to Pekin, inasmuch as that diplomatist would offer even less than the Bourée treaty, which China regarded as unacceptable. It was possible that China would not take immediate action; but the situation would become dangerous, since there existed in China a war party which might compromise the Government. China had decided to recognise the treaty of 1862 concerning Cochin China, and even the treaty of 1874 provided that France intervened solely at the request of the King of Annam, and that the treaty should not be regarded as excluding China's suzerainty over Annam. The despatch adds that the Marquess Tseng expressed his belief that China would consent to open Yunnan to French trade. As regards the French operations in Tong-kin, his Excellency declared that even without Chinese intervention France would have to make sacrifices tenfold greater than she seemed to anticipate. In conclusion, it is stated that the ambassador was desirous of a pacific understanding between France and China, and did not appear to doubt the final success of France in Tong-kin, though considering an agreement between France and China as in the interest of both countries.

THE CHANNEL TUNNEL COMMITTEE.

The Joint Committee of the Houses of Lords and Commons resumed the inquiry into the Channel Tunnel on June 5, Lord Lansdowne presiding. Sir Andrew Clark, Inspector-General of Fortifications, was examined. He said that he thought the precautions suggested by the scientific committee would reduce the danger of invasion by means of the tunnel to a minimum. There were other means, too, of destroying the tunnel than those proposed by the Scientific Committee. In his opinion the risk of invasion was far more than counterbalanced by the advantages to our commercial interests that would be given by the tunnel. But whether there were a Channel Tunnel or not, he should always like to see a force of about 6000 men at Dover with other forces at adjacent points, so that the Dover force might be strengthened at any moment. Of course the defensive works ought to be completed before the tunnel was opened. He thought that all the arrangements for the working of the tunnel should be in the hands of the Tunnel Company; but of course all the defensive arrangements should be under the control of an independent organization.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL COMPANY.

The half-yearly meeting of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company was held on June 5, at the offices, Leadenhall-street. Mr. Thomas Sutherland, the chairman, moved the adoption of the report, which showed that the company had a fleet of 46 ships, four in course of building, and 22 steam-tugs and launches. The 46 ships had a registered tonnage of 153,897, and a nominal horse-power of 27,400. He said that the report, if it did not exhibit any unwonted signs of prosperity, proved that the business was still being conducted with soundness and efficiency. The traffic receipts from passengers showed a steady growth. Until quite recently very few persons travelled in the company's ships except for business or necessity; but the company were offering facilities by means of cheap return tickets to induce persons to travel for pleasure; and he believed that soon they would have passengers travelling for health and pleasure. The receipts from freights were slightly less than in the corresponding period of 1882. The days of transhipment of cargo and passengers were over and they must be carried direct to China and Australia. Referring to the Suez Canal, he said that it was at present thoroughly inadequate to the enormous trade which passed through it. That condition of things had been for some time past exceedingly detrimental to British shipping in general. When vessels occupied about 36 instead of 24 hours to take a journey of about 90 miles, and had to pay very heavily for the privilege, that exceedingly handicapped the strictly commercial as well as the shipping interest. In the case of the Peninsular and Oriental Company the inconvenience had developed into a serious damage, for they had only a limited time to spend in the Suez Canal, and were compelled to start their steamers upon an inconvenient day so as to give a margin of another 24 hours. As the Peninsular and Oriental Company passed through the Canal a large tonnage approaching to 750,000 tons in the course of the year, and as they paid the company £200,000 in the shape of dues, they were by no means satisfied to suffer loss and inconvenience in the manner they were now doing. The report was adopted.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

A meeting of the shareholders of the Suez Canal Company was held in Paris on June 4, M. Ferdinand de Lesseps being in the chair. Sir Rivers Wilson, Sir John Stokes, and Mr. Standen, the English directors, were present. M. de Lesseps read the report, which after giving details of the revenue and expenditure of the company for the past year went on to treat of the question of the formation of a second canal. It is stated that, contrary to all that had been said in Paris and London, the most complete accord had been maintained without intermission between the Suez Canal Company and the British Government represented by the three English administrators, who had approved the report and had attended all the sittings of the council of directors. The improvements which were being carried out at the present time in the canal would cost 30,000,000 francs, and would suffice for a traffic of 10,000,000 tons; but for the future it behoved the company to consider the creation of a second canal. A year ago the company had decided upon undertaking on its own account, and with the greatest possible speed, the construction of a double maritime route. The work could be accomplished within the limits of the land belonging to the company; but the formation of this double waterway could be carried out in the interest of commerce much more rapidly and conveniently, notably in the ports, if the company obtained fresh concessions of land from the Egyptian Government. The pourparlers which had been entered into between the company and the English Government with this object in view were in excellent train, and promised a favourable issue. When the proper time arrived proposals would be laid before the shareholders at a special meeting, when it would remain for them to examine the best means of putting them into execution. All plans would be closely studied, and when the special committee had pronounced their opinion it would be expedient to consider the financial side of the question. The report, which recommended a dividend of 56.22, was unanimously approved, and the meeting before separating adopted a vote of thanks to M. de Lesseps.

IRELAND.

The riot in Limerick on Saturday, June 2, was followed by another on Sunday night, though not quite of so serious a character, owing to the interference of some soldiers on the side of the constabulary. Sentences varying from 14 days' to six months' hard labour were imposed by the magistrates on the prisoners charged with being engaged in the disturbances. The Land Corporation of Limerick took over all the unoccupied farms on Lord Cloncurry's property at New Pallas and Murroe, and large numbers of store cattle have arrived from Dublin as stock for farms. Two caretakers have been placed in each house, and the authorities have formed six protection posts to give security to the caretakers and the property of the corporation. Each post is occupied by a number of armed policemen.

RESTORATION OF KING KOFFEE KALKALI.

The news from Ashantee (the Sierra Leone correspondent of the Standard says) is far from reassuring. King Mensah has been forcibly dethroned, and King Koffee Kalkali restored. King Koffee was the author of the last Ashantee war, and his return to power has caused dismay to the native States adjacent to his territory. Captain Knapp Barrow has been sent to Coomassie to endeavour to arrange a peaceable understanding between Kalkali and the Gold Coast Government, and to prevent any attacks on the loyal tribes who assisted the British in their campaign against the King.

THE EGYPTIAN EXILES.

Arabi Pasha and his six fellow-exiles in Ceylon have sent to the Colonial Office a protest against the statement recently made by Lord Edmund Fitzmaurice, in answer to a question addressed to him in the House of Commons by Sir Wilfrid Lawson—that the parole which Arabi and his fellow prisoners gave was to the Egyptians and not to the English Government. The exiles declare formally that their word of honour was given to the British and not to the Egyptian Government.

FLOGGING WOMEN IN MOROCCO.

The instructions issued by the Sultan of Morocco to the local governors, consequent upon the pressure brought to bear upon him through a collective note, addressed to him by the foreign representatives at Tangier, does not quite amount to an order to discontinue the flogging of women, but such punishment is only to be inflicted when it is sanctioned by the Koranic law as administered by the kadis. The order will, however, it is believed, put an end to this brutal practice, as the evidence of many eye-witnesses of unblemished character is necessary before a woman can be condemned to be flogged.

THE DE BRAZZA EXPEDITION.

The France prints a letter, dated Loango, the 20th of May, from its correspondent with the Congo Expedition. The new possession upon which the French tricolor has been hoisted was 150 miles south of Goree. A French post had been established at Loango, and also at Punto Negro, 14 miles distant. The presence of the French was regarded with hostility by the rich and flourishing Portuguese colony long existing there. Three Portuguese corvettes were keeping close to the coast, evidently watching the French. The presence of an English gunboat and of a vessel of war placed at the disposal of Mr. Stanley by the Belgian Government is likewise mentioned. Bacon, beans, and bread constituted the exclusive food of the expedition, as the Portuguese had agreed together to supply them with nothing. A reconnaissance had been made on the 20th of April as far as the Congo. There, too, the Portuguese were encountered, who told De Brazza's men that their countrymen had seized the river, and were about to establish a custom-house. The situation of the French is described as becoming difficult, and the arrival of the boats sent from France is anxiously looked for.

THE JEWS IN RUSSIA.

Prince San Donato, an intimate friend of Count Ignatieff, and member of the Committee on Jewish Affairs, has just concluded a memorial to the Czar, which has been forwarded to his Majesty, in which he pleads for placing the Jews in Russia on an equal footing legally with all other Russian subjects. The ill-favour with which the Jew is looked upon in official circles renders it doubtful whether any amelioration of their lot will be accorded.

REPORTED FENIANISM IN CANADA.

A telegram from Toronto, published by the New York Herald, reports that fires broke out in eight different places in that city on Sunday night, but were all extinguished. The Chicago News prints a special despatch from Toronto, which states that a Fenian plot to destroy the Welland Canal, which connects Lakes Erie and Ontario, has been discovered.

A HORRIBLE CUSTOM.

The correspondent of the Standard at Sierra Leone, writing on the 14th of May, says that 50 persons have been roasted alive for fetichism or witchcraft in the Sherbro district, this horrible custom being carried out with most revolting ceremony. The Government are powerless in the matter.

ARREST OF A BUNKUM FENIAN IN BIRMINGHAM.

A man named George Smythe, said to be an American, was arrested under remarkable circumstances in Birmingham on June 4. Smythe went to a gunmaker's shop in Whittal-street, and producing a "bull-dog" revolver asked for a box of cartridges. He then loaded the revolver, and requested to be allowed to practise at a target in the rear of a public-house in the same street. In the public-house he treated several persons, said he had come from America, strongly denounced the British Government, and, referring to the forthcoming Bright demonstration in the town, said he meant to do mischief on that occasion. He then went into the yard, and after firing several shots at the target, commenced an altercation with three gunmakers who were standing by, finally threatening to shoot them. They ran away, and the landlord, having his intention attracted by the commotion, saw the American pointing his pistol at one of the gunmakers, who was crouching in a passage. The police were summoned, whereupon Smythe, who was apparently mad drunk, threatened that he would blow his own brains out rather than be locked up. He was, however, secured after making a desperate effort to use his revolver. On the way to the station he was extremely violent, and resisted as much as possible. The prisoner was charged before the magistrate with threatening to shoot. He expressed regret for his conduct, which he attributed to drink, and said that he had no intention whatever of putting his threats into execution. The police said that he had evidently been drinking heavily for some time past. The magistrates treated the affair as a drunken freak, and ordered the prisoner to pay a fine of 20s. and costs.

THE ST. PETERSBURG RIOTS.

The Times prints a despatch from its correspondent at St. Petersburg, giving a fuller account than has yet appeared of the riots at St. Petersburg on the Czar's coronation day. The despatch is dated the 31st of May, but has been delayed in transmission. It appears that the festivities passed off satisfactorily on the Sunday night until half-past 10 at night, when a sudden change took place. An immense mob, consisting chiefly of half-inebriated workmen from the factories beyond the Newsky Gates, suddenly made its appearance at the end of the Newsky, and in one gigantic wave rushed down the principal streets yelling out "Hats off!" and bearing everything before it. The policemen, mounted and on foot, Cossacks, and gendarmes could do nothing to stem the mad career of these enthusiastic fanatics, and at last had to seek refuge in the courtyards and bystreets. The carriages, with their terrified occupants and struggling horses, likewise rapidly disappeared, but not before some of them had nearly been upset. To make matters worse orders were issued to put out the illuminations, and the consequence was that in about 10 minutes the streets were in perfect darkness. The scene that followed is almost indescribable. Shouts of joy and enthusiasm were changed to shrieks of disappointment and rage, and everybody thought there was going to be a riot; but fortunately reinforcements of the terrible and never-failing Cossacks, armed with their stinging whips, quickly made their appearance, and, dashing fearlessly into the midst of the dense masses soon dispersed them. By 12 o'clock the city was in a state of almost perfect tranquillity.

THE FRENCH IN TONQUIN.

The North China Herald, of June 8, contains intelligence concerning the condition of affairs in Tonquin:—

Hanoi, May 19.—A sortie was determined upon to-day to drive back the men of the Black Flag. The troops, about 500 strong, left Hanoi at 4 o'clock a.m., with five guns, under command of Commandant Rivière, who, as ill-luck would have it, wished to lead them in person on this occasion. When about two hours' distance from Hanoi, the expedition fell into an ambuscade set by the Black Flags, and after about an hour's severe fighting, the French were compelled to beat a retreat. There seems to have been a hot fight and a terrible struggle against crushing odds. Out of the 500 troops that marched out of Hanoi, there were not less than 100, or a fifth, killed or disabled. Among those killed were the following officers:—Commandant-in-Chief Rivière, Commandant de Villers, Captain Taquin, Lieutenant de Bréais, and Ensign de Moulin. Five or six other officers were more or less severely wounded, from 16 to 20 soldiers were killed on the spot, and from 40 to 50 more were wounded, of whom three died shortly after reaching Hanoi. Commandant de Villiers lingered for some six hours after reaching Hanoi.

Commandant de Rivière was killed whilst endeavouring, with several of his officers, to recover one of the guns, a Hotchkiss, which it appears had been deserted by the soldiers. The attempt succeeded, but, unhappily, it cost the gallant officer his life. Commandant Rivière was, like a true hero, the last to bring up the retreat, and fell like a gallant soldier. The whole affair has been a very serious disaster, more especially because it has been a blow to French prestige which it will require several victories to efface. At the same time it must not be forgotten that the French officers have covered themselves with glory; they fought like men, and fell like heroes. They could do no more. About their conduct there is but one opinion here.

It seems that several wounded French soldiers fell alive into the hands of the Black Flag band, and what their fate must have been you can imagine from the following too true story:—Three days before the engagement just recorded the French Mission just outside Hanoi was attacked at 9 o'clock in the evening by the Black Flags. The missionaries, aided by five men-of-war's men, made a beautiful stand, and succeeding in repulsing the enemy. The latter, to revenge their failure, then attacked the houses in the missionary compound surrounding the mission station itself, and cut off the noses and ears, and pierced the eyes of all the unfortunate Catholic women and children that were left in them. All this happened within 20 minutes' walk of the French Concession at Hanoi.

Hanoi at this date presents a truly deserted and miserable appearance. The district surrounding the Concession, consisting of European, Chinese, and Anamite houses, has been partly burned down, partly blown up by mines in order to give full play and room for the guns on board the men-of-war. Of all the inhabitants of Hanoi there are scarcely 2000 now in town, and it is impossible to get any provisions, even eggs and fowls being unobtainable.

The China Mail correspondent writes:—Haiphong, May 24.—Some serious events have taken place at Hanoi since I last wrote. The following is a brief description of what has transpired, and the present position of affairs:—For some time past the Anamites and Chinese have concentrated themselves round Hanoi, and every night they bombard the settlement by means of guns brought from Babninh. These guns are stationed on the left bank of the Sun-Koi. The mission-house, situated half way between the settlement and the citadel, was likewise attacked by Chinese coming from Sun-Koi. We had there a detachment of 125 men, and the enemy were driven back, but they revenged themselves by cutting off the noses and ears of the women and children they found in the outlying houses. It seems now a pity that these unfortunate people were not taken better care of, but from the position of the place it was probably not apprehended that an attack would be made upon it. After reinforcements were brought up by the Kuri Maru, Commandant Rivière was anxious to commence offensive operations, and on the morning of the 16th he sent 450 men, under the orders of Chef de Bataillon of Marine Infantry Berthe de Villers, to drive the enemy from the left bank of the Bacninh Canal. These operations succeeded admirably. The troops returned at 2 in the afternoon, after having spiked four guns, driven the Anamites into the Bacninh Canal, and killed several natives; on our side we had not even one wounded.

Commandant Rivière endeavoured, on May 19th, to effect a similar operation on the side where the Chinese Black Flags were located. He himself took command of the expedition. At about two or three kilometres from Hanoi, on the very spot where poor Garnier was killed, there is a small brook crossed by means of a bridge, which will only admit one person crossing at a time; on the other side, and lining the road, there is jungle. Prudence required before passing over the bridge that the jungle should be cleared by artillery, and that then light infantry should be sent across. Instead of doing this, full of confidence, Commandant Rivière passed over first, the men following one by one. When half the column had crossed the bridge, and before rank was formed, firing commenced from both sides of the jungle. The first shot struck Commandant Rivière; he fell, and a number of other officers fell near him immediately afterwards. A hand to hand fight followed. Our artillery, which was in the rear, could not do anything, inasmuch as the guns would have killed as many of our troops as of the enemy had they been fired.

The day cost us the death of Commandant Rivière, Chef de Bataillon de Villers, of a captain and sub-lieutenant of marines, a midshipman, and 17 marines and soldiers, besides 20 officers and 34 men wounded.

The Chinese, fearing another attack on our part, retired on Sun-Koi. Hanoi is now pretty quiet. The Volta left immediately for Saigon for re-inforcements which will admit of our taking the offensive. Admiral Meyer is now here, and has provisionally taken over the command-in-chief. We have in the harbour of Haiphong the Kersaint, Namchu, Parceval, Lutin, and Massue. The Drac is due with 500 men, and the Volta at the end of the month with further reinforcements.

Colonel Carreau has died of the wounds he received at Nam-Dinh, on May 18, after great suffering.

POLICE.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

Mr. Crane, S.M., presided in the Charge Court yesterday, and Mr. Clark, S.M., in the Summons Court.

Edward Walsh, for blasting a rock within the limits of the town of Sydney without having obtained the permission of the town surveyor, was fined £5; and Denis O'Sullivan, for a similar offence, was fined £3.

Andrew Blake, for cruelly ill-treating a horse, was fined £3.

John Ryan, convicted of stealing a pair of boots, the property of James Johnson, was sentenced to four months' imprisonment.

Sarah Bruce, for using obscene language in George-street, was fined 60s., with the option of six weeks' imprisonment.

Helena Howard, charged with having no visible means of support, was sentenced to one month's imprisonment.

Henry Peck, for using indecent language in Campbell-street, was fined 40s. with the alternative of a month's imprisonment.

John Simpson, alias Samuel Crotchett, was charged with having, by means of false pretences, endeavoured to obtain from William M'Gee, a chest of tea valued at £23 12s. 6d., with intent to defraud; and, on a second charge, with having endeavoured to obtain from Edward Hordern and Sons, by means of false pretences, a bale of blankets valued at £31 4s. 2d., with intent to defraud. It appeared from the evidence that at each of the abovenamed places of business the prisoner paid for the goods mentioned with cheques drawn on the Commercial Bank at Windsor, and directed that the goods should be sent to the Parramatta Railway Station. The goods were not sent, and the cheques, on being presented for payment, were dishonoured, the prisoner having no account at the bank named. The prisoner had had an account at the bank, but it had closed 10 years ago. The prisoner was committed for trial at the next Quarter Sessions.

Joseph Doyle was sentenced to three months' imprisonment for stealing two singlets and a revolver, valued at 45s., the property of Robert Horscropt. The same offender, for stealing a gold ring and part of a brooch, value 10s., the property of Richard A. Fallowfield, was sentenced to one month's imprisonment (concurrent).

Charles Myles, for obscene language, in King-street, was fined 40s.

John Dowe, for offending against public decency, in Hyde Park, was fined £5, or 2 month's imprisonment.

W. J. Crane and Martha Davies were each fined £2 for using obscene language in the public streets.

The following publicans were convicted of breaches of the Licensing Act (selling during prohibited hours):—Michael Brady, fined £3; George E. Kruger, fined £4 on two separate charges; Bridget Henry, fined £3; Johanna Bedford, fined £3, and Joseph Bennett, fined £3. Three offenders were fined 10s. each for having in their possession liquor which had been obtained by them from public-houses during prohibited hours.

George Unwin was fined £5 for cruelty to animals.

Ralph Riley was charged with corruptly accepting a reward for the recovery of stolen property. The information set forth: "That, on the 7th of July, at the city of Sydney, a gold breastpin, the property of Henry O'Brien Wilson, was feloniously stolen, and that the defendant did corruptly take certain money, on or about the 12th of July, to wit the sum of £3, upon account of helping the said Henry O'Brien Wilson to recover the said pin, and he believed that the defendant did not use all due diligence to cause the said offender to be brought to trial for the same." Mr. Roberts, senior, prosecuted on behalf of the police, and Mr. Levien appeared on behalf of the defendant. The presiding magistrate, Mr. Clarke, held that a prima facie case had been made out, and committed the defendant for trial. Bail was allowed.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Mr. Marsh, S.M., presided in the Charge Court yesterday, and Mr. Buchanan, S.M., sat in the Summons Court.

James Driscoll, 62 years, described as a seaman, was charged with having broken and entered the shop of Messrs. Riley Brothers in Oxford-street, and stolen therefrom three blankets, three table-covers, three pairs trousers, three vests, three flannel shirts, one check shirt, one travelling rug, one cardigan jacket, one guernsey, two ladies' muffs, five purses, and three cakes of soap, value £11 18s. Senior-sergeant Lawler deposed that at about 3 o'clock that (Friday) morning he met the prisoner in Oxford-street carrying the bundle of drapery (produced); witness took prisoner to Darlinghurst Police Station, and afterwards went to Riley Brothers' premises and found the place open; the premises were undergoing repairs; a piece of board which had been used as a door and in fastening up the shop had been broken open; the watchman was on the premises, and stated that he had been asleep; the prisoner was 150 yards distant from Riley Brothers' shop when witness arrested him. C. A. Baily, assistant to Riley Brothers, identified the goods as the property of his employers; the drawers and boxes in the shop had been opened and ransacked since 6 o'clock on Thursday evening. A. H. Dunbier deposed that he was employed by Messrs. Riley Brothers as a storeman by day in George-street, and as a watchman by night in Oxford-street; witness had slept on the Oxford-street premises during the last few nights amongst the goods; he fastened up the premises at half-past 6 o'clock on Thursday evening by closing the opening with two boards and a door, and barricading it with two-cwt. bales of carpeting; witness was awakened at about 10 minutes to 3 o'clock that morning by voices outside giving the alarm; he found that one of the barricade boards had been broken, one shutter removed, and the place broken into and robbed; witness went to bed a little after 10 o'clock on Thursday night and heard no noise during the night. The prisoner was committed for trial at the next Court of Quarter Sessions.

James Brown was charged with having by means of a false pretence attempted to obtain from Mrs. John Fuller the sum of £1 9s. 3d. with intent to defraud. It appeared that about 9 o'clock on the morning of the 2nd July, the prisoner went to Mr. Fuller's shop on the South Head-road, Paddington, produced a pocketbook, and said to Mrs. Fuller, "I have come for the gas money." Mrs. Fuller made an excuse for not paying the money, and he said he would call next day. Benjamin Morris, bookkeeper for the Australian Gaslight Company, proved that prisoner had never been authorised to collect any money on account of the company. The prisoner was sentenced to be imprisoned for three months. The same offender was then charged with having, by means of a false pretence, obtained from Sydney Burdekin the sum of £1 1s., with intent to defraud. It appeared that the prisoner went to Mr. Burdekin, and by representing that he was the collector for the No. 2 Volunteer Fire Brigade, obtained a subscription of £1 1s. James Holland, superintendent of the No. 2 Volunteer Fire Brigade, proved that prisoner had no authority to collect money on behalf of the company. The prisoner was sentenced to six months' imprisonment. The sentence to be cumulative.

Charles Pluck, 12 years, was charged with having stolen a silk handkerchief, value 5s., and the property of John Ostman. An order was made for the offender to be kept in a watchhouse cell for 24 hours.

Annie Mackay, on a charge of being a common prostitute found wandering and behaving in a riotous manner in William-street, was sent to gaol for 14 days.

Inspector Seymour prosecuted 54 persons for various offences, including those of having filthy premises, depositing rubbish in streets, raising dust on footways, loitering on footways, allowing horses to trot over crossings, driving on the wrong side of a street, and driving without lights. Thomas Ingersoll, of 390, Kent-street, for having rotten meat on his premises, was fined £5 and costs. John May Mow, of 239, George-street, and Mary Hayes, of 39, Mary-street, for having filthy premises, were each fined £5 and costs. Patrick Monaghan, 27, William-lane, John Marr, 29, William-lane, James M'Cabe, Arthur-street, John M'Kenny, Elizabeth-street, and John Ryan, 717, George-street, for having filthy premises, were each fined £2 and costs.

George Goddard was charged with having left his wife, Mary Goddard, without means of support. An order was made for the defendant to pay 10s. per week towards the support of his wife.

Richard Casey pleaded guilty to the information of Constable Bowler charging him with having, in Phillip-street, on the 20th July, cruelly ill-treated a horse which was suffering from ringbone. As the defendant had been fined before for cruelty to a horse, a fine of £3 and costs was imposed.

SOUTH AFRICA.—Telegrams from Durban, dated May 29, are to the following effect:—Statements are still circulated by the Bishopstowe party that Usibepu has been killed, and also that Oham's impi has been routed by Cetewayo's forces; but both these reports remain wholly unconfirmed from other and more trustworthy sources. A great pitso of the Basutos was held at Leribe one the 22nd and 23rd of May, at which some 5000 people were present, who left their arms on the camping ground before attending the meeting. Nearly all the leading chiefs were present. Masupha made an evasive speech, asking permission to hold Leribe. Letsea, the chief paramount, proclaimed and lamented his inability to control his people and to compel their submission to the mandates of the Government. He fully recognised Jonathan as Molappo's successor. It is difficult to grasp the true significance of the meeting, but it seems clear that the Basutos would welcome the effective exercise of some supreme authority. In some districts of the Transvaal the burghers have only reluctantly responded to the order for a levy. The operations against Mapoch, however, seem to be drawing to a close, more overtures for peace having been made by that chief. The natives have burnt two farms, and robbed and murdered the settlers resident upon them. A concession of the exclusive right of gold-mining only in the Denberg commonage has been granted, under conditions. —English Paper.

EPPS' COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage, which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a week point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Made simply with boiling water or milk.—Sold only in packets labelled—"James Epps and Co., homœopathic chemists, London."—Also makers of Epps' chocolate essence.—[ADVT.]

The MINISTERIAL PARTY in the SOUTH.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Reporter.)

KIAMA, Friday.

The chairman at the Wollongong banquet, in proposing the toast of "The Ministry," said the company had to congratulate themselves on the happy circumstance that had brought about the large gathering. (Cheers.) That Mr. Stuart had given satisfaction to the district, he thought there could be no more unmistakable proof than the result of the late political battle in the district. On this occasion they received him in the dual position of their representative and the Premier of the colony—(cheers)—and though in those capacities he brought with him a very large amount of interest, to some of which they could lay claim if they thought it their policy so to do, yet the people of this district had withheld from pressing their local claims, in the knowledge that Mr. Stuart's attention was demanded on behalf of the whole colony—(cheers)—but still to all local wants Mr. Stuart had given attention. Whenever it had been shown to him that they wanted something that was fairly their due, he had lost not a moment in attending to it. (Cheers.) But he need not impress upon them that Mr. Stuart was popular. This demonstration to-night was more than sufficient to show that. (Cheers.) And with regard to the measures which had been passed by the Ministry since they had come into power, it was unnecessary for him to say more than that the Government had done an amount of work for which we ought to be very thankful. (Cheers.)

Mr. Stuart (who was received with hearty cheers) said: I feel extremely flattered by the kind manner in which our excellent chairman has placed before you the toast to which you so fully responded. I feel on this occasion placed under a deeper responsibility with regard to what I may have to say to you than I have ever felt before in addressing you, though I have had that pleasure in this same room on more than one occasion. But I have been accustomed to speak to you only in the character of your representative. This is the first time on which I have had to address you in this place in the double capacity which I now occupy, that of your representative on the one hand, and that of Prime Minister of the country on the other—(cheers)—and I feel extremely great pleasure in appearing before you at this time, not alone, but supported by a majority of those who have cast in their lot with me, and who are endeavouring, along with myself, to do the best we can for the whole of the interest of this great and noble country. (Cheers.) Our chairman has given you a sketch of the work which we have done during the few months we have occupied this political position in the country, so that saves me from the trouble of recapitulating what the various measures have been which we have thought necessary to bring before the country; but I feel that upon this occasion I should not be discharging my duty if I were to omit from bringing under your notice one part of the work which we have yet to do, and which in the consideration of some we ought to have done already; I mean the amendment of our land laws. (Applause.) We have been twitted in various directions. From the extreme north of this colony to the extreme south of it we have been twitted with having neglected our duty, and lost our opportunity in not bringing before the country our Land Bill. (Voices: "No.") If my kind friends who are here present will look in the newspapers of the last few days, they will find that in the north of this colony upon a very recent occasion two members of the Legislature in their preregrinations have chosen to say that we neglected the golden opportunity of bringing forth our Land Bill, and that we ought to lose public confidence in consequence of that. Again, in this morning's papers appear from the south end of the colony the views of another member of the Legislature, who reiterates the same statement that we have lost a golden opportunity which will never occur to us again, and that we ought to be driven from the face of the earth for having neglected that opportunity. (Laughter.) Very well, we cannot settle this great question in this very offhand manner. (Hear, hear.) We can't settle the land question merely by going about the country delivering lectures on a sort of platform combining humanitarianism with political faction (cheers and laughter). We cannot go about the country and put forward our views on this great question in that fashion. We owe a duty to the country higher than this. We owe a duty to our supporters in the House and a duty to our supporters—our most generous supporters—throughout the length and breadth of the land; we owe them a higher duty than treating this question in this offhand manner by making it appear that it is a matter which can be easily settled for the benefit of some very worthy but unfortunate individual who might happen to need some little aid from his fellow-colonists. We can't go about, I say, lecturing in this manner upon a question of this enormous importance. We owe this duty to the whole country, that we must meet this matter in a most patient, a most thoroughly investigating manner, and one by which we hope to be able to make it apparent to the public at large that we not only understand the question, but that we are able to bring forth somewhat of a true solution of this most important matter. (Applause.) I have on a previous occasion addressed the greater number of you in the fullest possible manner upon this question in a manner which you did me the honour to respond to and appreciate by acknowledging that in your opinion at all events I understood what I was talking about. (Cheers.) I dismiss therefore, at once and for ever, my criticism upon those gentlemen who give what some of my friends here will know and recognise is not of much value—travelling opinions upon what this land law ought to be. I am surprised at some of the statements put forth. Read this morning's paper, and you will find we are charged with having, during the late session in which we met Parliament with our measures, so neglected this duty that we were supporting publicans rather than the public. (Cries of "Oh!") That was the charge brought forward—no doubt alluding to the fact that we deemed it proper to correct some gross mislegislation in the Licensed Victuallers Act, a grievance loudly complained of and easily rectified—whereas the duty we are charged with shirking is of such deep importance to the whole community that in order to do it well it ought to be done carefully and leisurely. (Cheers.) I am surprised at the wilful misrepresentations thus put forward, but I am anxious to take this opportunity, which is one of the first I have had, to state in some degree what it is our intention to do. (Hear, hear.) It is clearly and unmistakably our intention, on the very first possible opportunity, to bring in our Land Bill. (Cheers.) Let there be no mistake about that. Our enemies have charged us with three things, as it appears to me: to have laid it to our charge that we never intended to bring in the Land Bill, that we intended to shirk this question; again they have charged us with being utterly incapable of bringing in a Land Bill; and then they have charged us that, even if we have the capacity to bring in the bill, it could never be a satisfactory one. Well, we intend to disappoint them on all three points. (Cheers.) We intend to disappoint them in the first, that we never intended to bring in the Land Bill, because we do intend to bring in the bill, and the only reason why we have not brought it in before is that we want to make it a measure worthy of the acceptance of this country. (Cheers.) We have been charged, under this very head, with relegating the duty which lies upon us as Ministers to the two gentlemen whom we chose to appoint as a commission on this question. Now, what is the fact? We never thought of asking those gentlemen for a land policy. Our object was that the whole country, before we put forth our land policy, should clearly and unmistakably understand what the land policy of the past has been, what it has been productive of, wherein it has failed, and wherein it was necessary to apply remedies to the evils that exist. (Cheers.) I point fearlessly to the report of those two gentlemen, Messrs. Morris and Ranken, in order to convince any person who may choose to read it that they have accomplished this good. They have shown to the people that the indictment which we brought against the late Land Bill was a true indictment, and that it was high time a thorough change in our land system took place. (Cheers.) This was the object we had in appointing that commission—not that we wished the commission to travel out of the true path merely to favour our opinion. We were anxious that those gentlemen should secure all the information they could, not so much for our own guidance, because we felt within ourselves a consciousness of the true state of things; but we knew that there was a vast amount ignorance on the question on the part of those who had never been brought actually into contact with the evils resulting from the land system, and that it was absolutely necessary they should be well informed before we called them to consider any land system which we ourselves might bring forward. (Cheers.) Now, I do not feel inclined at the present time, nor do I think it would be right, in accordance with my views of responsible government, to lay before you all the matter of detail in that Land Bill. (Hear, hear.) There is a chosen ground upon which the battle of the Land Bill has to be fought. When I was appealing to you for your suffrages to return me to the present Parliament, I laid clearly and unmistakably before you what were my views upon the land question. I had uttered those same views in the House on the memorable occasion which led to the defeat of the late Ministry, and those views, I have no doubt, will be embodied in our Land Bill. Details may differ. I have not the sole appointment and making of the bill, nor is it likely that my views, put forth under a feeling of irresponsibility, would be precisely the same as I have to put forward under the enormous feeling of responsibility that we have to place before the country that which ought to be the land policy. (Cheers.) Let any one of you try, in your own daily life and experience, and you will soon know that when you have the whole weight and responsibility of matters upon your shoulders, you will not have to consult your own feelings and put forward what you consider right, but you will have to consider how that will act and react upon the whole of the community over whom you are called to preside. (Hear, hear.) I say this much with regard to our Land Bill—I may give you a certain glimpse into the nature or character of it; and that is, it will be our endeavour, first of all, that it shall be founded on equal justice to all. (Cheers.) It is not our intention to take up any one class of the community and favour it to the exclusion of others. Our community is made up or compounded of many different elements. There are those who are engaged in the pastoral pursuits of the country on the one hand, and there are those, on the other hand, who in a humbler degree contribute their share of the general welfare of the community; there are those, from the small to the larger settlers and landowners, and all those have to be considered. And, more than this, there have to be considered the vast body of people generally—(cheers)—because it has always appeared to me that in the fight of class against class on this great land question there has too often been lost sight of that which is the real interest of the whole body politic, the people. We have to care for all these, and see that one is not favoured so much at the expense of the other, that there is undue preponderance given to either, the one side or the other. We have to give encouragement to both of the great classes of the people, who are the customers, as I may call them, of the people's land; for we must never forget that this land is the great heritage of the nation, and according to its use or misuse so will be the prosperity or adversity of this great country. (Cheers.) We have to give encouragement to both classes of occupants—to those who are to permanently occupy the country and to those who have, I can hardly call it a transient interest in the country, but who have some fixed beneficial interest which is associated with the enjoyment of the freehold of the land, the great pastoral tenants of the country. But we are not to say that the one is to be sacrificed to the other; we are not to say that in this country there is to be room for the one only. There is room and to spare for all, if there is a wise law, which will allow each to live in their separate sphere. And this is really what lies at the foundation, according to our view, of a true solution of the land question—that there shall be equal favour to all, and no oppression towards anyone. I grant that it is almost impossible to so legislate as to bring this about in perfection. I suppose that it would tax not only the greatest powers of our critics in this matter, but of all humanity, to frame a law which would be free from being unsound in some direction or another; but the object of wise men, or men intending to deal wisely in such a matter of legislation as this, should be to have all the land bill, and the land system of the colony such as would be calculated to give the greatest amount of benefit to all and the least amount of injustice. (Cheers.) The public interest, as I said, forms a large element in this matter. The land does not belong to the squatter nor to the free selector; it really belongs to the whole of us put together—(hear, hear)—and the reason we are anxious to settle people upon the land is that, while we wish those already settled on the land all prosperity, we desire, by increasing the prosperity of both classes, to press forward the prosperity of the whole nation—(cheers)—and the greatest facilities we can possibly give for the settlement of the various classes are amongst the principal objects which we have in view in the Land Bill which we are engaged at this very moment in bringing to a state of preciseness before placing it before the country. It is on this question that we are prepared to make our stand; we perfectly understand that if we are unable to deal with the question we are unfit to be in the position which we are in. It is because you and the various electorates in the country have declared that you feel we are capable of dealing with it that we have a right to be in the position we now occupy, and we would be recreant to that duty imposed upon us if we for a moment shirked the question. (Cheers.) We have no fear for it. We are not only preparing this Land Bill, and will place it before Parliament, but we mean to pass it. (Cheers.) That is our full intention, and we feel perfectly sure that if it is based on those principles of equity and justice I have just shadowed forth, the ultimate fate of it will be that it must be passed. And why? Because it will be cast back upon yourselves, and you will recognise those principles of eternal truth and justice, and you will send us again to bring forward and to pass the measure. (Cheers.) Well, you see, I have disposed of the first objection levelled against us with regard to this matter. I think I have clearly and unmistakably shown that we have no intention to do otherwise than to bring this bill forward—(cheers)—and we justify the position we have taken in not bringing it forward, as some consider we ought to have done, in the first session, on the ground that we had a higher recognition of the responsibility and importance of the object than to thrust it forward an ill-digested measure before the country. I think I need hardly this evening go into other matters with regard to our intentions in legislation, except, perhaps, to merely glance at one or two of them. I need hardly detain you by going into these other matters at any length, for this simple reason, that if we fail to pass our Land Bill we will fail to bring forward any other measure. That is our clear intention. If we are unable to pass our Land Bill the session will be fruitless, unless it be for some minor matters of pressing importance. We have no desire to hold office under any false pretences; let that be clearly understood. We have no desire to hold office for a single day under any such false pretence as that of holding it merely for sake of the office or its emoluments. Those emoluments are often in my opinion made a great deal too much of. (Hear, hear.) Those emoluments I can tell every one here are very dearly earned. (Hear, hear.) I have been a worker all my life. I have worked as hard as any man in the community, and I know I have never worked a more unprofitable work, if the mere emolument be taken into consideration, than Ministerial work—(hear, hear)—and I do not believe that a single individual of those who have thrown in their lot with mine in this matter would care one jot about the emolument merely as emolument, and as a profitable enterprise it is about as unprofitable an enterprise in regard to financial position as any man could enter; therefore we are perfectly sincere when we say that we recognise that the Land Bill is that which gives us our title to our place, and if we are, as some of our opponents desire to make you believe, so incapable as not to be able to put forward anything like a decent Land Bill, our occupation is gone. We are perfectly willing then, provided you and the constituents of the various electorates think we are incapable, to stand aside and allow some of those marvellous individuals, endowed with capacities so superior to our own, to take the matter in hand. Thus far as to the future of our Ministerial projects, saving that I may mention a few of those matters we intend to bring forward next session, provided our Land Bill is accepted. If the Land Bill is accepted, we intend to go on with the question of local self-government—(cheers)—with Civil service reform, with bankruptcy reform; and it is our intention to tackle the very questionable subject of electoral reform. (Cheers.) I think if we are able to present to the country a banquet composed of such solid dishes as those five I have mentioned, you may be very well content to leave the smaller dishes to the concoction of those able to present you with the larger one. (Cheers.) Now I wish to say a few words with regard to a matter that comes near home to you all, and to myself also. As your member, and before I was your member, in conjunction with your late member, my esteemed friend, Mr. Gray, I have endeavoured to help forward the work of your railway. (Cheers.) If we had had our way, instead of tenders being only called for now, the railway would have been running for the last four or five years—(cheers)—for it is seven or eight years ago since the Government of which I was then a member placed the money for the railway on the Estimates, and since I, with the aid of your late member, endeavoured to fight the battle for you and have the railway constructed. At that time circumstances combined to throw it over from year to year, and in my opinion it is deplorable that we have had to wait seven years before we are able to get what we consider not a boon but our right. (Cheers.) That was the position we always took in asserting the claims of this and the sister constituencies to the south in having this railway carried through, and I feel a great pleasure in the position in which I am placed to-day, that it is a Ministry of which I form part which is now able to tell you that the tenders for the railway in this part of the electorate have already been called for. (Cheers.) I am rejoiced also to be able to say that just as we were about to enter your banquetting hall the Minister for Works, Mr. Wright, made his appearance, having driven over from Sydney this morning for the purpose of being present here. (Cheers.) At the first public announcement that that which has been the longing of your ports for so many years is about to be accomplished. (Cheers.) I should like to trespass upon your kind indulgence for a few moments to say a word of explanation with regard to what has no doubt appeared to you to have been a great mistake upon our part as a Ministry, in reference to this railway matter. I am quite sure that I have been brought in for some small share of the blame for the delay in calling for tenders. I am quite aware that about three months ago a deputation from your district waited upon me when I was acting in the capacity of Minister for Works, to urge that this matter should be pushed forward, and that I then upon the assurance of the Engineer-in-Chief gave it as that the tender would be called for within two months from that date. Circumstances of a twofold character occurred to prevent that from being carried out exactly to the letter. One circumstance which we all must deplore is that the gifted gentleman who presides over that department—the Chief Engineer for Railways—has been laid aside in his bed for weeks past suffering under a very serious and painful sickness or disease, and therefore he has not been able personally to give that attention to this matter which he otherwise would have given if he had been in the enjoyment of good health. Another reason was simply that it appeared to me an error had been committed by taking the railway over the heights of the Bottle Forest route, instead of by the lower level of the Hacking River route. (Hear, hear.) I felt it was of the utmost importance to this and the whole of the southern districts, and also of the most paramount importance to the country at large, that the railway, if it were to be made, ought to be made in such a way as would really be of the greatest possible benefit to these districts, and I felt if the railway was to be a mineral-carrying line, which I know it must be—(cheers)—that to take it up a height 400 feet above what appeared to be necessary was imposing a permanent disability upon the country and the electorate, and upon the possibility of the railway paying. (Cheers.) If it can be found practicable to take the railway by a route 400 feet below the summit level of the Bottle Forest route, even if it should be done at a greater expense, my voice would be given to carry it that way, because no expense we could incur to carry it at that lower level would be anything compared to the enormous expense of continually taking a large coal traffic to a summit nearly 400 feet in height. I am told by competent engineers who are in the habit of dealing with railway trains that if any engine of a certain power could convey, say, 250 tons over the one level, that same engine could not take more than about 50 or 60 tons over the higher level. If that be so,—and the statement is on the authority of the department itself—then it is apparent that in order to make this railway payable we ought to find out the feasibility of making it on the lower level. (Cheers.) It was because I saw this that at the risk of a few weeks' delay I felt it to be wise to settle this point once for all. (Cheers.) If it is proved that the statement made to me is correct, then the railway will be taken along the lower level; and if it is shown that it can be so taken, we ought to put up with a few weeks' delay in order to have the railway placed on a permanent payable footing. (Cheers.) But as soon as we found it would take a longer time than I at first thought it would to ascertain whether it is practicable or not to take the railway by the lower level, we at once determined—and for this I give the full credit to a suggestion from the Minister for Works—we at once determined that it would be best to call for tenders at once for the parts of the line about which there was no doubt, leaving the gap to settle its own merits while we pushed on with the other. (Cheers.) I believe that this little delay will be productive of the greatest possible benefit. It will be productive of benefit even if it proves contrary to my own opinion that the lower level cannot be worked, because if the higher level had been carried out without ascertaining the merits of the other, there would have been a constant feeling of dissatisfaction that we had gone about the work without thoroughly testing it. In connection with this work and other works of the kind, the country is to be congratulated in having the vigorous powers of our present Minister for Works to carry them out. (Cheers.) But these works cannot be carried out without means, and I am glad to be able to state that I have received a telegram from the Agent-General, stating that the loan which we placed on the market was yesterday fully subscribed in London at prices that cannot fail to be satisfactory to the whole colony. The telegram stated that the loan was floated at an average price of £100 2s. 11d., and in the face of a most unfavourable market—alluding, no doubt, to the clouds which seem to be hovering over that wretched Madagascar affair. In the face of this, and notwithstanding that there was a fall in Consols of three-quarters per cent. our three million loan was fully subscribed; our Agent-General says, also, in face of the fact of our loan having, from necessity, to be introduced after the market was well exhausted by the other colonies, which, you will remember, had their loans put on a few weeks ago. (Cheers.) Well, our loan stands in the proud position of being considerably above the price obtained by any of the other colonies, and this in the face of what some have considered to be the mistaken policy of the present Ministry, the stopping the wholesale sales of land by auction. (Cheers.) I say we have reason to congratulate the country upon the high position—the very highest position amongst all the Australian colonies—at the present time which it occupies—best of all tests, the test of the London market. (Cheers; and a voice, "What amount of interest do they bear?") I perceive that the gentleman who interrupted me knows all about this matter. The Victorian loan, which was taken up a short time ago at £98 10s., bore interest from the 1st April; our loan, which was taken at £100 2s. 11d., bears interest from the 1st July, therefore our loan is one quarter of the year, or three months' less interest bearing than the other—that is to say, that even if the subscribed rates had been equal our rate would still have been 1 per cent. better; but as our rate is 1½ per cent. better upon the subscribed rate, that is, £100 instead of £98 10s., and 1 per cent. in the interest, we are in the position of borrowing our money on 2½ per cent. better terms than Victoria. (Cheers.) I most heartly thank you for the kind reception you have given me, and I am sure you will now only be too glad that I should make way for the pleasing eloquence of my learned and dear friend.

Mr. Dalley, who, on rising, was met with prolonged cheering, said:—Gentlemen,—On occasions such as this, when public men are out for their holidays, there is always in the midst of their exhilaration the oppressiveness of the thought that they are expected to say something about either their work in the past or their contemplated labours in the future; to justify what they have done, and to justify themselves for being where they are by indicating what they intend to do. When this moment comes in the midst of the festivity (and it always does come sooner or later) the lights begin to grow paler, the flowers to lose their freshness and perfume, and the company to exchange cordiality for criticism. The chairman himself seems to be on his guard against the approach of sympathy, and to look with a placid gentlemanly indifference while the painful operation proceeds. (Laughter.) My friend and colleague has just gone through it, with that dexterous concealment of agitation and suffering—(laughter)—which he owes somewhat to his passionless organisation, a little to his frankness, but mainly to his nationality. (Cheers and laughter.) He comes of a race averse, as you know, to demonstrativeness of sentiment, so that you are unable to perceive how intensely he has suffered for the pleasure of which he has just had experience. (Laughter.) The difficulty of such a situation as ours is not, gentlemen, in the past, but in the future. We have been but too brief a time exposed to the temptations of office to commit many sins. We should, indeed, have been hardened criminals if we had fallen away from grace so soon, and so suddenly. (Laughter.) And you may rest assured that had we seriously offended we should have before now been chastised. (Hear, hear.) For we have been subjected to a rigid criticism, and some of our critics are not likely to err on the side of excessive pity and indulgence and forbearance. (Cheers.) But it is in the future that our work is to be done, and our title to public confidence either established or lost. And here again in your presence we are met with difficulties. This is not the place, as you know, to say too much; and yet we must say something. It we tell you to-night what we shall have to tell people elsewhere in a few weeks, we shall be exposing ourselves to a slight embarrassment. I remember many years ago—when I was very much younger—when it was my pride and happiness to act with my dear and accomplished friend, the late Sir Charles Cowper—(cheers)—that I was, while dining with him just before we were to address a great metropolitan meeting, urging upon him with the importunity of youth a variety of matters that he should on no account neglect to introduce in his speech. He listened to my suggestions with that patience and courtesy which formed one of the many charms of his attractive character, but at last quietly remarked, "Now, you have told me a number of things that I ought to say, couldn't you suggest a few things that I ought not to say?" (Laughter.) You perceive the wisdom and the pertinence of the humorous inquiry. He knew where the difficulty was, and had felt it more than once. I am very sensible of it at this moment, following my friend. And yet I owe to him that my task is but a small one. I shall have little to say to you, since he has spoken to you so fully. Gentlemen, I think we may very fairly lay claim to the title of having in not a few important matters recognised our great responsibilities, and endeavoured, as far as we were able, and were permitted to do so, to discharge our duties to the country. (Cheers.) We have, both by way of legislation and of administration, undertaken matters that have not hitherto been touched. Whether in either one way or the other we have done this to our own credit and to the advantage of the country is a matter yet to be decided. I do not think, for example, that we shall be found unmindful of our great responsibilities to the country on the question of higher education, which it it has been our duty and our privilege to inaugurate as a State system. (Cheers.) You are all aware that up to this time the State has not concerned itself with this department of public instruction. There are some who believe that it forms no part of the liabilities of the Government to give any other kind of education than that which will enable children to discharge their duties as citizens, and which will furnish to themselves the means and materials of self-improvement if they desire to use them for their own culture. But this is not the policy that Parliament has sanctioned. With noble liberality, the means of higher culture have been furnished to the humblest, and the fabric of our educational policy has been built up on the idea of endeavouring to bring into full development all the widespread intellectual powers and forces of our youth. (Cheers.) It is a great ambition—and deserves a splendid success. (Cheers.) But it is an enterprise on the part of a people which must necessarily be slow, difficult, and costly. Too much must not be expected at once from a labour which will task the care, the sacrifice, and the administrative power of the ablest and most experienced. To give you in another generation a body of gifted, richly accomplished, generous youth—suited to the active business of everyday life, and yet softened and refined by the study of humane letters—equipped alike for action and contemplation—courageous, and yet reverential—knowing the true value, and knowing also the limits of culture—carrying themselves with the consciousness of power, and yet with the humility of Christian gentlemen—this would be an achievement on the part of any Minister presiding over our system of Public Instruction which would entitle him to that dearest form of immortality, the imperishable gratitude of a people. (Loud cheers.) Ideal societies have been dreamed of by tender philanthropists where this height of civilisation has been reached. Milton, in one of the sweetest passages of a great work, speaking of the obligation imposed upon all who entered into chivalry, exclaimed that "every free and gentle spirit without that oath ought to be born a knight." And it may be that we shall yet be privileged, through our munificent provision for higher education, to give birth to these knights of culture—each of whom will be worth to us infinitely more than the heavier and maturer and unintellectual chivalry which we get out of politics and self-esteem and the blundering suggestions of the people whose notions of honour and service and fitness are so strange. (Cheers.) Well, I think we may say that we have undertaken the performance of this difficult duty with a due sense of its greatness—and that we have, while diffident of our own powers, spared no exertion to make this great experiment a success. (Hear, hear.) The Minister in charge of the Department—and a more thoroughly honest, sincere, straightforward man never occupied any place in connection with the public instruction of this country—(cheers)—has spared no pains to accomplish this. He has sought the counsel and assistance of the best of our scholars and schoolmasters; he has invited applications for public employment in this most important function from all sides. He has determined that the highest competency shall be the only title, and that the ablest and most accomplished men shall alone determine the qualifications of those employed. (Cheers.) He has resolved that there shall in this department of the State be no mere ornamental officers—with titles and certificates of culture—the medals and ribbons and decorations of the art—without the faculty of teaching. It is, I believe, his ambition to try and do for his country what the Parliament of the country of his fathers did for it. There was a time—and not a very remote one—when Scotland was not that vast manufactory of schoolmasters, lawyers, engineers, bankers, accountants, and—not the least of her products—colonial Prime Ministers—(cheers)—which she has since happily become. When Fletcher of Saltoun despaired of the capacity for higher civilisation of his countrymen he little thought that they were just about to enter upon a career of intellectual conquest throughout the world for which there is no parallel in history; that they were to guide the machinery by which seas are bridged—the daily intercourse of the most distant nations sustained—the needs and conveniences of commercial centres provided for—and to control in a large degree the operations of civilised society, so that wherever a great engine is to be constructed, or a noble ship to be built, or a great bank to be founded, or any vast form of commercial enterprise is to be established, the probabilities are that a Scotchman is to be found at the head of the work. (Cheers.) Perhaps there may be some amongst you who never read what Macaulay once said of what education had done for Scotland. I shall spare the blushes of Scotchmen by abstaining from any allusion to the state of their country before the Parliament which sat at Edinburgh and gave education to the people, and shall simply quote the splendid orator as to the consequences. "What followed?" he exclaimed. "An improvement such as the world has never seen took place in the moral and intellectual character of the people. Soon, in spite of the rigour of the climate, in spite of the sterility of the earth, Scotland became a country which had no reason to envy the fairest portions of the globe. Wherever the Scotchman went—and there were few parts of the world to which he did not go—he carried his superiority with him. If he was admitted into a public office, he worked his way up to the highest post. If he got employment in a brewery or a factory, he was soon the foreman. If he took a shop, his trade was the best in the street. If he enlisted in the army, he became a colour-sergeant. If he went to a colony, he was the most thriving planter there. The Scotchman of the 17th century had been spoken of in London as we speak of the Esquimaux. The Scotchman of the 18th century was an object, not of scorn, but of envy. The cry was that, wherever he came, he got more than his share; that, mixed with Englishmen or mixed with Irishmen, he rose to the top as surely as oil rises to the top of water. And what had produced this great revolution? The Scotch air was still as cold, the Scotch rock was still as bare as ever. All the natural qualities of the Scotchman were still what they had been when learned and benevolent men advised that he should be flogged, like a beast of burden, to his daily task. But the State had given him an education. That education was not, it is true, in all respects what it should have been. But such as it was, it had done more for the bleak and dreary shores of the Forth and Clyde than the richest soils and the most genial of climates had done for Capua and Tarentum." (Cheers.) I have spoken of our desire to secure in this great department of government the most efficient and best instructed men, without reference to their position in other respects. I may be pardoned for referring to what we have already done in this respects in other departments. We have conscientiously endeavoured to dispense patronage according to the two rules of competency of the officer and seniority of service. (Cheers.) The man who is qualified, and who stands next to the office, is the one to fill it. (Hear, hear.) This rule has been laid down, and is observed. I may speak of these things without the imputation of speaking in my own individual praise, for the patronage attached to my office is of the slightest possible value. I have the privilege and gratification occasionally of bestowing a prosecutorship on a young and deserving advocate; and with this pleasure my power is almost exhausted. With my colleagues it is different. They have—all of them—many offices, requiring varied qualifications for the satisfactory discharge of their duties, to fill from time to time, and I believe their determination is that these offices, great as well as small, shall be filled by the best men—without reference to social or political influence or any other consideration than those of the merits and claims of the individual, and securing the best service to the public. (Cheers.) We have had recently to fill one of the greatest—an office of trust, high emolument, and great distinction—that of the Auditor-General. The applications for the appointment were, as you may suppose, many; the influence brought to bear great. We bestowed the office upon a man without, as far as I am aware, any political or Parliamentary influence—and who, in fact, had not solicited it—on the sole ground that he was qualified to fill it, and had for 30 years discharged the most responsible duties in the Department. (Cheers.) I do not claim that we are entitled to any special consideration for what we have done; but we can ourselves regard the circumstance with pride and satisfaction, for we have inaugurated a new principle. (Hear, hear.) We have by respecting the claims and recognising the titles of Civil servants elevated the character of the service, and taken the first great step to increase its efficiency. (Cheers.) But, as I have said, it is by what is before us—immediately before us—that we are to be judged. We have no right to taste the pleasures of repose until we enjoy them in their fulness when we are released from office. Until that happy moment comes, we must give up all idea of rest and enjoyment, and taste the pleasure of excitement. "Young men," said Sydney Smith, "turn soldiers and sailors from the love of being agitated; and for the same reason country gentlemen leap over stone walls." Now, without any love of agitation, you can hardly have listened to my friend to-night without feeling convinced that we have several stone walls either to leap over or bring us to grief. (Laughter.) Gentlemen, I hope, and I am sure you wish, that we may ride carefully, fearlessly, and surely; and that if we fall we may, though losing the prize, retain your sympathy. (Loud cheers.)

Mr. W. J. Trickett having also been called upon, rose and stated that in following four other Ministers the task of responding was no easy one, but he would preface the few remarks he intended to make by saying that he had always been in favour of the Illawarra railway, a project that was, he thought, first suggested by Mr. James Manning, and strongly advocated by that able and keen-sighted old divine who had now joined the great majority, the late Rev. Dr. Lang. (Cheers.) Although doubts had been expressed as to whether the line would pay, he thought that the coal traffic, the produce traffic, and the passenger traffic to this charming district would all combine to make a great revenue. He was no stranger to the district, and was a great admirer of its beauties; and from comparison with other places he had visited, both in and out of this colony, he was free to admit that the beautiful and romantic scenery of the Bulli Pass, with its profuse and gorgeous semi-tropical vegetation, was nowhere to be surpassed, and Sydney people went far away in search of scene and climate while they had the most exquisite kind at their own doors; and when the railway was opened, he said unhesitatingly that the Illawarra district would be one of the most frequented outlets for Sydney residents. He thought that the Government ought to resume the surface right of that part of the pass, to preserve untouched and undefiled its virgin beauty. (Loud cheers.) His honourable colleagues had spoken of the burning question of the hour, the land question, and he need only add that if any ignorance heretofore existed as to the necessity for land reform, it must have been entirely dissipated by the mass of valuable evidence collected by Messrs. Morris and Ranken and placed before the country in so short a time, and with the addition of the splendid maps attached to the report. (Applause.) He was deeply interested in the question of local self-government, but the Land Law must be the very first measure laid on the table of the House, and then he hoped, if that were passed, that a Local Government Bill and Civil Service Bill would immediately follow. (Cheers.) Speaking of the huge department under his control as Postmaster-General, Mr. Trickett paid a high compliment to the permanent heads of department and general efficiency of the officers, and stated that if Parliament, in its wisdom, chose to allow the present Ministry to continue in power long enough, there were sundry reforms he would introduce. It had been well said that "the race of life was now so intense that the runners were treading on each others heels, and woe betide the man who stopped to tie his shoe-strings." Nowhere was this better illustrated than in the constant demand for speedy mail transit, cheap telegraphic communication, and the extension of that wonderful system, the telephone. He was now considering the question of cheap telegraphy between this and other countries, although we were hampered with a contract which made this rather difficult; and he also had in view the cheapening of colonial telegrams. In these days so much was done by means of the electric current men seemed to have no time to write, and a magic word of one syllable sent floating along the wires from England to Australia could, by modern arrangements, be made to speak volumes, and perhaps affect the whole mercantile community. (Applause.) He would do all he could to encourage the extension of the telephone, a system which so largely prevails in England and America, and the advantages of which so strongly impressed him when recently in those countries. A better system of parcel post and introduction of postal orders were matters he would also give his attention to. He was now in communication (by wire) with the postal authorities in England, with a view of making mail arrangements with the Orient Company; and if these were completed, as he trusted they would be, we should have the swiftest service of any of the colonies, worked on a basis, not of subsidies, but of payment by results to the amount of mail matter carried. (Loud cheers.) Mr. Trickett spoke at length on postal and other matters, and concluded by thanking the company for their kind hospitality to the Ministry, and with the assurance that occasions such as the present must tend, by bringing the people's representatives into close contact with the people themselves, to further strengthen that grand form of government by which we are ruled. (Loud applause.)

TERARA, Friday.

The Ministerial party, numbering 26, left Kiama shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, being beautifully fine and cool. To many of the party the country passed over was entirely new, and the charming views of rural life and picturesque landscape which every hill and valley disclosed evoked the greatest admiration. Between Kiama and Gerringong, and hence to Broughton Creek, the road crosses a succession of high hills, between which and towards the mountain range the farmers of the district have established their homes; and nothing could be more delightful to the eye than the charming manner in which the evidences of industry blend with the natural beauties of the mountain glens and streams. Proof of the prosperous condition of the population, and of the richness and importance of the district's resources, was apparent on every hand, and not a little advantage is likely to accrue to Illawarra through the knowledge which has been gained during this visit by the large number of members of Parliament who have been travelling in company with Mr. Stuart and Mr. Dalley.

On arriving at Gerringong, a small village and municipality about seven miles from Kiama, the Ministers were received very cordially by the Mayor (Mr. Andrew Nelson) and the aldermen, and conducted to the School of Arts, where refreshments were laid for the Ministerial party. Mr. Robert Miller expressed the pleasure which the people of Gerringong felt at receiving a visit from the Premier of the colony and his hon. colleague, the Attorney-General, and said that they wished to accord them as hearty a welcome as they had received at the places they had already visited, though the hospitality tendered was not on so grand a scale. He proposed the health of the Ministry, and, in doing so, brought under the notice of the Ministers the necessity existing in the village for a new post and telegraph office, for the improvement of the road, and for a recreation ground.

Mr. Stuart, in replying, said that the Under Secretary for Public Works was present, and would no doubt give attention to what had been said about the road. With regard to the post and telegraph office, he would represent to the Postmaster General what had been said with a view to arrive at something that might be satisfactory. Providing a recreation ground seemed to him a work of supererogation, for to visitors it would appear that the life of the residents of Gerringong was nothing but recreation; but if the ground attached to the School of Arts was, as had been stated, a desirable site for a recreation ground, and could be purchased for a moderate sum, it might possibly be done. With regard to Gerringong generally, he mentioned that on one occasion, when in a foreign place, he saw a tin of Gerringong milk, and that when he returned to the colony he tried to get another tin of the same milk, but failed to obtain it, though he could get an abundance of Swiss milk. He hoped that industry would not be allowed to die.

Mr. Dalley also addressed a few words to the company and the Ministers then resumed their journey to Broughton Creek. When the party arrived at the southern boundary of the Kiama electorate they were met by the Mayor of Broughton Creek, together with a large number of residents in buggies and on horseback, forming a cavalcade fully a quarter of a mile long. On reaching Broughton Creek a number of residents, including many ladies and the Broughton Creek Public school children, had congregated near the Broughton Creek bridge, where a triumphal arch had been erected, bearing the motto "Welcome." Here the Ministerial party were welcomed with loud and hearty cheers, after which the Mayor of Broughton Creek read an address as follows:—"To the Hon. Alexander Stuart, &c. Sir,—We, the undersigned residents of that portion of the Shoalhaven electorate situated to the north of the Shoalhaven River, desire to express our satisfaction and pleasure at your arrival in our district, and to offer to you and the gentlemen accompanying you, a most cordial welcome to it. We have the more gratification in so doing, as this is the first occasion on which our district has been honoured by a visit from a leading member of the Government of the colony. We cannot refrain from expressing our regret that your four through our midst should have been made at a season when the surrounding country has assumed its most wintry aspect, but you will not have failed to observe evidences on all sides of its exceeding fertility, and its capacity for supporting a population largely in excess of that which inhabits it. We would especially desire to impress on your notice the fact that our varied resources—dairying, agricultural, and mineral—have hitherto remained almost entirely undeveloped, as much in consequence of the almost insuperable difficulties experienced in obtaining suitable labour as due to the inadequate facilities for the proper conveyance of our perishable dairy products to the metropolis, although but a short distance. The necessity which exists for the transhipment of our produce from the river boats to the ocean-going steamer at Greenwell Point involves a delay of several days in placing our exports on the Sydney markets and a material deterioration in the value of the same. In conclusion, we hope that your journey through the South Coast district has so far been pleasurable, and that the remainder of it will prove equally so, and with the hope that you will derive a deep impression of the importance of this part of the colony, and that you will be enabled during your tenure of office to render lasting benefits to the community at large. Signed, on behalf of the inhabitants of Broughton Creek and surrounding districts, John Gray, Mayor of Broughton Creek."

The Public school children then sang the "National Anthem," and the Colonial Secretary granted them a half-holiday. The visitors were then conducted to the Kangaroo Hotel, where they were entertained at luncheon, the Mayor of Broughton Creek being in the chair, and Mr. H. G. Morton in the vice-chair. Among the persons to welcome the Ministers at Broughton Creek was Mr. David Berry, the large landed proprietor of these districts, who has almost reached his 90th year. Broughton Creek was left immediately after the luncheon, at which it should be said the health of the Ministry was drunk with cheers, and Mr. Dalley, following Mr. Stuart, made an exceedingly humorous speech; and, after a smart drive of eight miles along a road which passed through wooded, flat, and rather uninteresting country, the Nowra Bridge and the Shoalhaven River, looking very pretty in the evening twilight, were reached.

Arriving at the Nowra Post and Telegraph Office, the visitors were received by the Mayor, Mr. H. Moss, and the aldermen, and other gentlemen. Mr. Stuart was presented with an address, in which a hearty welcome was tendered on behalf of the corporation and the inhabitants, and expression made of the high esteem in which Mr. Stuart is held by the residents. A hope was expressed that the visit would prepare the way for speedy connection of the town and district with the metropolis by rail. In the evening a banquet was given to honor of the Ministerial visit in the Town Hall, Terara, which was tastefully decorated with evergreens and flags. The room was quite filled, about 140 persons being present, and the proceedings were very successful. Mr. H. G. Morton, J.P., presided, and Mr. John Monaghan was vice-chairman. On the right of the chairman sat Mr. Stuart, Mr. Humphery, member for Shoalhaven; Dr. Tarrant, member for Kiama; Mr. Harris, M.L.A.; and on the chairman's left Mr. Dalley, Hon. J. Norton, and Mr. Gray, M.L.A. Besides the members of the Ministerial party there were present:—Mr. Holtermann, M.L.A.; Messrs. James Thompson, J.P.; James Warden, J.P.; James Wilson, J.P.; Z. G. Bice, J.P.; F. M'Mahon J.P.; James Frazer, J.P.; Lewis M'Intyre, J.P.; James Monaghan, William Lovegrove, F. W. Flatt, D. Finlayson, Hugh M'Kenzie, David Hyam, John Stewart, and Dr. Brereton. The preliminary toasts having been honoured,

The Chairman proposed "The Ministry."

The toast was drunk with cheering, and "They are jolly good fellows."

Mr. Stuart, who on rising met with a very hearty reception, said in his reply that the feeling in his mind most strongly impressed by this visit was that, whether he continued in office or not long enough to see their railway completed, he hoped to repeat the visit he was now making, for he never in his life had experienced three or four days of such intense enjoyment as he had in travelling through these southern districts. He had known for a long time by reputation of the beauty of their scenery, the fertility of their land, and the enterprise of the people; but he had no idea until he came and saw it for himself that the beauty was so grand and majestic as it was, or that the land had the magnificent fertility which it possessed, or that the enterprise of the people was so great as to his mind it was. He hoped that, as there were so many members of Parliament present, they would be as deeply impressed as he himself had been with the assurance that the district would pay for the extension of railway communication. He and his colleague, the Attorney-General, would return to Sydney with a very strong impression that they had not, previous to this visit, really understood or known the vast wealth of the country through which they had passed. They would go back with stronger feelings that the people of this district had got claims upon the Government, that in all matters of social and political necessity they had a right to be greatly considered. While he knew that the manifestation of welcome to him and to his colleague during this visit was given to their position as Ministers of the Crown, he recognised in it the most thoroughly loyal adhesion to the constitutional forms of Government, under which this country was living.

The hon. gentleman's speech was well received.

Mr. Dalley, who was greeted with prolonged cheering, said during the course of his speech that the district must have a railway, and it would be perfectly impossible for any Legislature to stand in the way of their obtaining the means of communication with the metropolis. If the present Government did not take steps to give it to them, they would be succeeded by gentlemen who would take those steps.

The Vice-Chairman proposed "The Parliament," which was responded to by Hon. J. Norton and Messrs. Humphery, Barbour, Harris, Olliffe, Tarrant, Butcher, Hutchinson, Dalton, White, M'Court, and Gray.

Mr. Stuart proposed "The Agricultural, Commercial, and Mining Interests of the District," which was replied to by Messrs. Lewis M'Intyre, John Macarthur, and Lovegrove.

Some other toasts were proposed, and the proceedings closed after midnight.

The Ministers leave here at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning for Jervis Bay, and, after being entertained at luncheon at Huskisson, will embark on board the Ajax and arrive in Sydney on Saturday night. The reception accorded to the hon. gentlemen throughout their tour has been most flattering, and the hospitality extended to them unbounded. They return to Sydney highly gratified with the result of their trip.

A deputation from the Kiama Progress Committee interviewed Mr. Stuart this morning, asking for improvements to the lighthouse, in order to make it more effective; for a recreation ground; for assistance towards the construction of public baths; and for recognition of a local Volunteer corps. Mr. Stuart said he would inspect the lighthouse before leaving, so as to have its defects pointed out to him and that he would give the matter of the recreation ground attention. The construction of public baths appeared to him a thing to be undertaken locally, but he would ascertain what had been done in the past in matters of that kind. With regard to the Volunteer corps, one of the last acts he had done was signing the approval of their corps being one of several new corps which were proposed to be added to our Volunteer force.

THE CONGREGATIONAL JUBILEE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—With your permission, I will add a few words to your report of the meeting held last evening in Pitt-street Church. The meeting was the last of a series which included all the Congregational churches of this colony, but it was not intended in any sense as a formal closing of the jubilee movement. The contributions from Bourke-street Church amount to £1320, instead of £700, as stated; and, in justice to those who were asked last evening to contribute the balance of a debt resting on the Sussex-street Mission Church, it should be stated that they had nearly all contributed largely to the various objects of the jubilee at an earlier stage of the movement.

I am, &c., J. F. CULLEN.

Churches and Chapels in England and Wales.—A Blue-book has been published containing a return of churches, chapels, and buildings registered for public worship in England and Wales, classified according to denominations. The number in which marriages are solemnised according to the rites of the Established Church is 14,573, and the places of worship belonging to other bodies number in all 21,343. Of these, 6469 belong to the Wesleyan Methodist (original connection), 3825 to the Primitive Methodists, and 1230 to the United Methodist Free Church; 2603 to the Independents, 2243 to the Baptists, 895 to the Calvinistic Methodists, 824 to the Roman Catholics, 495 to the Bible Christians, 375 to the Society of Friends, and 201 to the Presbyterian Church of England. Among the smaller bodies, the Jews have 60 places of worship, and the Catholic Apostolic Church, 47.

Our readers will do well to turn over to the Drapery advertisements and read the long list of reduced prices published by Messrs. Riley Brothers, of 388, George-street, near the Post Office. It almost seems incredible that such things as black satin parasols can be sold less than a shilling each, and a complete suit of serge coat, trousers, and vest for a man for 12s 9d; yet we are assured that such can be had, with over a hundred other articles at equally absurd prices, to-day, Saturday, and during next week at this firm's great discount drapery sale.—[Advt.]

DEPUTATIONS.

PUNT AT SACKVILLE REACH.

A deputation from certain residents of Windsor was introduced to the Minister for Works yesterday by Mr. H. M'Quade, M.L.A., to urge upon him the necessity of placing a punt at the lower end of Sackville Reach, instead of the upper end. After hearing the reasons advanced by the deputation, Mr. Wright said he promised a previous deputation that he would get an additional report from Mr. Broomfield on the subject. This had been furnished, and Mr. Broomfield ended with the following sentence: "It seems to me that from every point of view except the convenience of a dozen school children, the lower end of Sackville Reach is far better than the upper one." The report convinced him that the request of the deputation ought to be carried out.

REPAIR OF BRIDGE AT CAMPERDOWN.

A deputation, consisting of Mr. Thompson (Mayor of Camperdown), Mr. Pritchard (Mayor of Leichhardt), and several aldermen of the first named Municipality, were introduced yesterday by Messrs. Mitchell, Garrard, and Abigail, Ms.L.A., to the Minister for Works to request that the bridge on the Parramatta-road at Camperdown should be widened and placed in a proper state of repair. Mr. Wright said that the report of the officer was that a new bridge was required, which would cost about £660, and it would be necessary to place that sum on the Estimates and obtain the sanction of Parliament.

Mr. Abigail pointed out that the reconstruction of the bridge was not necessary, and a comparatively small sum only was required to widen the structure and place it in repair.

Mr. Pritchard called attention to the state of the Parramatta-road, which was a Government road. The effect of the tramway being laid down was to place the road on each side in a worse condition than it was before. The road had not been made properly for the last 20 or 30 years. If the whole of the road was laid with tar metal, there would be no dust, and the road would be a convenience to the public.

Mr. Wright promised to inquire into the matter.

ROAD QUIRINDI TO COONABARABRAN.

The Minister for Works received a deputation yesterday, introduced by Mr. J. P. Abbott, M.L.A., from certain residents of the Gunnedah district, who presented a petition signed by 400 inhabitants, praying for the opening of a road from Quirindi to Coonabarabran, so that greater facilities of transit might be offered for stock and carriers than existed on the road between Gunnedah and Coonabarabran. The necessity of this road was recognised not alone by the people of Quirindi, but of Coonabarabran, and the opening of the road would have the effect of largely increasing the agricultural settlement of the district.

Mr. Wright would not give any definite answer at present, but would, if possible, send an officer to make a special report as to the necessity of the road. At present the local officer's report was unfavourable to the proposal.

EXTENSION OF MARRICKVILLE TRAMWAY.

A deputation, consisting of Mr. Graham, Mayor of Marrickville, and several of the aldermen, waited upon the Minister for Works yesterday to urge the extension of the Marrickville tramway to Dulwich Hill, on the New Canterbury-road. A petition was presented on the subject signed by 235 residents, and it was pointed out that the road was an easy gradient, and the extension would be a great addition to the present accommodation. The propriety of erecting a small waiting-shed at Marrickville was also brought under the notice of the Minister. Mr. Wright said the officers of the department had reported against the extension altogether, and did not believe it would increase the passenger traffic. He would, however, visit the locality personally and satisfy himself upon the subject.

BRANCH RAILWAY FROM WALCHA-ROAD TO WALCHA.

Messrs. Farnell and Proctor, Ms.L.A., introduced an influential deputation yesterday to the Minister for Works, from Walcha, for the purpose of urging upon the Minister the propriety of constructing a branch railway or tramway from Walcha-road station, on the Great Northern railway line, to Walcha, a distance of 12 miles.

Mr. G. R. Gill presented a petition on the subject, which had been largely signed by residents of the district, pointing out that this branch railway or tramway would tend to the advancement of the district, and as it would travel over a level line of country for 10 out of the 12 miles, it would prove very inexpensive, and soon return the outlay. To show the importance of the district he pointed out that Walcha (included in Armidale) had 315,735 sheep and 31,778 cattle and horses, while at Tenterfield the numbers were only 86,820 sheep, 46,302 cattle, and 3157 horses; and Glen Innes, 212,224 sheep, 72,531 cattle, and 4626 horses. He thought, when the line from Queensland to our border was completed, Walcha would stand about first in importance for the Northern line. The district had a large population, and was rapidly increasing in importance.

Mr. C. D. Finnick quoted some statistics showing that the land revenue of Walcha from 1877 to the first three months of the present year amounted to £101,090, and the area of land selected from 1878 to the 31st March, 1883, amounted to 122,490 acres. This railway would enable the people to go in for a very much larger extent of cultivation than they were able to do at present.

Mr. Proctor said the line would not cost more than £36,000 altogether, and he was sure if the Minister took the whole thing into consideration there would not be the slightest difficulty in constructing a railway instead of a macadamised road as at present proposed.

Mr. Wright said he would have special inquiries made, and if a trial survey was justified he would see that one was made, although in consequence of so many applications for trial surveys being already in he could not promise that it would be carried out at once.

THE LAND OFFICE AT WINGHAM.

A deputation from Wingham and district was introduced by Messrs. J. H. Young and C. J. Robert, Ms.L.A. for the Manning, to the Minister for Lands yesterday afternoon, with reference to an alleged intention to remove the land office at the town named to Taree. The deputation represented that the land office had been held at Wingham for the last 25 years, and there had been no complaint against it being there. The great bulk of the land that yet remained to be alienated was situated westerly of Wingham, and there were some portions in the south-west which would be much nearer Wingham than anywhere else, and there would be far more people to go to Wingham than any other place. The courthouse had been removed to Taree, and very great injustice would be done to the great bulk of the people of the district if the land office was removed from Wingham. Mr. Farnell said that the Land Department had nothing to do with the removal of the courthouse, which was an act of the Minister for Justice, and the only question was whether he would be justified in having a separate land office at Wingham, at a cost of £300, while the police magistrate and clerk of petty sessions, who was also land officer, had been removed to Taree. He could not give them a definite answer until he had consulted his colleagues, and especially the Minister for Justice. A deputation from Taree was subsequently introduced by the representatives of the district, and presented a petition from the residents praying that a land office should be established at Taree, as being the most central position in the district, and the place at which district courts and courts of petty sessions were held. Mr. Farnell pointed out that a land agent was already appointed at Taree in the person of the police magistrate. However, he had promised a deputation which had just interviewed him that he would consider the propriety of having a separate land office at Wingham. He would communicate his decision to them in writing.

THE PROPAGANDA CIRCULAR: "AN AUTHENTIC TRANSLATION."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—With your kind permission "A stitch in time saves nine;" and so with the refutation of error. If ever a sample of a more pitiful blundering in matters theological were placarded up before the public gaze than "the better translation of Cardinal Simeoni's letter," recommended and endorsed by a would-be inspired source of information in this city, let the ecclesiastical archives from apostolic times be ransacked for it, let the most complete dictionaries of heresies be consulted for it.

Subterfuge and the evasion of the true meaning of words used by authority will be discovered. For "shady Catholics" (to use a term applied to myself in the quarter above mentioned) have frequently quibbled or equivocated whenever they wished to cover their disobedience. But I venture to say that they have invariably displayed some skill in the twisting of words, and betrayed only a more familiar acquaintance with the language of the Church.

But what will the future Catholic historian say of the "unique" skilfulness of the following translation, which is styled (pray don't be discomposed, I can hardly hold my pen), "ecclesiastical in contradistinction to the translation of the London Times," which is kindly allowed to be "scholastic." It will suffice to place a sentence of the original in juxtaposition with the Sydney adopted version:—

From Original of Papal Circular.	From Sydney Adopted Version.
"Enimvero juxta hæc præscripta fas est Hibernos fortunæ suæ afflictæ levationem quærere, fas est et pro jure suo contendere."	"For, indeed, in these rules it was set forth that it was an imprescriptible right for the Irish people to seek relief from their distressed condition, and an imprescriptible right for them to strive for their independence."

"Convicia in viros spectatos congeri," is translated—"Clamours against distinguished men sent on foot." I will quote no more from a translation, which, when I first read on its reaching these shores, I considered to be a good joke, got up in New York. Little did I think it would be adopted as "authentic" (sic.) and "better" in Sydney.

The supposed inferior scholastic translation of the Times is as follows:—"It is true that, according to those instructions, it is lawful for the Irish to seek redress for their grievances and strive for their rights;" and again, "that distinguished persons are loaded with insults."

"It has just been acknowledged in the inspired quarter where the responsibility rests for backing the above translation that a "lay mind" was answerable for a quid pro quo of the first magnitude, consisting apparently in the unwillingness or inability of distinguishing between an Encyclical and a Congregational circular. Will the same unfortunate "lay mind" be trotted out again as responsible for the above quoted literary blunder and literal insult offered to the intelligence of the Roman Catholics for this profane trifling with an authoritative document?

Oh, scapegoat, take thyself home; thou art not a legal animal, and bearest not the sins of Israel.

The Helen Nicoll (s.) left Grafton at 6 a.m. on the 18th instant, crossed the Bar at 4.15 p.m. same day, and entered Sydney Heads at 6 a.m. on the 20th. Experienced strong S.W. winds and a heavy sea throughout the passage. Cargo: 1447 bags maize, 161 hides, 6 pigs, 8 coops poultry, 25 cases eggs, 28 bags horns, 18 bags bones, 126 bunches bananas, 32 quarters beef, 24 baskets fish, 9 bundles sheepskins, 85 pairs wild fowl, 2 horses, 480 bags sugar, 3000 feet cedar, 193 ingots tin, 17 casks tallow, 1242 cases meat, and 60 packages sundries.

The Victoria (s.) left Port Douglas on the 13th instant at 9.30 a.m., called at Townsville on the 14th, passed Cape Moreton on the 18th, Smoky Cape on the 19th at 4.15 a.m., entered Sydney Heads on the 20th at 10.30 a.m., and reached the company's wharf at 11.30. Experienced fresh S.E. winds and fine weather to Sandy Cape, thence to the Richmond Heads light and variable winds, thence to arrival strong southerly winds and fine weather.

The Lyee-Moon (s.) cleared Port Phillip Heads at 6.30 p.m. on the 18th; passed Wilson's Promontory at 5 a.m. on the 19th, and rounded Gabo Island at 7.20 p.m. Jervis Bay was passed at 6.40 a.m. yesterday, and she entered the Heads at 1.35 p.m., berthing at the A. S. N. Company's wharf at 2 p.m. Light S.E. winds, with fine weather, were had to Gabo, and from thence moderate S.W. winds, with fine clear weather and heavy swell. At 8 a.m. on the 19th she passed the steamship Kent steering to the N.E. The Lyee-Moon proceeds to Brisbane at noon to-day.

The German steamship Catania, of Robert M. Sloman's line, entered the Heads yesterday evening, and after being granted pratique by the assistant health-officer, was towed to an anchorage in the lower part of Neutral Bay. The Catania is very regular in her passages, and the run from London to Adelaide was made in 48 days. This was inclusive of all detentions on the way out. The Catania left Hamburg with some 160 passengers, of whom 115 were for Adelaide, 10 were for Melbourne, and 35 are for Sydney. She took her departure on May 5, and arrived at Antwerp on May 7. After taking in her Belgian shipments the Catania left Antwerp on May 10, and steamed across to London, where she arrived on May 11, and took in cargo until May 19, on which date she left for the colonies. The passage was marked by ordinary weather down the Channel and along the Portugal coast, and all through the Mediterranean. Port Said was reached on the 1st ultimo, and the Canal was entered next day. Suez was reached on the 4th, and next day the Catania left for Adelaide. Fine weather was experienced until passing Cape Guardafui on the 12th ultimo, when strong S.W. monsoons were fallen in with. Moderate S.E. trades prevailed across the Indian Ocean, and on making the Australian land strong S.W. gales and heavy seas were encountered. The Catania arrived at Adelaide on the 9th instant, and after landing passengers and cargo for South Australia she left on the 10th, and experienced strong westerly winds until she reached Melbourne at noon on the 12th. More cargo was put out at Melbourne, and the passage to this port was resumed on the 18th at 1 p.m. The Promontory was passed at 2 a.m. on the 19th, Cape Howe at 8.45 p.m. same date, and the Heads were entered at about 6 p.m. yesterday. S.E. winds prevailed to Gabo, thence to port westerly winds and fine weather. The passengers who came out by the Catania were very much pleased with the vessel, and with the courtesy and kind treatment of Captain Petersen and his officers. During the voyage one of the passengers gave birth to a female infant. The names of Charlotte Catania were given it. The Catania is to be booked at the Grafton Wharf to-day.

The Coraki (s.) crossed the Richmond bar on the 18th at 4.30 p.m., and arrived at Sydney on the 20th at 10 p.m. Experienced throughout the passage strong southerly winds with heavy sea. Cargo: 1100 bags maize, 35 pigs, 27 casks molasses, 5 casks tallow, 2 coops poultry, 6 cases eggs, 150 hides, 200 pockets sugar, 7000 feet log cedar, and sundries.

The barque Clodian, which arrived yesterday evening from Launceston with a cargo of Tasmanian produce, was built about 13 years ago for the trade between London and Launceston, and though she has not been wholly employed in that trade, her principal work has been done between the ports named. She is a fine-looking wooden vessel of 480 tons register, and comes into port in excellent order. Captain Harris, who is in command, was formerly in the ship Jubilee, a regular trader some years ago between London and Sydney. He reports of the passage across that the Clodian sailed from Launceston on the 17th instant, and experienced a fresh southerly wind up to Kent's Group, which was passed on the morning of the 18th. From there to Cape Howe strong southerly winds, accompanied by squalls, were met with, thence to port the wind veered from S. to W., and was occasionally strong. There was a heavy swell throughout the passage. The barque entered the Heads shortly before 8 o'clock, but anchored down below until about 10, when she was towed to an anchorage below Garden Island by the tug Mystery.

The E. and A. Company's steamer Gordon Castle, for Dunedin, via Newcastle, left the harbour late on Thursday night.

The M. M. S. Melbourne, from Marseilles to Sydney via ports, cleared Port Phillip Heads at 0.50 p.m. yesterday, and may be expected to arrive here to-morrow forenoon.

A cablegram has been received by the chairman of the Eastern and Australian Fresh Meat Company, advising him of the arrival of the steamer Fiado at Batavia on Thursday last, with the first shipment of frozen meat, in good condition.

The P. and O. Company's R. M. S. Cathay, with the inward English mails via Suez, is due at Adelaide this afternoon.

The Orient liner Lusitania, from Sydney May 25 via ports, arrived at Plymouth on Wednesday.

The barque Freetrader, from Launceston, with a cargo of produce, was to sail for Sydney the day after the Clodian left; and the barque Palmyra was expected to leave for Newcastle about Friday or to-day.

THE KENT (S.).

Messrs. Money Wigram and Son's second new steamer, the Kent, arrived from London, via ports, at 6 o'clock yesterday evening, and after being passed by the assistant health officer, was towed to an anchorage in the lower part of Neutral Bay. This vessel is not to be mistaken for the steamer of the same name which was built for the same firm a few years ago. That Kent was sold to Continental owners, and now has a more classic name. The Kent now under review is a boat of a different description. The present Kent is a new vessel, fresh from the hands of the builders. In some respects she differs from the Essex, the pioneer steamer of the fleet. The latter has a poop with a comfortable saloon, and can accommodate a few passengers, but the Kent has not this luxury. Her saloon is under the bridge deck, and is intended only for the captain and officers. The Kent is the first steamer which the owners have had built on the Clyde. She was launched from the yard of the London and Glasgow Engineering and Shipbuilding Company, a Glasgow, this year, and the following are her dimensions:—Length, 330 feet; beam, 39 feet; and depth of hold, 25 foot 6-10ths. This gives her a gross measurement of 2484 tons, or a net register of 1619 tons. Her carrying capacity is equal to 4000 tons dead-weight and measurement, and that figure represents the quantity of cargo with which she left London. The hull is iron, and is straight stemmed. It is divided by bulkheads into watertight compartments. There are no tanks, however, for water ballast. These are dispensed with, and all space under the decks, except so much as is taken up by the engine-room, is given over for the reception of cargo. The Kent is schooner rigged, and the decks are unencumbered with houses or skylights. The engines are compound, with surface-condensing apparatus, and work direct action on the screw. The cylinders are fitted with double expansion gear. The diameter of the high-pressed is 38 inch, of the low-pressed 68 inch, and the piston stroke is 48 inch. The engines are of 300 horse power nominal, or 1600 horse-power effective. The boilers are cylindrical. They are two in number, and are made of steel. They are double-ended, and each is fitted with a super-heater of its full length. The boilers are 13 feet 9 inches in diameter, and 18 feet 6 inches in length. On the voyage out the engines worked exceedingly well, and an average 10-knot speed was maintained on a daily consumption of about 22 tons of coal. At Diego Garcia the Kent had the misfortune to lose one of the blades from the propeller, but even with this disadvantage she came along remarkably well. The Kent is under the command of Captain E. S. Babot, who was for years in the Hydaspes, and was last out here in the s.s. Durham. With him as deck officers are Messrs. Kimpton (chief), Prior (second), and Nash (third). All of them have been here before in Messrs. Wigrams' vessels. Mr. Nicoll, who was in the Somersetshire when she was a steamship, is chief engineer, and with him as second is Mr. Gillings, who was also in the same vessel. Captain Babot reports leaving London on May 14, and having moderate winds and fine weather across Biscay and through the Mediterranean Sea to Port Said, which was reached at 10 a.m. on May 27. After coaling, the Canal was entered next day, and at 11 a.m. on June 30 the Kent left Suez Bay. She arrived at Aden at 7 a.m. on the 5th ultimo, and coaled and left same day at 5 p.m. The ordinary monsoon weather was experienced down the Arabian Sea, and at noon on the 15th ultimo the Kent arrived at Diego Garcia, where the propeller got fouled, and one of the blades was lost. After taking in coal the voyage was resumed at 4 p.m. on the 17th ultimo. In crossing the Indian Ocean the Kent had to steam her level best against very strong S.E. trades, accompanied with a heavy head sea. Up till then some creditable steaming had been accomplished, and a number of the best days' runs were as follow:—241, 251, 255, 258, 264, and 267. There was a manifest drop from this rate, however, while the trade winds were about. Moderate breezes, inclining westerly, prevailed from lat. 19 S., and lon. 88 E., to the longitude of the Leeuwin. Thence strong breezes from S.W. to N.N.W. were met with until arrival at Adelaide at 4 p.m. on the 7th instant. Sunday intervened, and the Kent did not leave Adelaide until 1 a.m. on the 9th instant. Strong northerly and westerly winds marked the passage along the coast from the Gulf to Port Phillip, which was reached on the 11th instant. After discharging cargo the Kent left Melbourne on the 18th instant, at 11 o'clock a.m., cleared the Heads at 2 p.m., passed Wilson's Promontory at 1.15 a.m. on the 19th, Gabo Island at 3.30 p.m., and arrived as stated. Fine weather and S.E. and southerly winds were experienced during the run round from Melbourne. The Kent brings a valuable thoroughbred entire for Sydney. She is to be berthed to-day at the Circular Quay.

The half-yearly meeting of the Commercial Banking Company was held at noon to-day (Mr. Richard Jones presiding), when another of those very prosperous balance-sheets which the bank has been accustomed to issue for some years past was presented. It appeared from this that after deducting rebate on current bills, reducing bank premises account, paying note tax, and making provision for bad and doubtful debts, the profit for the half-year amounted to £91,617; previous balance, £10,987; making £102,605, which the directors appropriated thus—To payment of a dividend for the half year at the rate of 25 per cent. per annum, £75,000; reserve for equalisation of dividends, £15,000; undivided balance, £12,605. The report was adopted. Mr. Richard Jones was re-elected a director. Messrs. J. R. Street and J. H. Neale were elected auditors. A vote of thanks was passed to the directors, general manager, and officers.

In the Import Market the trade of the day, as of the week, has been remarkably quiet. Usually about the slackest month of the year, July this year has been exceptionally dull. This of course is to be attributed chiefly to the tightness of the money market, and the influence of recent failures. Stocks in some lines also continue far too large, but in others which were overdone we are glad to hear that there is a satisfactory working off. As the high rate of money, together with the unprofitable experience of the past 12 months, will both doubtless soon effect a more general reduction, and prospects of the season are fairly good in most parts of the country, trade may fairly be expected to revive in the spring. The trade in flour is extremely quiet, and the few sales transpiring are at late quotations. South Australian town brands, £12 10s. to £12 15s.; country, £11 15s.; New South Wales, £11 15s. to £12 5s.; Victorian, £10 15s. to £11 10s. Prime samples of wheat command 5s. 2d. to 5s. 3d. In tea the only sale coming under notice was 250 half-chests at 51s. 6d., the trade generally being quiet, pending the arrival of the new season's crop. In coffee only a very moderate business is doing; prices are firm, No. 1 Ceylon Plantation being quoted at 10d. For chicory, 5½d. to 6d., according to quality. Cocoa worth 1s. 5d. and 1s. 3d., Epps' and Taylor's respectively, with sales. There is not much doing in sugar; white, worth £35 to £36; yellows, £30 to £33; brown, £28 to £30; ratios, from £25, the company's tariff practically controlling the price of the outside lines of Mauritius or Australian. Our Mauritius correspondent, under date July 8, reports that no official price current had been issued during the month. Very little business had transpired, and no animation was looked for until the middle of August. Whites were quoted per 110lb. at from rupees 15·50 to rupees 16·50; yellows, from rupees 13·80 to 14·50; finest counters, rupees 14; good to fine browns, rupees 12; rations, rupees 10. Freights were without alteration. The arrivals from Sydney included the Eam and Sydney (s.). The departures were:—For Melbourne: Byfoged Christie and Glaslyn. For Adelaide: Crosowen and Harriet Nicholson. Here the otherwise ample stock of rice has been supplemented by a shipment ex Tannadice; prices are much about the same, from £14 being quoted for ordinary table sorts to £20 for fine table. With sago and tapioca the market is now excessively stocked, 1½d. is the value of ordinary trade sorts. White pepper is firm at 1s. 2d., black at 9d. In dried fruits sales of currants are making to 5d.; elemes, 6d., good fruit being scarce; sultanas, 6¾d. to 7d.; apples of prime quality scarce, and worth 6½d. to 6¾d.; inferior fruit plentiful, and very dull of sale. Moir's marmalade sold at 6s. 6d. The demand for fish continues very light; tinned salmon moving at 7s. 6d. to 7s. 7½d.; sardines at 4s. 3d. and 9s. 3d.; a good deal of poor quality of fish offering. Fresh herrings, 5s. 9d. to 6s.; red, 33s. Imported candles are almost entirely in second hands, and re-sales are making at 9½d. Colonial are quoted to 9½d., the market being firm. Salt is in small request; coarse, 72s. 6d.; fine, 87s. 6d. to 92s. 6d.; and rock, 65s. In brewers' goods the trade is slack; there are no buyers at the prices asked by speculative holders; the future of the market will apparently depend on the time when brewers are compelled to purchase. English malt worth 7s. to 7s. 6d. In liquors, bottled beer of best brands has a moderate amount of attention at up to 10s. 6d., second brands are dull of sale. Hennessy's brandy on the spot sells at 36s. and 50s. for single and three star respectively. Business was done in Bisquit Dubouche second-class brandy at agents' price. Lowndes' rum sold at 4s. A fair trade is noted in the leading brands of whisky, and there is a somewhat better demand for geneva at 10s. to 11s. 9d., according to contents. The trade in tobacco is steady; island twist obtainable at 1s. Cigars are in more plentiful supply, and Manillas—No. 2, 55s., and No. 1, 62s. 6d. In metals the activity still displayed in the building trades causes a good demand for galvanised iron; stocks are not large, some brands being very scarce. £22 10s. to £24 15s. may be given as the range of quotations for the different descriptions. Sheet lead in assorted parcels is moving off at £18. A somewhat better trade business has been reported in fencing wire, though we hear of no large sales; £12 15s., £13 5s., and £14 10s. are the nominal quotations for Whitecross. Wire nails were done at 15s. There is very little inquiry for tinplates; IC cokes worth 18s. 6d. to 18s. 9d. Cement is in active demand at from 16s. for foreign brands to 17s. 6d. for K. B. S. In oil, business in kerosene continues to be done at 1s. 6½d. to 1s. 7d. for the common sorts of American up to 1s. 11d. for high test; a good trade in colonial at 1s. 6d., with discounts. Raw and boiled plentiful, and prices easier, 3s. 3d. to 3s. 4d. may be quoted as value in drums; castor very scarce, and worth 4s. 3d., and to arrive at 4s.; 4s. 6d. asked for China, which also is very scarce. On the wharfs this morning there was a good supply of produce forward, but business was quiet. Quotations are:—Lucerne hay, £2 10s. to £3 5s. per ton; Warrnambool potatoes, £3 10s. to £3 15s.; Circular Head, £4 to £4 5s.; New Zealand, £4 to £4 5s.; Ballarat, £3 10s.; Victorian oaten chaff, £5 5s. to £5 10s.; ditto straw chaff, £3 15s. to £4; Melbourne onions, £3 10s. to £4; maize, 2s. 10d. to 3s. per bushel (bags in); feed oats, 2s. 4d. to 2s. 8d.; seed oats, 2s. 3d. to 2s. 5d.; butter, 1s. 6d. to 1s. 9d. per lb.; eggs, 1s. 6d. per dozen; cheese, 6d. to 8d. per lb.; bacon, 8d. to 9d.; ham, 10d. to 1s.; lard, 8d. to 9d. At the Darling Harbour railway sales the market was well supplied with produce, but there was not a large business done. Prices are:—Oaten hay, in bales, 4s. to 5s. 9d. per cwt., in bundles 5s. to 6s., in trusses 4s. to 5s. 6d.; wheaten and oaten hay, in bundles, 4s. 9d.; straw, in bundles, 2s. 9d. to 3s.; mixed chaff, 3s. 6d. to 4s. 3d.; straw ditto, 3s. to 3s. 6d.; pumpkins, 2s. 6d. to 3s. per dozen.

Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Limited, Hill, Clark, and Co., John Bridge, F. L. Barker, Brunker and Wolfe, and Mort and Co. held their weekly sales of tallow and hides to-day. A moderately large quantity of tallow was offered, and rather more than three-fourths was sold at up to £37 for mutton, and to £35 2s. 6d. for beef. For hides the demand was active, and about last week's rates were obtained, the range of values being from 3d. for light to 4½d., at which a few extra heavy were placed.

The Kent (s.) arrived to-day, from London; also the Catania (s.), from Hamburg and London; both via Melbourne.

The Orient liner Cuzco left this afternoon for London, via ports, with 527 bales wool, 60 bales skins, 10 bales basils, 40 bales leather, 2660 cases meats, 167 cases pearlshell, 1430 ingots tin, 21,299 ingots copper, 170 bags ore, 86 casks tallow, 37 bags gum, 20 cases oranges, 25 chests tea, 1 case cigars, 16 casks pyrites, 8 bales splits, 27 cases 38 quarter-casks wine, 200 quarters beef, 4342 carcases mutton, 3 boxes coin (£15,000), and 22 packages sundries.

The Customs receipts to-day were as follows:—

Spirits, £1515 3s.; wine (still), £200; wine (sparkling), £10; ale, porter, and beer (in bottle), £222 9s. 5d.; tobacco and snuff, £73 12s.; tobacco (unmanufactured), £133 10s.; cigars, £246 2s. 6d.; tea, £176 9s. 3d.; coffee and chicory, £3; sugar (unrefined), £80; molasses, £1 16s. 11d.; opium, £72 11s. 3d.; rice, £2 9s. 3d.; dried fruits, £38 6s. 8d.; hops, £3 12s. 6d.; specific duty, £556 17s. 4d.; bonding warehouse duty, £75; fisheries royalty, 12s. 6d.; pilotage, £62 13s.; Chinese restriction, £30: total, £3557 5s. 7d.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.
The Honourable John C. New, assistant secretary of the United States Treasury Department, one of the most distinguished public men in America, writes to the Charles A. Vogeler Co., Baltimore, Maryland, U.S.A., from the seat of Government at Washington, district of Columbia, as follows:—
"It is a source of satisfaction and pleasure to inform you that, from my own personal experience and observation, I am enabled to give St. Jacobs Oil my cordial recommendation.
"I have frequently noted the happiest results from its use as a speedy and effective remedy for the relief and cure of rheumatism and many other distressing painful ailments, and it is well worthy of all the highest praise that is said in its favour. Its magical effect has no doubt made 'It conquers Pain' a familiar watchword in millions of homes.
"I congratulate you on being the possessor of this remarkable agency of healing, and cannot but thank you for the benefit I have known to be derived from its use."

A STOCK-BROKER OF VICTORIA SPEAKS.
Mr. James O'Brien, the favourably-known stock and share broker, of Sandhurst, Victoria, sends this for publication:—
"For a considerable time I suffered from acute rheumatism. I tried remedies innumerable without experiencing relief. At the solicitation of a personal friend I was prevailed upon to try St. Jacobs Oil. After two applications the pain modified, and before the bottle was half finished the complaint entirely disappeared. You are at liberty to give any publicity to this testimony of the efficacy of this justly celebrated remedy."

£100 REWARD.
A cash reward of ONE HUNDRED POUNDS will be paid by the Charles A. Vogeler Company of Baltimore, Maryland, United States of America, Proprietors of ST. JACOBS OIL, or by their accredited local representatives, to any person producing proof to the effect that the testimonials published by them in regard to St. Jacobs Oil are not strictly genuine.

St. Jacobs Oil, the great German remedy conquers pain. Sold by Druggists, Chemists, and Medicine Dealers throughout the world. Price in New South Wales, Half-a-crown a bottle. Directions for using in eleven languages.

EXPLORATION OF NEW GUINEA.

(Extract from the Melbourne Age, June 13, 1883.)

". . . In connection with the Waltham Watch Company it may be stated that when the proprietors of the Age desired to present Mr. G. E. Morrison (the explorer to New Guinea) with a reliable Chronometer, acting upon the advice of Mr. R. L. J. Ellery, the Government Astronomer, two Waltham Watches were, however, procured for Mr. Morrison instead. These were kept at the Melbourne Observatory for a fortnight, and thoroughly and carefully tested, and were pronounced by Mr. Ellery, at the end of that time, to be better suited for Mr. Morrison's requirements than any Chronometer."

The Sydney Morning Herald.

SATURDAY, JULY 21, 1883.

The memorandum adopted by the Executive Council of Queensland for transmission to her MAJESTY's Government, and also to the Governments of all the Australian colonies, is a satisfactory document so far as it tends to remove misconceptions as to the object of annexing New Guinea. The situation is neatly described in a single sentence, "What is needed is that New Guinea should not fall into the hands of any foreign Power, and that some recognised authority should be created capable of dealing with lawless adventurers who might establish themselves in the island." This is a view of the matter which would command general concurrence throughout these colonies; and if the English Government could be persuaded that it fairly describes the whole case which now presents itself, the adoption of a more enterprising and provident policy might be looked for. The English Government naturally hesitates before undertaking large and costly experiments in the subjugation and control of savage races, and it naturally declines to be hurried onwards by colonial pressure where it does not clearly see its way. What we now require is that the English Government should be helped to see its way, and be shown that the undertaking is not of so formidable a character as it is supposed to be. Let this be thoroughly understood, and we may find the English Government giving that authority for the extension of the Empire without which we may be very sure the boundaries of the Empire cannot be extended. The memorandum, we are told, justifies the act of annexation. It is not surprising, after what has occurred, that this should be attempted by the Queensland Government. But in strict truth nothing has been annexed: there is no act of annexation to justify. The thing to be done now is to prove to the English Government the wisdom and expediency of a policy of annexation, so that the Imperial authorities may feel that they would be justified in performing that act of annexation which, to be real and valid, must be performed by themselves or by their authority.

The memorandum, however, proceeds upon the supposition that the annexation of New Guinea requires united action on the part of the colonies, and, starting from that point, proposes that a movement shall be begun for the establishment of a federal government for Australia. As it appears to us, there is here either a confusion of thought or an endeavour to build a very large superstructure upon a foundation that is inadequate and does not properly belong to it. Let it be admitted as probable that the scruples of the Imperial Government might be removed by united action on the part of the colonies, it does not follow that anything more than we already have in the nature of federal union is required, or that the occasion offers any legitimate suggestion for the formation of a federal government. The annexation of New Guinea would be essentially an enlargement of the Empire, but its primary object would be the protection of Australian interests. It is therefore a matter of simple equity that the colonies which desire to have their interests protected in this way should pay a fair proportion of the cost. Nothing can be more reasonable than that the colonies, when acting together in the endeavour to influence the Home Government, should act together also in the matter of a formal guarantee to share the expense. This is a fair subject for correspondence between the colonies, but it is not fair ground for undertaking a revolutionary constitutional change which would sacrifice the independence each colony now possesses to an idea. The memorandum sets forth that "the necessity of forming a government for New Guinea might afford justification and ground for federal action which might lead to federation." It is not easy to understand exactly what this means; but there seems at least inconsistency in first contending that the thing to be done in New Guinea is a very small thing indeed, and then suggesting that to do it requires the establishment of the cumbrous machinery of federal action, that would be the precursor of a federal government by which all Australasia would be controlled. There is enough of federation to carry out the very simple arrangements which the circumstances of New Guinea require if the colonial Governments would accept the British Government in this matter as their federal head. It should be easy to arrive at a common understanding and to frame a scheme of concerted action in a small matter of this sort. The memorandum suggests the holding of a convention of delegates to discuss the basis upon which a federal government could be constituted. How such a scheme as this arises out of a business which need involve nothing more than the appointment and maintenance of half a dozen resident magistrates in New Guinea and the neighbouring islands it is hard to conceive. If the really urgent requirements of the case are so small as they are represented by this memorandum to be, it is hardly necessary even that all these colonies should take part in the enterprise. If any of them do not consider that circumstances require them to take part in it, why should they be compelled to take part? South Australia, for instance, hesitates. Why should her right to hesitate or even to refuse be overruled? It should not be forgotten that the object of federation would be to establish an authority that would overrule or destroy such rights, and to render each colony liable to be deprived of the power to carry out its own ideas of public policy. Under the strain of some immediate and overpowering danger such a sacrifice of liberty and independence might be justified; but to say that this small business of providing against the settlement of lawless characters in New Guinea requires or suggests it is like saying that when a man wants to crack an eggshell the suggestion is that he should mortgage his house to procure a steam-hammer.

The action of the French on the borders of the Chinese Empire has given just now a special interest to the question of Chinese policy, as not only France but the rest of the world is a little anxious to know to what extent China will acquiesce in the results of the Tonquin expedition.

The domestic as well as the foreign policy of China has been a matter difficult to understand, and it is by no means clear that even those who have resided in the country fully comprehend it. Mr. D. C. BOULGER makes a useful contribution towards this knowledge in the June number of the Fortnightly Review, and he points out that "the foreign policy of China has been evolved from the commotion of centuries, and is dictated by the urgent wants and necessities of an administration entrusted with a task of exceptional difficulty." China was brought into the family of nations against its own will, and the disinclination to admit foreigners has been by no means conquered. What concessions have been made have been done as a matter of policy. Mr. BOULGER says: "Had China the power to-morrow, and did she but see how to carry out a sweeping ukase against foreigners, we make no doubt that the decree would be passed without compunction, and that the thing would be done as effectually as it might." It is not done, simply because it cannot be done; but, so far as the sea-borne commerce is concerned, the Chinese have already discovered that there are some advantages in it. The first effect of establishing commercial relations with them was, in their view, adverse to their interests. We sold them more than we bought from them, and in payment we took their silver, the departure of which from the country threatened to be embarrassing. But after a time the increased demand in Europe and America for Chinese tea reversed the condition of things, and the Chinese found themselves to be gainers. They gained still further in respect of revenue by the establishment of the maritime Customs, by means of which commerce became tributary to the Treasury. This has largely, though not wholly, got rid of the previous prejudice, although there is still a very strong desire among the Chinese authorities to get a larger share of the benefit of their own trade. And there are two points in respect of which they are trying to do this, namely, the question of opium, and that of the land-borne trade between China and its neighbours. China does not like to be tributary to India for its opium, and the increased duty which the Government wants permission to levy is less with a view to get the revenue than to force the production of the article in China itself; in other words the Government is strongly protectionist, and does not like dependence on the foreigner.

As to the land-borne trade, Mr. BOULGER says: "The Chinese are consistent, whatever else they may be in their political action. Three leading sentiments form the basis of their national opinions. These are that their country has an inherent claim to superiority, that they have at all periods been a self-sufficing world to themselves, and that the vast extent of their territory makes it an action of prudence to abstain from cultivating close relations with neighbours independent of their authority." On the seacoast they have been compelled to modify their prejudices in this respect, but inland they fight against any concession, and will continue to do so. They do their best to prejudice the people of Thibet against commerce with India, in order that they may keep the commerce of that country to themselves, and have hitherto done so pretty successfully. They think that if their trade were to go their suzerain influence over the district would go also, unless they were to maintain it by disproportionate expenditure. For the same reason the Chinese have done their best to check Russian commerce on their borders, and they will do the same with regard to any French influence on the south. "The Chinese feel that the institution of trade relations with their neighbours will mean for them sooner or later, in one form or another, the loss of those territories which at present admit the sway of Bogdo Khan up to the Pamir and the Karakoram." It is not probable, therefore, that the Chinese will quietly acquiesce in the opening up by the French of any trade route by the river Songcoy. "The fear that it would form a precedent for demanding an equivalent concession in either Burmah, Assam, or Thibet will brace the mind of the Chinese rulers to face the most immediate risk sooner than sacrifice not merely their claims over the Empire of Annam, but the very raison d'etre of their foreign policy. The Chinese are not so uninformed as to suppose that if the great province of Yunan were thrown open to external commerce, and if it became the venue of English traders on one side and of French on the other, the maintenance of their administration would not be the simple and easy task that it is at present." Mr. BOULGER says that China is displaying persistency in asserting its suzerain rights even in cases where they seem to be shallow and far-fetched, but that a practical consideration is at the bottom of all this policy. Questions of trade and position are involved, and to the extent of her power China will resist losing any of her vantage ground. He thinks that in Tonquin the Chinese will allow the French to realise the full force of the climate and native resistance, and that if this does not render the French position untenable, in the last resort she will appeal to arms. Whether this policy is right or wrong, he maintains that it is ingrained in the ideas of the people, and that to depart from it would mean a break up of the great Empire.

As to the power of the country to sustain great wars, he points out that it rests on the very solid foundations of an immense industry on the part of an immense people. The military administration is very corrupt, and the civil administration is very defective. But whatever may be the faults of the governing classes, the people have all the virtues necessary, not merely to success in life, but also to the preservation of society. The Government, therefore, has a most powerful instrument at its command, and if that instrument is wielded with discretion and vigour, the country is on its own ground strong enough for anything that may be required of it.

The correspondence which has been published during the past few days respecting the new hospital in Macquarie-street shows that in public opinion the case is by no means settled. It continues to impress many disinterested observers that Macquarie-street is not the place for so large a hospital as the new building now promises to be. At first only a comparatively small building was thought of. Gradually, by the suggestions of its promoters, and the consent of the Government of the day, it has grown into the magnitude of a palatial edifice, whose cost will not be less than a quarter of a million of money. The building is to stand upon a site of four acres in extent. That a hospital of such magnitude should be so limited in its surroundings cannot be justified. No one has satisfactorily answered the objection to its being in Macquarie-street at all. Standing there its relation to the city will be unfortunate. A hospital for the treatment of disease should be as far removed from a crowded city as a graveyard should be from a church. If the place is to be used for hospital purposes, only accident cases should be received. For such cases we do need a building placed as conveniently as possible. But Macquarie-street is not the best place for that, and besides it is needed for, and ought to be devoted to, other public purposes. A hospital for the treatment of medical cases should have larger surroundings, and should be removed from outside population as far as is consistent with public health, and opportunity for the attendance of medical men. If these considerations are not sufficient to induce the Government to call a halt, possibly the large sums of money necessary to the carrying on of this stupendous work will induce Parliament to call it. There is every desire on the part of the public that ample provision should be made for the sick poor; no necessary convenience or comfort will be grudged to them; but it is a very grave question whether anywhere a building of such proportions and such materials should be erected for such purposes. It is not yet too late to suggest a change. The matter is of sufficient importance fully to warrant the Government to reconsider it; and if that were done probably the weight of argument would at once be seen to be on the side of a change of purpose for this building, and the erection of a less costly and more suitable hospital for surgical cases in some other part of the city.

If Mr. SERVICE had not a reputation for being a good man at figures, and if he were not endorsing what Mr. GILLIES had previously stated, it would be scarcely possible to believe that Sir BRYAN O'LOGHLEN and Mr. BENT had so much misled themselves, and misled the Assembly, over the money available for new railway lines. Sir BRYAN announced that there was about two million and three quarters sterling available for new lines, and Mr. BENT chopped the money up into little bits, and gave a fraction to nearly every constituency. It now turns out, however, that there is not a single shilling available, for when the existing lines have been finished off, and the rolling stock ordered has been paid for, all Sir BRYAN's loan is sucked up. He went out of office, therefore, just in time to save the country from getting into an awkward scrape. Mr. BENT's Railway Bill of course lapsed with the dissolution, and no obligations had been incurred in connection with it; but if it had so happened that the bill had been previously passed, and contracts had been entered into, the country, instead of having, as it supposed, the money available for these undertakings, would have had to borrow the entire amount. The present Government does not seem prepared to take up Mr. BENT's policy, but at the same time it cannot entirely refuse to go forward with railway extension, so Mr. SERVICE proposes to borrow a million for fresh railways, and include the amount in the next loan. This, though less than was hoped for last year, is as much as the Government thinks prudent while the process of renewing the old railway loan is going forward. It is a disappointment, but is it not a greater disappointment to find that responsible Ministers can so utterly blunder as to mislead Parliament to so serious an extent? If the country cannot put faith in the authorised Treasury accounts, what is it to do? When Parliament is told that the money is available, and that it may freely vote it, it is entitled to put confidence in the official utterances. Sir BRYAN is not chargeable with any deliberate attempt to deceive, but he has certainly shown himself a most incompetent financier, and the Government was not taken out of his hands a day too soon. The reaction that set in against him was more than justifiable, and if when he asked for a dissolution the country had known what it knows now, there would have been not merely a defeat but a universal condemnation. If he is to recover his political position, it must be in some other line than as a financier.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Two hundred deaths from cholera are reported to have occurred at Cairo. The epidemic has assumed such serious proportions that the Khedive has accepted the offer of the English Government to assist in checking the progress of the disease by sending a number of English medical men to Egypt.

THE British Government has despatched Sir C. Rivers-Wilson to Paris to confer with Baron de Lesseps in regard to certain financial details connected with the proposed second Suez Canal. In regard to this work it is stated that French bankers are offering to find the capital necessary to defray the cost of construction. The English Tories, in discussing the agreement with Baron de Lesseps, deny that he has any monopoly beyond that connected with the present canal. Mr. Gladstone is on Monday to make a definite statement to the House of Commons as to the course which the Government has decided to pursue. The protest of the Queensland Government against the agreement is regarded as premature, as the agreement has not been formally sanctioned by Parliament. If it had been sanctioned by Parliament, the protest would probably have been regarded as too late.

A MEETING between the Emperors of Germany and Austria is to take place at Gastein, on the 4th proximo. What the meeting is to be about is not disclosed by our cablegram.

MONS. TRICOU, the French Minister at Shanghai, is now at Pekin, having gone thither to confer with the Chinese Imperial authorities respecting Tonquin affairs.

AT the meeting of the select committee of the House of Commons appointed to inquire into the merits of the Manchester Ship Canal Bill, held on June 4, Mr. Leader Williams, engineer, said the length of the proposed canal from Runcorn to Manchester would be 21 miles 5 furlongs. Rather less than one-fourth of it would be entirely tidal. The width of the canal at Manchester would be 200 feet water level and 170 feet at bottom. Space would be provided at the Runcorn end for four vessels of 46 feet 6 inches beam to pass. The depth of the canal would be about 26 feet, and the mimimum depth 24 feet at low water. The docks at Manchester would be entered by two large locks. The dock of 70 acres would occupy the site of the old racecourse. The total length of the quays would be five miles five furlongs. A vast network of subsidiary canals would be connected with the ship canal. Six hours would be occupied by a steamer passing from the commencement of the canal to Manchester, including the locks. The cost of the canal and docks he estimated at about six millions.

MISCELLANEOUS items by cable state that the cargo of frozen meat sent home from Australia by the Lusitania has arrived at London in good condition. Sir Arthur Gordon is writing a book on the habits of the Fijians. Mr. Courtney states that the next Reform Bill to be introduced in the House of Commons will propose the extension of the franchise to women.

THE Pacific Mail Company's steamship Zealandia reached Auckland last evening three days in advance of contract time. She brings the English mails, via San Francisco, to June 14. She may possibly reach Sydney on Tuesday night.

THE following notice appears in yesterday's Gazette:—"Bacon, green, undried, or in brine, is liable to a duty of 2d. per lb., under the provisions of section 133 of the Customs Regulation Act of 1879 (42 Victoria, No. 19), as possessing properties in the whole, or in part, which can be used or are intended to be applied for a purpose similar to an article on which duty is payable under the Tariff Act 34 Victoria, No. 21. The said article approximating in its qualities or uses to imported bacon, upon which a duty of 2d. per pound is leviable, his Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, directs that bacon, green, undried, or in brine (whether in sides, middles, flitches, hams, or rolls), which has been submitted to any process of salting or otherwise, shall be subject to a similar rate of duty."

IN another column we publish an account of the great ceremonies and festivities which preceded and followed the coronation of the Czar on the 27th May last, as well as the proceedings at the crowning of their Imperial Majesties, written by our special correspondent, who proceeded to Moscow for the purpose. No other nation but Russia could furnish material for such a pageant, the magnificence of which has probably never been equalled.

THE chairman of the Eastern Australian Frozen Meat Company, Limited, informs us that their first shipment of meat to Batavia, per Fiado, which sailed from Brisbane on the 20th ultimo, has arrived safely in Batavia, with the cargo of meat in good order, 20 days out.

REFERRING to a telegraphic message which appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald of 13th September, 1882, regarding the seizure by the Victorian Customs of an invoice of watches, Mr. Donald Manson, the Australasian manager of the American Watch Company has called attention to the fact that the watches were not shipped by his firm. The statement in the telegram therefore which connected the seizure with the Waltham Company was incorrect. Mr. Manson has received the assurance of the permanent head of the Victorian Customs Department that the Waltham Company's dealings with that department have always been of the most straightforward and upright character, and that they are in no way connected with recent irregularities in the watch trade.

OUR Mauritius correspondent, writing on July 1, says that measles of a mild form were prevalent in the island; 35 deaths therefrom had occurred during the month of June. "The French s.s. Touareg, on which we are dependent for our supply of bullocks, is now overdue, and some anxiety is felt at her non-appearance. It may well be that Admiral Pierre has requisitioned her and her cargo at Tamatave, as the French Government have already done at Reunion with all the bullocks there. If the war continues down at Madagascar we are likely to suffer, as all the cattle have been driven inland by the Hova proprietors."

THE interest manifested in the annual sales of stud sheep during the past week has now considerably abated. Yesterday two sales were held; one being at the instance of Messrs. Wilkinson, Graves, and Lavender at Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin's wool stores, and the other at the Exhibition-building, Prince Alfred Park, where Messrs. Aitken, Jopp, Wilson, and Co., in conjunction with Messrs. Raleigh, Aitken, and Co., of Melbourne, brought a fine collection of merino sheep under the hammer. Although the bidding during the day was not very keen, some special lots sold exceedingly well; Messrs. William Cumming and Son, Mount Fyans, realising the best prices of the day, 20 rams averaging £114 12s per head. The next best average prices were obtained by Lieut.-Col. Buchanan, of the Titanga stud. The bidding for this lot was very keen. The average prices realised was £51 2s. per head for 20 stud rams. A few other sheepbreeders had a carefully selected number of rams for sale, but the prices were weak as compared with the importance of the flocks. This morning the well-known Canowie sheep will be offered for sale at Hill, Clark, and Co.'s wool warehouse, at half-past 10 o'clock. We are requested by Messrs. Fisken, Gibson, and Co. to state that the sales of stud sheep held on Thursday at the wool warehouse of the Australasian Mortgage and Agency Company, Limited, were in conjunction with Mr. Alexander Wilson, 9, Tattersall's-buildings, Sydney, and not, as stated in yesterday's paper, with Messrs. Trebeck and Son, who were only interested in the sale of Mr. C. Ayrey's Warranooke sheep.

LAST night the medical section of the Royal Society met at the society's rooms, Elizabeth-street. The chair was occupied by Dr. Manning, and a large number of members were present. Dr. Mackellar read a paper on the advantages of federal quarantine, and after some discussion a motion was unanimously affirmed that, in the interests of the health of the Australian colonies, it was desirable that such a system should be established.

THE following address of condolence was presented to Miss Kennedy on the occasion of Sir Arthur Kennedy's death on board the s.s. Orient:—"S.S. Orient, 4th June, 1883. Dear Miss Kennedy,—The sad bereavement you have sustained in the sudden death of your dear father has produced a profound feeling of regret amongst us your fellow-passengers of the first saloon. No words of ours can adequately express the deep sympathy we feel with you in the loss of one who, in so short a time, had completely won our respect and esteem by his kind and genial manner among us. We beg of you to accept this our sincere expression of condolence, and to be assured of our earnest prayers to Him, the healer of every wound, that He may give comfort and strength to sustain you in this your sore trial.—JOHN KELLY, chairman, on behalf of the meeting." To which Miss Kennedy replied:—"S.S. Orient. My dear Mr. Kelly,—I assure you that I am very deeply touched by the kind expressions of sympathy you have conveyed to me from my fellow-passengers. In my crushing sorrow it is a consolation to know that even in these boundless waters, and amongst comparative strangers, so many kind hearts feel for my desolate condition. I shall never forget this mark of kindness, and it will be gratifying to those at home to know that in this fiery trial I am not alone."

THE inquiry into the charges of heresy preferred against the Rev. J. Osborne, Minister of the York-street Wesleyan Church, was concluded yesterday, by the district meeting. After the evidence had been completed, Mr. Osborne addressed the meeting and then withdrew. After long and careful consideration, the meeting adopted resolutions to the effect that, after hearing Mr. Osborne's frank declaration of his religious beliefs, and his declaration of sincere attachment to the Methodist doctrine, his statements were cordially accepted as full and satisfactory. At the same time the meeting considered that his method of presenting these truths was at times so inexact as to produce the impression on the minds of some that he was erroneous in doctrine. In reference to the sermon on Roman Catholicism, in which the Rev. Mr. Osborne inculcated Christian charity, delivered in the York-street Church on April 22, the meeting resolved that it was convinced that Mr. Osborne was sound in the doctrines of Protestantism as held by the Methodist Church; yet from the evidence it was satisfied that in the former part of his discourse he was so unguarded in his statements as to appear to advance doctrines not in harmony with the Church standards.

A MEETING of the Lang Memorial Committee was held yesterday afternoon, at the Town Hall, the Hon. John Marks, M.L.C., presiding. Several lists of subscriptions were handed in, and a resolution was carried to the effect that the executive committee should publish the lists of the amounts received, with an intimation to those who had promised subscriptions that the committee would like to receive them as soon as possible; and to gentlemen who had lists, that the committee wished to receive them at once. The hon. treasurer, Mr. William Neill, J.P., reported that the amount already subscribed—deducting the expenditure incurred—was £1016 6s. 5d., and it was resolved that £1000 of this be invested on a fixed deposit receipt. The committee then adjourned for a fortnight.

A VERY enthusiastic meeting of drapers' assistants and supporters of the early closing movement was held at the Protestant Hall last evening. There was an attendance of about 800, and the Hon. G. R. Dibbs, Colonial Treasurer, presided. Addresses were delivered by the chairman, the Hon. G. H. Reid, the Very Rev. the Vicar-General, and others, and a series of resolutions was carried, to the effect that the physical, social, and moral interests of drapers assistants demanded that the hours of business should be shortened, in order to afford them time for recreation and improvement; also, that the social and domestic conditions of the people did not require that shops should be kept open to a late hour; and that the meeting pledged itself to assist in carrying into effect the early-closing movement, and invited the community generally to give its hearty co-operation by not shopping after 6 o'clock.

THE meeting convened for last night for the purpose of forming a Pastoralists' Club has been postponed until next week, owing to the inability of a great number of members to attend in consequence of the annual stud sheep sales. Due notice of the next meeting will be advertised.

A NUMEROUSLY-ATTENDED meeting of the only tee-total Masonic lodge in this city—the Manoah Lodge of the Scottish Constitution, No. 567—took place at the Freemasons' Hall, last evening, the occasion being as much to welcome the new Worshipful Master, Bro. John M'Lachlan, as to present a complimentary jewel and illuminated address to the outgoing Master, Bro. Robert Charles Foster. The jewel, a very handsome one, is of 18-carat hall-marked gold, and was obtained from the establishment of Messrs. Spencer and Co., London. The presentation was made by the substitute District Grand Master, Bro. Francis Davidson. A banquet on temperance principles succeeded, and loyal toasts were drank in tea and coffee and other temperance liquids.

A PUBLIC meeting was convened to take place yesterday afternoon in the Temperance Hall, to consider the advisability of urging the Minister for Education to introduce a system into the Public schools of the colony whereby instruction on the principles of temperance might be imparted. The meeting, however, lapsed in consequence of the paucity of the attendance.

AT the close of the proceedings at the meeting of the Burwood Municipal Council on Thursday evening last, the Mayor (Mr. Alderman Deakin) presented one of the members—Mr. Alderman Charles Beaver—with a cheque subscribed by each of the aldermen in liquidation of the law costs incurred in his defence in connection with the legal proceedings recently taken against him in his capacity as returning-officer at the last Burwood municipal elections. The Mayor explained that it was considered desirable to make this presentation at one of their meetings in order that the circumstance may be placed on the records of the council as an evidence of their kind sentiments towards Mr. Beaver, and of their implicit belief in his integrity. Refreshments were brought in, and Mr. Beaver returned his thanks in an appropriate manner for the compliment paid to him.

THE ladies of the congregation of St. John's Church, Ashfield, provided a very pleasant entertainment on Thursday evening, in the hall of the School of Arts. Tea was very prettily laid out on small tables on one side, and on the other upon a long table tastefully adorned with pot plants. Notwithstanding the unpropitious state of the weather there was a large gathering of guests. The Mayor of Ashfield took the chair subsequently, by request of the Rev. Dr. Corlette, and motions relating to the parsonage debt (of £1400) and the Church Society were passed, after speeches by the Revs. Dr. Corlette, S. S. Tovey, W. F. Uzzell, and by Messrs. Allum, Gibbs, and other laymen present. Promises towards the parsonage fund were made in the room by thirteen names, amounting to £280. Music enlivened the proceedings at intervals, some choruses being very nicely sung by the choir, and a song and duet by the Misses Shipway.

A CASE of a very unusual character, brought under a section of the new Criminal Law Amendment Act, was heard at the Central Police Court yesterday, before Mr. Clarke, S.M. Ralph Riley, formerly a member of the detective force, but lately acting as a private detective and the keeper of a private inquiry office, was charged with corruptly accepting a reward for the recovery of stolen property without endeavouring to bring the offender to justice. The information was laid under section 146 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, viz.:—"Whosoever corruptly takes or offers, or agrees to take, any money or reward, directly or indirectly under pretence or upon account of helping any person to any property taken or obtained or converted or disposed of in such a manner as to be punishable by this Act, shall (unless he has used all due diligence to cause the offender to be brought to trial for the same, be liable to penal servitude for five years." The prosecutor was Henry O'Brien Wilson, who described himself as a farmer and squatter, and stated that he had been staying in Sydney for the last two months. On the night of Saturday, the 7th instant, he was in a billiard-room in Castlereagh-street, when a disturbance took place, and he lost a gold and platinum breast-pin which he was wearing at the time. He did not know how he lost the pin, but believed it was stolen from him in the disturbance. A day or two afterwards he received a letter from Riley to the following effect:—"Sir,—If you will call at the office at 6 p.m. this evening, I will be able to assist you in recovering the pin stolen from you in Castlereagh-street the other evening. I remain yours faithfully, R. M. RILEY." Wilson called upon Riley, who told him that he had succeeded in tracing the pin, but that it would cost a substantial sum to recover it, that it had passed through two or three hands, that he had had a great deal of trouble in tracing it, that it would cost £2 to get the pin from the person who had it, and that he (Riley) would expect £1, to repay him for his trouble. Wilson remarked that it would be a dear pin to him, as it cost only £2 5s. originally, but he was prepared to pay the money for the recovery of the pin. He subsequently paid the £3 over to Riley at his office and received the pin. Riley represented that the person who had the pin was going to Queensland. Wilson had never asked who it was that had the pin, and had not been told. He admitted in cross-examination that he did not tell Riley that he wanted to prosecute anybody for stealing the pin, that he was sent to a magistrate by a detective in reference to this matter, that he then laid an information against Riley, and that he would not have taken that action if the police had not asked him to do so. The prisoner was committed for trial, bail being allowed.

IT has been reported to the police that a little boy, nearly five years of age, the son of Mr. Thomas E. Colebrook, residing at 46, Harris-street, Pyrmont, died at 8 p.m. on the 18th instant, from the effects of a number of burns received on the morning of the same date. Mr. Colebrook states that his son slept in a room adjoining his upstairs, and at about 7 o'clock on the morning of the above date he heard him crying. On proceeding to ascertain the cause of his cries he discovered him in a dining-room down stairs with a nightshirt, which he was wearing at the time, in flames. He immediately extinguished the fire, and then conveyed the deceased to the Sydney Hospital, where his burns having been attended to by Dr. Couttie, he was taken back to his home. In the evening at the hour mentioned he succumbed to the effects of his injuries, the shock the little fellow had received being too great for him. The deceased told his mother that he was lighting a fire when his night-shirt caught fire accidentally. The matter was reported to the Coroner yesterday morning, but an inquest has been dispensed with, as Dr. Norrie, under whose care the child was placed, has certified to the cause of death.

A YOUNG woman named Mary Donnelly, engaged in domestic service with Mr. Coward, of Redfern, met with a serious mishap on Thursday night. She was a passenger by the 11.33 tram from Waterloo, and the conductor took her ticket just before the corner of Botany and Redfern streets was turned. When he got to the next compartment he saw that she was missing, and, concluding that something had happened, he immediately blew his whistle, and the tram was pulled up. The passenger was then found lying on her back some little distance from the rails, and was picked up insensible. The conductor placed her in the car and she was brought on to the Sydney Hospital. On the way she regained consciousness, and explained that she had stood up to see where she was, when the sudden turning of the tram as it went round the corner caused her to lose her balance, and she fell out. On reaching the hospital she was shivering a good deal and appeared very cold, complaining of great pain over the left shoulder-blade and on the right side of the back, also in the head. No marks of injury were discernible.

A FATAL accident happened to a child named Walker at Parramatta yesterday. The baby—who was not much over a year old—was left at home in charge of his brother, whose age is about five. By some means the younger child's dress got ignited, and before assistance could be rendered he was burned to such a degree that he died about two hours afterwards. An inquest was immediately held, and a verdict of accidental death returned.

THE dead body of a newly-born male infant was found on the beach at Rushcutter Bay yesterday by two boys. They were strolling in the vicinity, when their attention was attracted to an object which proved on examination to be the remains of a child. Information of the discovery was given to the police, who took charge of the body pending an inquest.

A SAD accident happened yesterday at Waverley, when a child named William Bingham, nearly two years of age, was drowned in a tub of water. The little fellow, who resided with his parents in Albion-street, Waverley, was noticed playing about a short time previously, and it is presumed that he must have walked to the tub and accidentally fallen in.

THAT was an amusing telegram from England (writes "Endymion" in the Queenslander) which informed us that Sir Samuel Wilson had denounced the British Government for refusing to annex New Guinea. That denunciation must have made Mr. Gladstone feel very bad. Sir Samuel is, I believe, in some respects a worthy person. I understand he gives good dinners and is hospitable. But of all the wealthy Australians who spend their revenues in England he is probably the one whose opinion carries least weight. How any telegraphic agent should have come to regard his utterances as worthy of transmission to this side of the globe is incomprehensible.

A LETTER sent us by Mr. J. Baynes, who was a passenger for England by the R.M.S. Bulimba (says the Brisbane Courier), states that that vessel had her propeller stripped when in latitude 3° north, 600 miles from Colombo. Mr. Baynes writes, under date, Colombo, 6th June, and says:—"I wish to call the attention of the Government of Queensland to the importance of having the blades or propellers to the two gunboats now under construction made of other than cast iron, as it is quite unreliable. In proof of this, note the many accidents lately to the B. I. S. N. Company's boats, the last to my knowledge being the Bulimba. In about 3° north latitude, weather fine, ship rolling, two of the blades fell off; two hours after the remaining two went, leaving a stump about 18 inches long. With this we had to travel 600 miles to Colombo. I am sure steel is the best metal to make those blades of—steel tempered to straw or dark blue colour. Steel is the only metal that will stand the vibrations of a steel ship. Gun metal is the next best, but cast iron is cheap, and yet how very dear they will be to some. To those remaining on board the notice of Captain Clarke is—"You will be charged 10s. a day expenses after Saturday next, or go on by the Navarino."

MR. JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER, the American poet, has, it is stated, been so deeply impressed with the publication of the Carlyle letters by Mr. Froude, that he has destroyed the major part of his correspondence extending over 50 years, lest it should be published after his death, and bring suffering to any. He has expressed a wish that all the letters that he has written to friends should be treated in the same manner.

THE New York correspondent of the Standard says that in May 11 priests there received a letter conveying Cardinal M'Closkey's request that they would not attend the meeting of the Irish League called to ratify the resolutions of the Philadelphia Convention. The request was generally but not universally obeyed. Mr. Wallace, a leading member of the League, says:—"The Church authorities do not wish the clergy to mingle in Irish politics in this country; but with the priests or without them the Irish movement will go on. The priests are wise guides, their advice is always respected; their presence and counsel often proved the antidotes in our meetings to wild schemes. I question the wisdom of any action which raises a barrier between the priests and the people. I consider it inconsistent with my duties as a Catholic to be remiss in my duties as an Irishman to my native land." This, the correspondent adds, is significant, in view of the reported summoning of all the American Archbishops to Rome to receive the Pope's instructions on the approaching Plenary Council. The use of American funds to foment Irish disturbances is doubtless the primary cause of the summoning of the council, which is expected to prescribe a uniform rule of conduct in place of the present wide discretion. It is further said that the ecclesiastical discipline in the United States is considered too lax generally.

THE Times notes that nearly all the objections to the Corrupt Practices Bill proceed upon the assumption that voters ought to be solicited, canvassed, circularised, and generally whipped up by the candidate who wants their votes. The general effect of the measure will be to make this impossible, and to leave the result of an election to the spontaneous action of the electors. The Times thinks that a man who does not care enough about the questions at issue to cast his vote without all the cajolery and persuasion now lavished upon electors does not in any real way represent the mind of the country. When the bill becomes law it will probably increase the number of abstentions, and it will operate in favour of that party which is most in earnest throughout its rank-and-file. An abiding and intelligent interest in the party programme will take the place of mechanical marshalling of careless voters on election day, and this would seem to be a distinct gain to the country, however inconvenient it may be for a party destitute of a programme capable of inspiring the mass of its nominal supporters.

THE Company of Grocers (says St. James Gazette), have announced the following problem as the subject of competition for the first quadrennial discovery prize of £1000:—"To discover a method by which the vaccine contagium may be cultivated apart from the animal body, in some medium or media not otherwise zymotic: the method to be such that the contagium may by means of it be multiplied to an indefinite extent in successive generations, and that the product after any number of such generations shall (so far as can within the time be tested) prove itself of identical potency with standard vaccine lymph." The prize is open to universal competition, British and foreign. Competitors for the prize must submit their respective treatises on or before the 31st of December, 1886, and the award will be made not later than May, 1887. In relation to this prize, as in relation to other parts of the company's scheme in aid of sanitary science, the court acts with the advice of a scientific committee, which at present consists of the following members:—Messrs. John Simon, F.R.S.; John Tyndall, F.R.S.; John Burdon Sanderson, M.D., F.R.S.; and George Buchanan, M.D., F.R.S.

ON the question of appointing princes of the royal family to Governorships of colonies, the Times of June 5 observes:—"Any attempt to invest the princes of the royal family with a new character must end either in breaking down the barriers which now surround them and exposing them to the rude criticism of the market-place, or in seriously hampering the Queen's Government and injuring the public interests. It is in highest degree undesirable and improper that members of the royal family should be candidates for office. They stand too high and too immediately in the shadow of the throne to be subject to that complete control by responsible Ministers upon which our whole system of government reposes. A prince is liable, like other men, to err. As Viceroy of India or of Canada he might place himself in a position which would render rebuke, censure, or even recall desirable in the interests of the country. It is evident that in such a case a Prime Minister could do his duty only in face of influences to which he ought not to be exposed; and also that if he surmounted these influences a change—impalpable perhaps, but real—would be effected in the position of the royal family itself."

THE following is the order of musical service at St. Andrew's Cathedral for to-morrow afternoon:—Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis, Dr. Stainer; anthem, the tenor solo "Penitence," from the late C. Packer's "Crown of Thorns" will be sung by Dr. Ellis, and followed by the chorus, "There is Joy, from Sullivan's "Prodigal Son."

ARRIVAL OF THE ENGLISH MAIL AT AUCKLAND.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

ACTION FOR FALSE IMPRISONMENT AGAINST SIR ARTHUR GORDON.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

WELLINGTON (N. Z.), FRIDAY.

The action for the recovery of £8000 damages for illegal arrest and false imprisonment, brought by Mr. Hunt, ex-Premier of Samoa, against Sir Arthur Gordon, High Commissioner of the Pacific, was tried and concluded to-day before Mr. Justice Richmond and a special jury. After several technical points of law had been argued and decided, the Court having ruled that Mr. Hunt was a British—and not a Samoan—subject, and, as such, liable to the authority of Sir Arthur Gordon, who had power to remove him from Samoa, the only question really left for the jury to determine was the issue raised as to the plaintiff's imprisonment or detention for 27 days. The jury returned a verdict on that issue only for £100 damages, adding, through their foreman, an expression of regret that the withdrawal of so many issues on legal point had debarred them from giving the plaintiff more substantial damages.

ACCIDENT to the BARQUE LOCH KEN.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

WELLINGTON (N. Z.), FRIDAY.

The barque Loch Ken, bound from Auckland to London, has gone ashore in the Frith of Thames, at the entrance to the port of Auckland. The accident happened during thick weather, and is attributed to an error in the compasses on board. She is likely to float off safely.

ARMIDALE, FRIDAY.

The hotel kept by Enos Scott, on the railway line, about 20 miles from Armidale, was stuck-up last night at 10 o'clock by two armed men with masks on. A son of Scott's was shot in the leg. About 12 people in the hotel were ordered into one room, whilst the bushrangers got about £100, all the cash in the house, and decamped.

The police have received information which makes it appear certain that the two men have been working recently in the locality, and that they were well acquainted with Scott and the premises. The persons who were in the hotel at the time of the bushrangers' visit were ordered into the bar, and were kept watch over by one man, having a loaded revolver in each hand. The other man compelled Mrs. Scott to hand him the cash-box, containing about £100. All the inmates were then searched, but only a few pounds was got from them. One man present had in his pocket a roll of notes, but he managed unperceived to drop them behind the sofa. Young Scott's leg was only slightly wounded by the bullet. The bushranger's hands were observed to tremble greatly whilst holding the weapons when keeping watch over the room, causing the revolver to go off by accident. He had no apparent intention of discharging the weapon with which he shot the lad. After securing their plunder, both men left the hotel on foot. The police expect to run them down before they get out of the locality.

CHOLERA IN EGYPT.

LONDON, JULY 19.

In view of the rapid spread of cholera, and the inutility of the measures for its eradication, the Khedive has accepted the offer of the English Government to assist to check the progress of the disease. Sir E. Malet has accordingly requested the Government to secure twelve doctors, who will leave for Egypt with as little delay as possible.

THE PROPOSED SECOND SUEZ CANAL.

LONDON, JULY 19.

Mr. Gladstone will, on Monday next, make a definite statement in the House of Commons as to the course the Government has decided to pursue in regard to the Suez Canal agreement.

In the House of Commons the Hon. Evelyn Ashley, Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, said that a telegram has been received from Sir Thomas M'Ilwraith, Premier of Queensland, stating that strong discontent was felt in Queensland at the unsatisfactory nature of the conditions of the agreement entered into with Baron de Lesseps. Mr. Ashley, however, expressed the opinion that the protest was somewhat premature, as the agreement had not yet been formally sanctioned by Parliament.

The Government has despatched Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, K.C.M.G., to Paris to confer with Baron de Lesseps in regard to certain financial details connected with the second Suez Canal agreement.

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

The Steam Navigation Board to-day held an inquiry into the grounding of the steamer Williams on Point Lonsdale reef while towing the George Roper. Mr. Croker appeared for Captain Richardson, the master, whom, the board, without retiring, exonerated from blame. The board also held an inquiry respecting the cause of the wreck of the steamer Blackboy, which occurred whilst attending the wreck of the George Roper. Mr. Croker appeared for Captain Stafford, and for Messrs. Dean and Company, the owners of the steamer. The board held that the Blackboy was lost through an accident, for which her master was in no way responsible, and he was exonerated. The board also freed Captain Stafford from an imputation of having been the worse for liquor at the time of the disaster.

A fire occurred at the public offices, Treasury Gardens, on Thursday evening, and it might have been very disastrous had it not been discovered early and promptly extinguished.

The Sunday Observance League has resolved itself into a permanent organisation under the designation of The Lord's Day Observance Society.

A committee has been formed at Brighton to collect funds to reimburse Mr. Maurice Griffen, father of Miss Griffen, who was recently prosecuted there for forgery.

The Boards of Advice Conference held its last sitting and concluded its business to-day. A discussion took place on Major Smith's circular, and a recommendation that it should be cancelled was carried by an overwhelming majority. The conference re-affirmed the opinion that night schools should be abolished, except in those cases where the local boards of advice had requested their continuance.

A woman named Pemberton was charged at the City Police Court to-day with selling liquor without a licence at the Victorian Hotel, Bouverie-street, Carlton. The police alleged that a Mr. Hay, the licensee of the hotel, had transferred his interest to the present defendant. On the other hand the defendant said that she was an employee, and was not keeping the house. The presiding magistrate said it was clear that the licensee had abandoned the house, and had allowed an unlicensed person to sell; but as the prosecution had been taken under a wrong section, the summons must be dismissed.

From the wreck of the George Roper to-day 430 cases of spirits were recovered.

Burns, the man who is charged with murder of Michael Quinlivan at Wickliffe, was again placed on his trial to-day, before the Chief Justice and a jury, at Hamilton. It is expected that the case will conclude to-morrow.

The Pilot Board to-day inquired into the grounding in the South Channel, on the 4th instant, of the barque Jules Marie. The master, John Roddy, had only an exempt certificate for the West Channel, and the board found him guilty of misconduct in attempting to take charge of the vessel while passing through the South Channel. His exempt certificate was suspended for a month in consequence.

A meeting of the creditors of Messrs. M'Curtin Brothers, storekeepers and millers, was held to-day, at which a statement was presented which showed their assets £8844, and liabilities £8858. It was decided to assign the estate for the benefit of the creditors to Messrs. W. K. Thompson and R. J. Alcock.

The annual distribution of awards by the Royal Humane Society of Australasia took place in the Town Hall this evening. The Governor was present. Addresses were delivered by the Hon. Graham Berry, the Chief Secretary, and Mr. Justice Higinbotham. It was announced that as the society was empowered to distribute awards in the colonies the Royal Society of England would refrain from doing so in future. In the list of awards all the colonies were represented except Western Australia.

Referring to a telegram that cholera, measles, and smallpox were prevalent at Fiji, the Union Steamship Company have received a telegram from Auckland that there have been neither deaths nor fresh cases since the Poonah coolies were placed in quarantine.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

PERTH, FRIDAY.

The debate on the address in reply to the Governor's speech took place to-night.

The Governor's speech is generally approved.

It is expected that the question of responsible government will shortly be brought forward for discussion. It is supposed that nine of the elected members will vote for the change, and that seven will vote against it. Four of the nominated members are against the change. Four of the official members will probably remain neutral on the question.

Reports of a very unfavourable character have been received concerning the state of the country in the south, where the feed is said to be bad, and the stock suffering. From elsewhere accounts have been received of an exceptionally good season, which is since confirmed.

Letters were received by this mail from Mr. Anthony Hordern, stating that he is prepared to carry out the proposed land grant railway to the South Australian border. He has been in communication with the Adelaide Government on the subject. The Council will probably accept his railway scheme to construct the land grant railway to Eucla, 750 miles north-east from Albany.

Marooney, who is supposed to have been concerned in the late mysterious murder near Kojonup, was captured near Bremer Bay, on the road overland to Eucla, on the South Australian border.

COUNTRY NEWS.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

NEWCASTLE, FRIDAY.

A little girl named Suter, residing at Cook's Hill, fell into a tub of boiling water and received a terrible scalding yesterday.

The ketch Santa Cruz was towed safely off the Oyster Bank by the steamer Adeline, having only lost a portion of her bulwarks.

David Thom, draper, was brought up at the Lambton police-court to-day, on remand, charged with incendiarism in connection with the recent fire which destroyed the premises of John Hughes, of Elder-street, Lambton. He was committed for trial, the bench unanimously declining to grant bail.

The week's Customs revenue was £1372 11s. 11d.

The weather has now cleared up.

ARMIDALE, FRIDAY.

Good progress is being made in floating the new Gas Company. 7000 shares have been applied for, leaving only 1100 more to be taken up. The first meeting of the provisional directors was held last night, when 3500 shares were taken up in half an hour, and it is fully expected that within the week the remaining shares will be allotted. £8000 is the nominal capital fixed on, with the view of only calling up 15s. per share, as competent judges affirm £6000 will be quite sufficient to erect the works and start the company.

BEGA, FRIDAY.

The ceremony of opening the new Public School to-day was a great success, and, the weather being fine, there were nearly 2000 people assembled. The building, a commodious structure, gives satisfaction, but it is certain that soon it will need enlargement. The cost will be nearly £3000. Endeavours were made without success to induce some of the Ministers now visiting the Illawarra district to extend their tour and be present on the occasion, also to induce the Hon. G. H. Reid, Minister for Education, as well as the Chief Inspector of Schools, to come, but they were not able to attend, much to the disappointment of the residents. The children assembled numbered 430, and the new building was crowded by them, their parents and friends, who came from far and near. Mr. John Davis, P.M., presided on the occasion, and amidst cheers declared the school duly opened. Mr. Kevin, the local inspector, delivered an address on the advantages of education. Mr. W. H. Wilson, the head teacher, also addressed the meeting. The children sang some pleasing songs at intervals during the proceedings, which were marked with good humour throughout, and were at the close regaled in the playground, where sports were indulged in by them and the visitors present.

BOMBALA, FRIDAY.

A farewell dinner was given on Tuesday to Mr. R. A. Warden, manager of the Commercial Bank here, by a few friends previous to his departure for Coonamble. Mr. Warden has only been here a few months, and regret on all sides is expressed at his departure.

CASINO, FRIDAY.

The railway project from North Grafton to Tenterfield is engrossing public attention. Next Thursday there will be a public meeting held to consider the question of petition to the Government to construct the line. It is intended to appoint a deputation to co-operate with the gentlemen chosen at Grafton and at Tenterfield to wait upon the Minister for Works with reference to this important matter.

Notwithstanding the report from local officials that there was 5 feet of water in the Rocks channel, between Coraki and here, the Jenny Rush, which only draws 4 feet 6 inches, grounded there on Tuesday, and was in consequence detained several hours, besides seriously damaging the copper on her hull. There being now a large trade in the river it demands that more attention should be bestowed on it by the Harbours and Rivers Department for the improvement of the navigation.

EDEN, FRIDAY.

Much dissatisfaction is expressed at the inconvenience suffered by the want of an assistant in the Post and Telegraph Office. The line repairer, who acts as assistant, is now away on the Gabo line, and there being no one to take his place, the post and telegraph master has more extra work than he can get through.

EMMAVILLE (VEGETABLE CREEK), FRIDAY.

The District Court was held to-day, by his Honor Judge Murray. The cases were not of general public interest.

The weather is beautifully fine. Rain is much wanted throughout the district.

GRAFTON, FRIDAY.

The dredge has completed the work of deepening the entrance to Carr's Creek. It has been placed on Dean's Slip for the purpose of viewing the copper on he bottom preparatory to the dredge being sent to other work in the upper river.

The weather has been very cold to-day, with a strong southerly wind blowing.

The racehorse The Jay has been purchased by Mr. S. Knight, of Sydney, for £200.

Ten selections were taken up at the Land Office last Thursday, embracing an area of 704 acres.

The Protector of the Aborigines has furnished 200 suits of clothing for the native blacks in this district to supply their much-needed wants, which have been frequently asked for.

Three men have been arrested and charged with assault and robbery of a man named Catt at Rocky Mouth. The prisoners were yesterday committed to take their trial at the next Quarter Sessions. One of them has turned approver, and his evidence will be used at the trial. They were all new arrivals. The police have arrested another man here charged with robbery from the person.

GOULBURN, FRIDAY.

Richard Graham, a resident of Marulan, whilst engaged in felling a tree yesterday got struck on the head by a branch, causing a fracture of the skull. The sufferer was brought to the Goulburn Hospital in an unconscious state. An operation was performed to-day. The patient now lies in a precarious condition.

The weather is fine and very cold. The thermometer has been lower the last few nights than it has been for years.

INVERELL, FRIDAY.

The annual meeting of the Inverell Pastoral and Agricultural Association was held yesterday, when there was an unusually large attendance of members. Mr. J. J. R. Gibson was elected president for the ensuing year, and Messrs. John Macgregor, John Sinclair, and Thomas Lather, vice-presidents.

Public feeling is at fever heat concerning the railway. At a meeting of the league yesterday, the president stated that Queensland was paying South Australia immense sums for wheat which came a distance of 1500 miles, whilst the Inverell district was only 140 miles away, possessing marvellous advantages over South Australia, but was unable to compete with that colony owing to the want of railway communication with Glen Innes. The railway delegates proceed to Sydney on Sunday next.

At the local land office, yesterday, 2835 acres were selected.

Great discoveries of tin have been made at Auburn Vale, about 10 miles from town. It is quite a new field, and should the ore assay well the supply apparently is unlimited. A rush from the neighbouring fields has already set in.

LITHGOW, FRIDAY.

A meeting was held in the School of Arts last evening, Mr. John Connell in the chair, for the purpose of presenting Mr. W. T. Targett with a purse of 110 sovereigns, in recognition of services rendered by him as member for Hartley. This expression of feeling on the part of the electors was thoroughly representative, coming from all parts of the electorate, and was first mooted by those opposed to Mr. Targett at the time of the last election.

The weather is bright and bracing.

MORUYA, FRIDAY.

The man against whom a warrant is out for cattle-stealing has not yet been captured, but the police are in close pursuit.

A very sharp frost was again felt last night.

NATTAI, FRIDAY.

A branch of the Commercial Bank was opened here to-day.

SINGLETON, FRIDAY.

At the annual meeting of the members of the Mechanics' Institute last night, a motion was made by Mr. J. Willis for opening the reading and reference rooms on Sunday afternoons. The voting was 47 for, 55 against the opening. Twelve members favourable to the motion were absent. In April last a division on the same question was 37 against, 14 for the opening. A great deal of interest was taken in the question.

TEMORA, FRIDAY.

A petition to the Government has been drawn up by the progress committee, and is in course of signature, setting forth the resources of the district and the necessity of a branch railway to Cootamundra, and praying for a trial survey to be made at once.

Mr. Kemp, the architect for the Department of Education, and Mr. Margrae, the clerk of works, paid a visit of inspection to the Public school buildings yesterday, and expressed satisfaction with the work.

The weather is fine, with clear days and frosty nights.

WEST MAITLAND, FRIDAY.

A railway guard had a narrow escape from serious injury this morning as the mail train was leaving High-street station. He attempted to get into the break van, but missed his footing and was dragged to the end of the platform. His position was very perilous, and created a sensation amongst a large number of people who were present. He succeeded, however, in getting into the van without personal injury.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRE ROYAL.

"The Grasshopper," a three-act comedy, adapted by Mr. J. P. Burnett from the French play "La Cigale," will be produced to-night at the Theatre Royal, the name part being assumed by Miss Jennie Lee, who in the course of the performance will sing a couple of comics songs. "The Grasshopper" is the sobriquet applied to a circus girl, who, being badly treated, runs away from her oppressors, and finds a true friend in a wandering artist, with whom she at once falls in love. While with him she is identified by an old family servant as Lady Ernestine Topsawyer, an heiress, who was when a child stolen from her friends, and she is restored to her rightful position. Her relations wish her to marry a young aristocrat, but both the parties most interested object to this, and ultimately Lady Ernestine, who never loses faith in "the chances of the cards," wins her aim, and is united to her artist lover. There is an amusing underplot, and the whole piece is full of "go" and merriment from start to finish. Miss Lee appears in several disguises, and introduces songs and dances which show the versatility of her talent. The company includes all those who played in the drama when it was so successfully produced in Melbourne among them being Mr. H. R. Harwood and Mr. William Hoskins. New scenery for the piece has been painted by Mr. John Hennings.

GAIETY THEATRE.

This evening the Gaiety Theatre, which has been closed for some time, will be reopened under the management of Herr Bandmann, who brings with him a London comedy company, and will open in the drama "Proof." This piece is by the celebrated French author, M. D' Ennery, and has been translated for Herr Bandmann by Mr. F. C. Burnand, the editor of London Punch. The company includes Miss Louise Beaudet, who has appeared here before with great success; Mr. Augustus Glover, from the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, London; Misses Jennie Gwynne and Blanche Reives, Mrs. Rodney, and Mrs. Lobbett, said to be from the principal West End theatres, London. The members of the management have also engaged several local families and a large staff of supernumeraries. The theatre has been renovated, and with new scenery, dresses, and appointments, should present a good appearance this evening. According to the Brisbane press, "Proof" is an excellent drama of the sensational order, and should prove attractive to a large section of the theatre-going public.

THE OPERA HOUSE.

The weather being beautifully fine last night, "Les Manteaux Noirs" drew another large audience at the Opera House, even the dress-circle being unusually well attended for Friday evening. The opera was played with great spirit, and the amusing complications in the mill scene elicited continual bursts of laughter. As to the characters, it is difficult to decide which to admire most—the graceful dignity of the Queen, the charming simplicity of Girolla, the village maiden, or the grotesque blundering of Dromez, the miller. All the gems of the opera were encored, and the applause throughout was enthusiastic.

PROFESSOR SIMON'S ENTERTAINMENT.

An entertainment of a novel and very interesting character was given, privately, at the Masonic Hall yesterday afternoon, by Professor Simon, a character reader. The proceedings opened with a brief lecture by the Professor, in which he referred to the structure and functions of the brain in relation to the physiognomy and gesticulation of man, and gave illustrations of various postures and manner of walking of different people, as being indicative of their mental characteristics. The audience were then asked to nominate subjects for treatment on the platform. A number of well-known citizens, including two members of Parliament and an editor, were then named by the audience, and these gentlemen took their seats on the platform with their hats on. Each in turn was directed to walk up and down the platform; the Professor watched them walking, and closely scrutinised the features of each, and then gave an outline of the character of each, mentioning of course only those characteristics which could be spoken of in complimentary terms. In every instance Mr. Simon accurately named the kind of calling which each gentleman was probably following, and the characteristics ascribed to each were at least approximately correct. For instance, he described one as being fond of law, and he proved to be a lawyer; another as a writer, and he proved to be a journalist; another as fond of mechanical pursuits of an artistic character, and he proved to be a goldsmith and jeweller. Mr. Simon was then blindfolded by somebody chosen from the audience. The whole of the gentlemen who had been examined seated themselves, with their hats removed, in positions and order different from those they had previously occupied, a stranger also taking his place among them, and the Professor then approached each backwards, being still blindfolded, and by merely feeling their heads and foreheads correctly identified the whole of them. When he came to the stranger who was among them he stated that it was somebody whom he had not examined. The method of judging character appeared to be a combination of phrenology, physiognomy, and gesticulation, and the results obtained were certainly surprising. The subjects of treatment yesterday were gentlemen well-known in the city, and were selected at random by the audience themselves. The calling of each was correctly described in every instance, and their identification was effected by the Professor while blindfolded without a single mistake. Professor Simon intends to give public entertainments in Sydney.

It may interest the theatre-going public to learn that the reason why Mr. W. E. Sheridan did not leave Sydney some days ago, as he had announced his intention of doing, was that he was arrested on the very eve of his departure, at the instance of a former agent of his, now resident in Melbourne, upon a claim which Mr. Sheridan disputes. The tragedian has remained here for the purpose of testing the claim, and of taking proceedings to set aside the arrest, on the ground that it was made at the very last moment, whereas a month previously he had taken his ticket and announced his intention of leaving Sydney. In the meantime, Mr. Sheridan will give a series of readings here, commencing next week, and from the excellence of his dramatic performances, and the praise his readings have gained elsewhere, we are justified in anticipating that these entertainments will be pleasant ones.

The Kennedy family will open at the Protestant Hall on Monday night in their Scottish entertainment "Twa hours at hame."

On Wednesday evening the service of song, "Given in Charge," or "Little Joy's Mission," was given at the Congregational Church, Central Township, North Shore, before an audience of about 90 people. The readings were given by Mr. Broadfoot, and the musical portion was rendered by the North Willoughby church choir, conducted by the Rev. S. W. Asher. The service was made specially attractive through the kindness of Mr. Arthur Roberts, of Messrs. Weekes and Co., the publishers, who not only lent but himself exhibited some 30 coloured photographs illustrative of the service, by means of the magic lantern. These pictures (which were shown for the first time publicly) were the means of more deeply impressing the subject of what excess in drink will lead men to do. The service was opened and closed with prayer.

A most enjoyable concert was given in aid of the Trinity Young Men's Institute, on Thursday evening, in the Trinity Schoolroom, by the St. Mark's Hand Bell Ringers, assisted by lady and gentlemen amateurs. The Venerable Archdeacon King, who presided, in a few well chosen words thanked the ladies and gentlemen who had contributed to the evening's enjoyment, and eulogised their efforts. Mr. C. Shepherd, organist of Trinity Church, acted as accompanist and musical director.

CATHOLICISM IN GERMANY.—Statistics are claimed by the Catholics of Germany to show a large percentage of conversions to the Church of Rome from the Protestant aristocracy. Since 1800, it is said that no fewer than 44 persons belonging to the "high nobility" have gone over, including three princes (Solms-Braunfels, Isenburg-Birstein, and Lowenstein-Wertheim), the Princess of Kourland, the Duchess of Sagan, 11 counts, 12 countesses (including the well-known Countess Hahn-Hahn), 13 barons, and three baronesses. On the other hand, the statement declares that only nine members of the Catholic aristocracy have been converted to Protestantism—namely, the Princess of Leiningen, three counts, three countesses, one baron, and one baroness. Among the lower German nobility the Church of Rome is also said to have made many proselytes.

PAPER DOMES.—The Americans have certainly shown us the way in substituting paper for iron. We learn that the special feature of the new observatory at Columbia College, in New York, will be a paper dome. This will be the fourth paper dome in the United States, and in the world, for in no other country has paper been yet applied to such a purpose. The first paper dome made is at the Troy Polytechnic Institute, the second at West Point, and the third at Beloit College. While that at West Point is the largest, that of Columbia College is the best in construction and arrangement. The method used in the manufacture of the paper is kept a secret, the makers using a patented process.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

COURSING—THE WATERLOO CUP MEETING.

THIRD DAY.
[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN REPORTER.)

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

The special train which left Spencer-street at half-past 10 o'clock this morning for Digger's Rest was well patronised, although not to such an extent as on the two preceding days. The weather was everything to be desired, and, in fact, throughout the meeting the Victoria Coursing Club have been particularly fortunate in this respect, and the Waterloo Cup of 1883 must be considered as the most successful ever held in Australia. Weak hares were decidedly the exception throughout the meeting, so that the qualifications of the competing grehounds were amply tested. The day's proceedings commenced punctually at 12 o'clock with the first ties of the Waterloo Plate, the first competitors on the card being Ballarat Judge and Hollingworth. The former being drawn, Messrs. Hall and Kite's dog ran a bye. Proserpine ran a very brilliant trial against Gorce, and Queen of Hearts scored a narrow victory over Real Grit. In the second ties, Hollingworth not being in a fit state to run, was drawn, and as the Czar defeated Queen of Hearts, the deciding event lay between the former and Proserpine. In this event Gas led Proserpine by two lengths for the turn, and throughout a trial of moderate length proved much superior, Proserpine not running with that dash and fire for which Mr. Wagner's bitch is noted. In the Waterloo Purse second ties, Sam, the ultimate winner, had a very easy trial with Chanticleer, leading up and at once picking up his game. Captivity met Girolla the 2nd, and led up for the turn, but failing to hold possession, the latter equalised matters. In the exchanges which followed, the hare somewhat favoured Girolla, for whom the course resulted in a narrow win. Werribee Shadow easily defeated Golden Arrow, and in the third ties the last named and Sam defeated Girolla the 2nd and Cowslip 2nd respectively. The deciding course resulted in a win for Sam, Werribee Shadow having injured her foot in the previous trial. In the fourth ties for the Waterloo Cup, Rhodanthe led Legerdemain, and after turning twice past her opponent, whom she had placed, scored a meritorious kill. Though Shrewd Girl was first away from the slips, Thrift reached the hare a length in advance, turned, and placed her opponent who put several strong points together, finishing with a smart kill. The deciding, therefore lay between Rhodanthe and Shrewd Girl. The former led up by 2 lengths, turned, served herself, and turned again. Shrewd Girl then got placed and became remarkably busy, but before the opening points could be wiped out, Rhodanthe dashed past, scored a clever kill, and was hailed the winner of the Waterloo Cup. The judging of Mr. Gatenby throughout was considered to have been the best that has marked any meeting that has been held in the colonies. The following are the results:—

WATERLOO PLATE.

FIRST TIES.

Hollingworth had a bye, Ballarat Judge drawn
Proserpine beat Gorce
Queen of Hearts beat Real Grit
Gas beat Bob Audley.

SECOND TIES.

Proserpine a bye, Hollingworth drawn
Gas beat Queen of Hearts.

DECIDING COURSE.

Mr. W. Thomson's bk w d Gas, by Chester—Mint, beat Mr. W. P. Buchanan ns w b Proserpine, by Charon—Elsa, and won the plate.

WATERLOO PURSE.

SECOND TIES.

Sam beat Chanticleer
Cowslip 2nd beat Traveller
Girolla 2nd beat Captivity
Werribee Shadow beat Golden Arrow.

THIRD TIES.

Sam beat Cowslip 2nd
Werribee Shadow beat Girolla 2d.

DECIDING COURSE.

Mr. A. Clark ns be w d Sam, by Grenadier—Bertha, beat Mr. G. Mayger ns bk w b Werribee Shadow, by Bashful Joe—Ruby and won the purse.

WATERLOO CUP.

FOURTH TIES.

Rhodanthe beat Legerdemain
Shrewd Girl beat Thrift

DECIDING COURSE.

Mr. J. W. Crosbie ns w bk b Rhodanthe, by Rebellion—Westeria, beat Mr. J. B. Scott's w bk b Shrewd Girl, by Damascus—Pert, and won the Waterloo Cup.

FOOTBALL.

The Universitys will play eighteen of the Glebe club this afternoon, at Wentworth Park.

Clubs from Redfern and H.M.S. Diamond played a very enjoyable game yesterday afternoon on the former's ground, Moore Park, despite the inclement state of the weather, which resulted in an easy win for the Redferns. Messrs. Walker and Morris acted as skippers, and Mr. Johnstone did duty as umpire. Walker, Williamson, and Gilbert did yeoman service on behalf of the dark-blues, whilst Morris, Wilkins, Hines, and Lawson played splendidly on behalf of the navy. After the match the visitors were entertained at Hook's Hotel by the local team, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

SYDNEY HOMING PIGEON SOCIETY.

On Saturday a race was flown between birds belonging to members of the abovenamed society, from Gunning, a railway station on the Southern line, and distant from Sydney 165 miles. There were only five competitors, and it was arranged that the birds should be released together, which was accordingly done at 10 o'clock. The weather was then fine and favourable for pigeon-flying, and this fact will to some extent account for the remarkable performance of two of the winners. The result was as follows:—Mr. Hordern's "A." 146 minutes 1; Mr. Hordern's "B. D.," 146 minutes, 2; Mr. George Smith's "Prince of Wales," 250 minutes, 3. From the above it will be seen that the time of journey was very short indeed; in fact, no race from the place named has been flown so rapidly. The first two birds are bred from birds imported some 12 months ago by Mr. Hordern from Mr. N. Barker, of Brussels, who, in forwarding them, confidently predicted they would earn distinction with their progeny. Mr. Smith's bird is a son of his hen-bird "Queen," who did so well some years ago.

The sculling match between Trickett and Beach will come off on Saturday, the 28th instant. Trickett is now in full training at Gladesville, and is in good health.

The race for the championship and £200, between Aplitt and Malone, will come off to-day at the Agricultural Ground, Moore Park, and not at Botany, as first arranged.

Arundel was scratched for the Great Metropolitan Stakes at 9.50 this morning.

Our Melbourne correspondent telegraphs that the V. R. C. Winter Steeplechase Meeting will take place to-day. There was brisk speculation last night over the National Hurdle and Steeplechase. For the former Prospect was supported at 45 to 20, and later on was firm at 2 to 1. Matador was supported at 9 to 2, and Spark at 5 to 1 (tk.). For the National Steeplechase, Australian Count (late Stag) was firm at 3 to 1, Sailor at 4 to 1, and Trumpeter was supported by his owner for a couple of thousand at 100 to 10.

Our Orange correspondent telegraphs that some excellent coursing took place on Thursday and yesterday. There were 30 entries for the All-comers match, which concluded yesterday, when Mastyn's Chloe beat Cassidy's Leda in the final heat.

BANQUET TO MR R. B. SMITH, M.L.A., AT KEMPSEY.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

KEMPSEY, FRIDAY.

A banquet attended by 100 of the leading residents of the Macleay was given to Mr. R. B. Smith last night at Kempsey; the chair was taken by Mr. F. Panton, J.P., the vice-chairs by Mr. A. Cochrane and Mr. W. T. Dangar. After the usual loyal toasts were proposed, the chairman, in very complimentary terms, proposed the health of Mr. Smith, which was drunk with much enthusiasm. Mr. R. B. Smith responded in an excellent speech, which occupied two hours in delivery. He gave a brief summary of all the political questions which had engaged the attention of Parliament for the last two sessions. He particularly dwelt on the Land Law and the Local Government Bill, the introduction of which he had strongly advocated. He also referred to all the leading questions affecting the legislation of the country, and at the conclusion of his speech he was enthusiastically cheered. The banquet was regarded as the most successful that has taken place in Kempsey. To-morrow Mr. Smith is to be banquetted at Gladstone.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ROCKLEY, FRIDAY.

Bimnamagoo copper mine is looking splendid; another lode has been struck, 5 feet wide of solid gray ore, averaging 30 per cent. Smelting works are to be erected at once.

EMMAVILLE (VEGETABLE CREEK), FRIDAY.

Mining matters are very quiet here. Prospecting is being vigorously carried on in the basaltic country beyond Rose Valley. The Ottery lode, at Tent Hill, is turning out very satisfactorily.

MOUNT M'DONALD, FRIDAY.

Oliver's leasehold and Good's freehold have just finished cleaning up from 12½ tons quartz from their new find. The result was very satisfactory, being 930oz. 6dwt. 21gr. The shoot, however, has run out, but it is the intention of the manager to sink on it at once. This is the best crushing ever turned out on this field. It only cost about £25 to land at their own battery.

IT will be a source of pleasure to many of our readers to learn that Sir Alfred Stephen, who has long suffered from partial deafness and pains in the ear, has completely recovered under the skilful treatment of Dr. Stanich, of Wynyard-square, as will be seen by the following certificate which has been sent to us for publication:—" College-street, 2nd July, 1883. Some months ago I had slight deafness in one ear, accompanied occasionally by pain. Professor Stanich removed a film or parasitic growth from the tympanum of the ear, and my hearing is perfect, without discomfort of any kind. Dr. Stanich has attended a member of my family for deafness of long standing in one ear, and has already been of benefit in that case also.—Alfred Stephen."—[ADVT.]

THE ROYAL SOCIETY.

An ordinary meeting of the Medical Section of the Royal Society, was held at the Society's Rooms, Elizabeth-street, last night. The chair was occupied by Dr. Manning, and there was a good attendance of members.

GRANULAR OPHTHALMIA.

Mr. Thomas Evans read a paper on the use of the Jequirity bean in the treatment of granular ophthalmia. He also showed specimens of the bean, and referred to cases in which he had applied it with success.

FEDERAL QUARANTINE.

Dr. Mackellar, the Government Health Officer, read the following paper on the desirableness of establishing federal quarantine:—I have been invited to initiate this evening a discussion upon the whole question of quarantine, and I willingly accede to the request, as I fully recognise the necessity for our arriving at clear and decided views as to what amount of quarantine restriction is and what is not necessary, in order to afford us the greatest amount of security from extraneous epidemic diseases. I propose, in a general and discursive way, to give a short history of quarantine, and to answer in the affirmative the three following questions: 1st. Is the imposition of quarantine in accordance with the teaching of modern medical science? 2nd. Is it advisable that a rigorous quarantine should be maintained throughout Australia? 3rd. Is it necessary that there should be a mutual agreement between our various Governments on this subject—in fact, a federal quarantine? During the short period in which I have held an official position in the Health Department of New South Wales, I have been asked so often, with such seeming earnestness, and by such intelligent and thoughtful men, whether quarantine is really necessary, that it appears to me that people, as a rule, have no very clear ideas upon the subject. Nor is this to be wondered at, as it is imposed at comparatively rare intervals, and perhaps not one in a thousand of our population has been at any time subject to its influence. Moreover, many commercial writers, and even some medical authors of the greatest repute, especially in those countries which have very large commercial interests at stake, and at the same time such a geographical position as renders efficacious quarantine in their case impossible, at times decry the beneficial influence to be derived from its imposition. A short time ago I had placed in my hands by the Government a letter written by Dr. Sedgwick Saunders, the Medical Officer of Health for the city of London, and addressed to the Eastern and Australian Steam Navigation Company, wherein the following sentences occur:—"Respecting the question of quarantine, it is pretty well agreed among American and English sanitarians that the medical inspection of a ship, with a proper supply of detached hospitals, is infinitely preferable to the detention of a number of healthy people for any portion of what may be termed the 'incubation' period. Quarantine is not only utterly useless in smallpox, or diseases of the zymotic class, which have a definite time for their development after exposure to contagion, but it leads to all kinds of deceit and falsehood on the part of those who are interested in clearing the ship, besides inflicting great personal inconvenience upon healthy persons." And, further on in the same document a very important statement is made, as follows:—"The most recent authoritative dictum upon this subject is that published in the 'Supplement to the Ninth Annual Report of the Local Government Board,' 1879-80, in a paper by Mr. J. Netten Radcliffe, where we find the following:—'Quarantine rests upon the traditions of medicine, not upon the existing state of medical knowledge in British medical schools as to the diseases to which it is applied. The experience of quarantine in this country has been such as to show its utter futility as a practical measure of precaution against the invasion of a foreign disease, and for some time past it has been seen that such medical reasons as can be pleaded for it are countervailed by medical and social reasons of quite equal force against it. Hence quarantine is now retained on the statute book for the purpose of avoiding certain disabilities to which our shipping would else be subject in countries in which quarantine is held to be an essential element in the prevention of certain spreading diseases.'" In the face of such a dictum one cannot wonder at the impatience exhibited by the trading community when one of their vessels is detained. What the medical reasons which countervail the performance of quarantine are, I know not, as the way in which we conduct it in this colony implies a strict adherence to known sanitary laws, such as the segregation of the sick, the disinfection of persons and things, and the thorough cleansing of vessels. The social reasons are apparent to all, but I think that if the commercial reasons had been added the matter would have been clearer still. So far as I can see, the whole of the objections to our quarantine may be summed up in the inconvenience and thraldom to persons, and the temporary damage to commercial interests. I have found that the position of control of the department under our quarantine law which I occupy is at times an exceedingly difficult one. Urged on the one hand to act with the greatest harshness and severity, in order to prevent the importation of diseases, such as the measles and scarlet fever, which, unhappily, had become endemic in this colony long before I was born, and on the other hand urged—and I regret to say at times coerced—to make the health inspection a mere matter of form, the boarding health officer at times also finds his position a difficult one, having to deal with two classes of objectors to inspection—one where he is urged to partake of the hospitalities of the ship, and the other where he is treated with churlish impertinence. The most trifling inconvenience which may be experienced by the passengers of vessels, and especially by those of mail steamers arriving at our port, is magnified to colossal dimensions, and the greatest objection is almost always shown to allow a proper examination to be made. At times the commanders of these vessels distinctly decline to aid the boarding officer in his work, and I regret to say that the surgeons occasionally display the same captious spirit, while at rare intervals a very young gentleman amongst them, from whose hands perhaps the odour of the dissecting-room has hardly yet had time to disappear, may become impertinently eloquent before the assembled passengers on what he chooses to term "the —— nonsense of quarantine." You may easily conceive that the position of boarding officer is not by any means a pleasant one; but I am glad to say that we have been singularly fortunate at this port in possessing gentlemen of stern stuff, not easily cajoled from their duty, either by the whisky and water of the first class, or the sneering impertinence of the second. The imposition of quarantine upon a ship not only implies a very serious monetary loss to her owners, but it also entails the arbitrary detention of a number of apparently healthy people—not because of any act of their own, but simply because they have been unfortunate enough to come within the range of virulently infectious disease. It is a sort of imprisonment without a crime, and I have, therefore, deemed it my duty, while enforcing a rigid examination of persons and vessels likely to endanger the public health, to make the detention of ships as short as is consistent with perfect innocuousness, and the imprisonment of the unfortunate passengers as free of unpleasantness as the circumstances of the case would permit. I may here give you a brief outline of the method in which we conduct our quarantine at this port. All vessels from places beyond the colonies are subjected to inspection by the assistant health officer, whether they have clean bills of health or not, unless they have touched at one of the colonial ports en route to Sydney; but on the Governor and Executive Council proclaiming that any port or country is affected with infectious disease, a vessel arriving from such country is rigorously examined, notwithstanding her having touched at and received pratique at a colonial port; and, moreover, in her case the examination must be conducted during daylight at the quarantine station. If the boarding officer is satisfied that her admission is not likely to endanger the public health, he immediately gives her pratique. But if the sanitary condition is such as to be likely to prejudice the public health, his duty is to detain her until a satisfactory cleansing process is effected, and should she have virulently contagious sickness on board the passengers and crew are detained for such a period as may be deemed necessary. For instance, on the arrival of a ship at this port with smallpox on board, she is immediately placed in quarantine; all communication with the shore, except through the medium of the quarantine officers, is interdicted; the patients and convalescents are removed to their respective hospitals, and the passengers and crew of the vessel, all of who have of course necessarily been within the range of infection, are taken on shore, isolated, and detained for 21 days, which term our experience in the late epidemic furnishes some evidence to show, may be considered as the limit of the period of incubation of smallpox. The principle which guides us is that persons who may reasonably be suspected to be incubating virulently infectious disease, should be detained for a sufficient time to allow the disease to develop; but that, with regard to ships, all that is required is thorough cleansing and fumigation, for in their case time is not required as being by any means an important element whereby we may obtain safety. When vessels arrive at night, except from proclaimed ports, the custom has been to have them immediately examined, and, unless the passengers are found to be suffering from infectious disease, to give them pratique; but I am by no means convinced that this is a safe course, because of the known difficulty which always attends the diagnosis of mild cases, and, after all, detention until daylight could hardly be considered a very great hardship, while it might prevent an error in diagnosis which would plunge the whole colony into epidemic sickness. What was by early Scriptural metaphor so aptly called "the pestilence that walketh in darkness," has from time to time throughout all ages spasmodically engaged the attention of mankind, but curiously enough this subject, which above all others has most materially affected the happiness of individuals, the prosperity of countries, and even the progress of the civilised world has for the most part only been seriously considered during the course of some awful epidemic, and at its close, nations have lapsed into the apathetic state until aroused by another similar calamity. As Hirsch says, "It is human nature to soon forget past sufferings. We bury our dead; a little time will dry our tears; in another little time we dance over their graves." In early times no effort seems to have been made to trace the epidemics which devastated Europe. The physicians of the 14th century seem not only to have been unable to cope with the terrible mortality of the black death, which swept off in four years one-fourth of the population of the old world, but they seem to have been unable in any way to trace its origin; and the same may be said of the pestilence called the sweating sickness of 1485, the plague of London in 1499, and again the sweating sickness in 1506. But during the previous century the inhabitants of the countries bordering upon the Mediterranean had begun to observe that the Levant was the channel through which these visitations reached them, and reasoning from the experience that communities isolated upon remote islands did not apparently suffer in the same ratio as the more easily-accessible populations, they seem to have formed the idea of a quarantine for all vessels arriving from that locality. At first this procedure arbitrarily entailed a detention for 40 days. Of late years this has been much modified, but the laws of those countries are still very arbitrary in their provisions as regards quarantine, and there is good reason to suspect that commercial jealousies have occasionally stimulated various ports to prostitute the law of proclaiming as infected their more prosperous neighbours simply in order to injure their commerce, and to irritate and annoy their rulers. However, the earnestness and vigour with which those countries still advocate a modification of the old system would seem to show that it must have rendered good service in the past. The subject of quarantine has been deemed of such vast importance by European nations that during the last 32 years no less than three have what have been called International Sanitary Conferences been convened to discuss the whole question. The first of these, which was held in Paris in 1851, was very comprehensive in its scope, as it undertook to determine the question of quarantine in respect not only to cholera, but also to other infectious diseases, and especially yellow fever, and the plague. It must be here noted that smallpox, typhus, and some other infectious diseases were considered endemic in Europe, and therefore were not discussed. There were present both consular and medical delegates from Great Britain, France, Austria, Russia, Spain, Portugal, Greece, Tuscany, Naples, the Papal States, and Turkey. For no less than eight months they continued their deliberations, and amongst them there seemed to be a very great difference of opinion as to the necessity for strict quarantine, especially as regards cholera, the British, French, and Austrian members being opposed to its being rigorously carried out; but it was nevertheless carried by a large majority that a modified quarantine should be maintained. The British did not assent, because the restriction upon the freedom of intercourse was considered unnecessarily harsh, but it is worthy of note that within a few years afterwards the quarantine of some of the countries represented was more rigorous than ever. The international conference on the same subject in 1866 which was held at Constantinople was chiefly on the subject of cholera; it was attended by representatives from Great Britain, France, Austria, Prussia, the Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark, Russia, Spain, Portugal, Greece, Italy, Sweden, and Norway, the Papal States, and Egypt. Here the French representatives seem to have taken the initiative, and to have recommended very much more stringent measures than those opposed by them at the conference of 1851. In fact, their proposal would virtually have stopped all trade in the Red Sea during the prevalence of cholera among the pilgrims who annually visit Mecca, and are so liable to its ravages. The English delegate again opposed, on the ground of interference with commerce; but the Swedish representative immediately met him with the argument that the interests of the public health should override all other considerations. The question that the Turkish Government should be recommended to adopt these rigorous measures was decided in the affirmative by a majority of 17 to 8. It was also decided that India, especially the valley of the Ganges, was the source from which the pestilence always rose; that it was transmissible by human intercourse between places was also shown; and the efficacy of restrictive measures was very clearly proved, the several countries which escaped the visitation of 1865 being those where a rigorous quarantine was maintained. And, finally, the fact that bad hygienic and general insanitary conditions predisposed places to virulent epidemics of cholera when once it was imported, was very generally agreed to. The last great conference which was held at Vienna in 1874 was the most scientifically conducted and the most important of all. It was called together by the Government of Austria, and no less than 21 Governments sent representatives. Its business was divided into four sections:—1st. Scientific questions relating to cholera and other diseases of epidemic nature. 2nd. Questions as to quarantine. 3rd. Concerning the formation of a permanent international commission upon epidemics. 4th. As to yellow fever. The discussion upon cholera occupied so much time that the last section was left out of consideration; but it was unanimously resolved that the first named disease could be, and was, transmitted not only by persons coming from an infected locality, but by the personal effects of those who have been affected, and it was, by a majority, resolved that it could be produced in a variety of other ways, which I need not now enumerate. The second question was divided into two parts, quarantine by land and quarantine by sea. Land quarantine was by a majority pronounced impracticable. But the conference expressed its approval of the measures recommended by the previous conference held at Constantinople as regards sea quarantine, and especially with reference to the Red and Caspian Seas. However, they provided an alternative measure to be adopted should cholera once again obtain a foothold in Europe, or for those States which preferred a milder course, in a system of medical inspection, and, if necessary, disinfection, without the detention of the apparently healthy. The project for the establishment of a permanent international commission upon epidemics was, I am glad to say, unanimously agreed to. Like cholera, yellow fever has what may be called a permanent home—this is situated in the districts within the Mexican Gulf—and at one time it was believed that it could not exist beyond this unfortunate locality; but we know that within the last five and twenty years it has frequently been carried from thence to new fields for its ravages, and epidemics of awful magnitude have been experienced in latitudes precisely similar to that of this city. It visited Brazil in 1852, the southern portions of Europe in 1870, in 1871 there was a terrible epidemic in Buenos Ayres, and it also occurred in Monte Video, while in 1873 it ravaged the Southern States of America. Clearly all these cases were first imported from the Mexican Gulf, where it is endemic; and that the authorities of the American States are thoroughly alive to this danger is shown by the very rigid inspection of ships they enforce in the Southern States. I must observe, however, the manner in which yellow fever may be conveyed is a point which has been warmly contested, and by several commissions decided in as many different ways; but I think that I am right in saying that all agree that it may be conveyed in clothing which has been used by an infected person. At the International Medical Congress of 1881 the subject of quarantine met with careful consideration, and it is only fair that I should say that on the whole a much modified system seemed to be viewed with most favour—rather a system of inspection and purification than one of detention. During the incubatory period Professor De Chaumont, in a paper there read by him, says:—"With reference to quarantine, as originally understood, I think that we may look upon this as a relic of barbarous times. It is impossible to carry it out strictly and absolutely, and anything less than that only inflicts commercial loss and personal hardships, besides in some cases increasing the danger it seeks to prevent. If vessels are carefully inspected, and the sick removed to hospital for treatment; all others who show no signs of illness, as tested by the thermometer, &c., might be allowed to leave, with the precaution that each should be stripped of his clothing, and take a general bath. The clothing, in the meantime, should either be disinfected by heat or destroyed, the owners being compensated. Steps should, of course, be taken to cleanse and fumigate the vessel, and to disinfect everything on board. With proper hygienic measures at home, we need not fear the importation of disease from abroad." Gentlemen, although I cannot say that we should be prepared to quite accept the last sentence as infallible, yet, nevertheless, I fully recognise what a world of wisdom it contains. I think that I have said before that the geographical position of England deprives it of the advantages to be derived from a comprehensive quarantine system, yet nevertheless it would seem that serious attention has been more than once given to the circumstance that her great seaports suffer from imported infectious disease to a very considerable extent. I recently perused a paper by Dr. J. Stopford Taylor, of Liverpool, read before the International Medical Congress, the peroration of which states that one of its objects "is to bring before the congress a brief account of some of the calamities which have been inflicted upon the inhabitants of Liverpool by the importation of infectious disease." It is hardly necessary to give instances where ships have conveyed epidemic diseases to remote countries; but, were it necessary, the history of the manner in which a United States frigate conveyed cholera to Japan, causing it is said 200,000 deaths from that disease in the city of Yeddo alone; or that of the shocking epidemic of measles in Fiji, in which, if I mistake not, 50,000 or more persons are said to have died, and which is said to have been the result of a visit of one of our own ships of war, would suffice. Hitherto, we in the Australian colonies have enjoyed a remarkable immunity from epidemic sickness, owing, no doubt, chiefly to our geographical position. Situated as we are at a great distance from those countries with which we have had any considerable trade, diseases have had time to develop and die out during the necessarily tedious voyage of vessels carrying passengers to our shores. But now, when in a few weeks rapid mail steamers bridge over the distances which at one time took as many months to traverse, we can hardly hope to obtain protection in this way. And, moreover, our trade with India, China, and the islands of the Eastern Archipelago—countries distant but a couple of weeks' sail—is rapidly developing, and I am afraid that it is from this source that we may one day receive a blow, in the shape of some terrible epidemic, which half a century's prosperity will hardly suffice to repair. In all the Australian colonies the quarantine system is authorised; but the thoroughness with which it is enforced varies very much in several, and there is no mutual agreement between them as to what is, and what is not necessary for our common weal. All show the same disposition to evade the duty of dealing with infected vessels, and frequently great difficulty is experienced by their owners or agents in obtaining proper accommodation for the sick in consequence. This was very clearly shown in the case of the Mirzapore some years ago, when she arrived at Adelaide with one patient suffering from smallpox. He was not allowed to land, but obliged to go on in the ship, and I have been informed that when the vessel arrived at Melbourne there were half a dozen more persons ill with the same disease. More recently we had the Menmuir sent on to us in similar fashion, and there can be no doubt but the subsequent outbreak in which no less than eight persons were affected, was caused by the unfortunate circumstance that the first patient was not promptly landed on the northern coast. Having these difficulties in view, I a short time since deemed it my duty to draw the attention of our Government to the necessity for an agreement with the neighbouring colonies upon the subject, and pointed out the propriety of establishing quarantine stations at the northern and western extremities of our coasts, so that vessels approaching the colonies with infectious disease on board might promptly land the sick: and then, after purification, come on to their destination in quarantine. That this would be an advantage to the passengers of such vessels must be apparent to all, as they would be the sooner rid of a source of danger to themselves; and that it would benefit the vessels is shown by the favour with which the proposal has been received by the Steamship Owners' Association of New South Wales. We should have quarantine regulations common to all the colonies, and the stations which would manifestly be for the benefit of all of them, might be maintained at their joint expense, in the ratio of their respective populations. In short, we should have a federal quarantine for Australia, for whatever differences of opinion may exist amongst our politicians as regards the land policy, or the question of the relative merits of free trade and protection, there certainly can be no difference of opinion as to the necessity for keeping our country pure and free from epidemic disease; and the only question to be decided is whether that is most likely to be accomplished by a federal quarantine.

Dr. Morgan regretted that Dr. Mackellar had not described the details of a system of federal quarantine, as these formed a most essential matter for them to consider. They were free of five or six of the great diseases. Their immunity arose from nature having provided them with a quarantine in the shape of a three-months' voyage. The duration of this voyage had been considerably shortened now, and it became a more imperative duty for them to take measures for preventing the introduction of disease here.

Dr. Belgrave thought the question of federal quarantine was one of the most important that could engage their attention. Those persons who remembered the fearful mortality from measles a few years ago would admit the necessity for establishing it. The disease was introduced by one patient who came to Australia by the Hesperus. It broke out a fortnight after the vessel left London. At Adelaide there was no accommodation for quarantining the vessel, and she was admitted to pratique. The disease broke out in the city in hundreds of cases. It passed then over to Sandhurst and Ballarat, and when he came to Sydney it was there also, although not a solitary case had appeared for years, evidently proving that this ship had been the means of bringing it here. From Sydney the disease went to Melbourne and to Fiji, and they learned afterwards from statisticians that no less than 100,000 died from it—from the introduction of this one patient.

Mr. Evans thought the time had arrived when as a body they should give their serious attention to this subject. In his opinion, the Government in dealing with it should have the advice of men up to the scientific teachings of the day. What was wanted was not so much a new Quarantine Act, but the appointment of a gentleman to administer the regulations who would in no measure be fettered in his action by his officials.

Dr. Ewan pointed to the desirableness of having immigrants examined at the port of embarkation, of sound hygienic laws being observed on board their vessels, and of there being a strict quarantine maintained on the west coast of Victoria.

Dr. M'Laurin endorsed all that had been affirmed by Dr. Mackellar. From all he knew concerning the introduction and spread of diseases in other countries, he was of opinion that they ought to have a system of federal quarantine here.

Sir Alfred Roberts thought the section was under an obligation to Dr. Mackellar for his interesting paper. As an earnest of their approval of the views that gentleman had set forth, he would move,—"That this meeting is of opinion that federal quarantine is necessary in the interests of the health of the Australian colonies."

Dr. Beattie seconded the motion, and it was carried unanimously.

The meeting then terminated.

THE OSBORNE HERESY CASE.

The District Meeting was continued at the York-street Wesleyan Church on Thursday, and again yesterday, when the inquiry respecting the charge of heresy against the Rev. J. Osborne was continued. On Thursday morning, before entering on the inquiry attention was called, as a matter of privilege, to the reported proceedings of the meeting which had appeared in the daily papers. The unfortunate writers or inspirers of these reports, whom no one seemed to know, were rather severely handled for their "unbrotherly" and "dishonourable" conduct. Several ministers expressed strong indignation that any member or members of the meeting should act so unworthily as to convey to the secular press reports of the proceedings before the settlement of the whole case. The reports which had been published were unsparingly condemned as unfaithful. A resolution was then moved and seconded, charging the writers or inspirers of the said reports with a breach of privilege. This endeavour to coerce the independence and liberty of individual members of the meeting was very warmly resisted, and one gentleman protested that he would not be brought into bondage by any such Star Chamber attempt. This expression was subsequently withdrawn. The resolution, however, was ultimately passed by a large majority. On the motion of the Rev. G. Hurst, it was then resolved,—"That a full report of the proceedings, containing the entire evidence, with the findings of the meeting, be published in the daily papers at the close of the case." The meeting then proceeded to take evidence on the remaining charges, viz., "General mode of preaching" and "Ministerial conduct in the circuit." On the first of these charges, evidence was given by the Rev. J. B. Waterhouse, who stated that he had heard Mr. Osborne's sermon on Buddhism, and felt deeply pained as he left the church at the almost entire absence of Methodist doctrine throughout the discourse. The Rev. G. Hurst, who had heard Mr. Osborne on several occasions, described what to him appeared objectionable peculiarities in his style of preaching. Regarding Mr. Osborne's ministerial conduct in the circuit, evidence was received by letter and by oral testimony, but was not regarded as implying anything serious. This completed the evidence in the case.

Mr. Osborne then addressed the meeting at considerable length in his defence. He spoke with great self-possession, clearness, and force, and was listened to throughout with marked attention. He commenced by stating his belief in all the cardinal truths of Christianity. In referring to his sermon on Roman Catholicism, he repeated what he had before said, that his purpose on that occasion was honestly and fearlessly to exhibit the excellencies and faults of the system. He pointed out that nothing he had then uttered on some of the excellencies of this system was half so broad or forcible as passages to be found in the writings of Wesley on the same subject. Two or three of those passages he read. He maintained that his teaching in that sermon on Romanism was not at variance with the standards of the Methodist Church. While he felt that his motives were pure and honest in striving thus to do men good, and especially to be useful to Roman Catholics, he could not retract anything he had said on the subject. He had come to the York-street Church with no other purpose than to preach Christ and Christianity, and he was determined, should it be the will of his brethren to give him the opportunity, to continue to do so with all his might. He had already been greatly encouraged in his work in the city, and sincerely hoped nothing would occur to interrupt him in this work.

Mr. Osborne then retired from the meeting, that his presence might in no way embarrass the decision. After long and careful consideration, the following resolutions were adopted:—"That after hearing Mr. Osborne's frank declaration of his belief in the Deity of the Lord Jesus Christ, in his atonement for sin by His death, in the Deity of the Holy Ghost, in the plenary inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, and in the efficacy of prayer, having heard also his declaration of sincere attachment to Methodist doctrine generally as embodied in our acknowledged standards, we cordially accept his statements as full and satisfactory. At the same time we regret that his method of presenting these truths is at times so inexact as to produce the impression on the minds of some that he is erroneous in doctrine. 2. In reference to the sermon delivered in the York-street Church on Sunday evening, April 22, 1883, on Roman Catholicism, we are convinced that Mr. Osborne is sound in the doctrines of Protestantism as held by the Methodist Church. Yet from the evidence we are satisfied that in the former part of his discourse he was so unguarded in his statements as to appear to advance doctrines not in harmony with our standards. 3. That the president communicate the forgoing resolutions to Mr. Osborne."

THE INVERELL RAILWAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The question of which route the above railway shall take—to Glen Innes or Mother of Ducks—is now being hotly debated by those interested. The advocates of the latter ask that at least a trial survey may be made from Mother of Ducks; and, as one largely interested in the Inverell district, and well acquainted with both routes, I beg to be allowed to point out the reasonableness of their request.

It is claimed for the Mother of Ducks line that while the distance from Inverell would not be much, if any, greater than from Glen Innes. It would connect Inverell with the Northern line at a point 56 miles nearer Newcastle, so saving that amount of haulage. Also, that it could be more cheaply constructed, as the line would run right down the long spurs which descend from the tableland north-westerly towards Inverell, while the line to Glen Innes must of necessity cross those spurs (including one very high one known as Waterloo Range) and a succession of deep valleys between. Also, that the line from Glen Innes will require several expensive bridges: Swan Brook, ordinarily an insignificant stream, but one that in flood time runs a quarter of a mile wide, having alone to be crossed three (3) times; and if the line is to be extended west from Inverell—as it certainly should be—the M'Intyre River once; while from Mother Ducks a line can be brought to within a few hundred yards of Inverell, and also extended west, without crossing the river at all, or any creek of consequence.

Each line would pass through fine agricultural country, so nothing need be said on that head. But the Mother of Ducks line would have the advantage of passing through the tin districts, where permanent lodes are now being worked.

For the Glen Innes line it is claimed—first, that it would be an instalment of the line to Grafton; and secondly, that it would be a direct line to Queensland, where it is expected a market will be found for agricultural produce.

As I cannot belive that any Government would be insane enough to make a railway from Glen Innes to Grafton, I dismiss the first, merely remarking that if ever constructed very little use would be made of it; no wool would go that way, and no passengers from New England except those who might desire the agreeable "change" which a coasting steamer usually affords.

As to the second, that it would be a direct line to Queensland, it is certainly desirable that every possible market should be secured for our agricultural produce, but Brisbane is already dangerously near the rich Inverell district, and a direct line towards it might have the effect of diverting all the produce—including wool—across the border, which might not be considered advisable, in the interests of the whole country.

I am, &c.,

DRAPERS' EARLY CLOSING MOVEMENT.

A public meeting to promote the Drapers' Early Closing Movement, was held under the auspices of the Drapers' Association of New South Wales, at the Protestant Hall, Castlereagh-street, last evening. There was a very large attendance, and the Hon. G. R. Dibbs, Colonial Treasurer, presided. Amongst the other gentlemen who occupied seats on the platform were the Hon. G. H. Reid, Minister for Public Instruction, the Very Rev. the Vicar-General (Dean Cowper), the Revs. Dr. White, J. D. Langley, J. Garnier, J. W. Brown, and J. Hargrave; Messrs. G. Withers, J. Garrard, D. O'Connor, N. Melville, L. F. Heydon, and F. Abigail, Ms.L.A.; Messrs. T. T. Gray, E. L. Jones, and W. Newman (of Messrs. D. Jones and Co.), David Walker (hon. sec. Young Men's Christian Association), W. E. O'Sullivan (president Trades and Labour Council), J. E. West, J. Talbot, E. Schofield (of the Atlas Works), G. F. Poole (president Masters' and Engineers' Association), W. M'Millan (president Drapers' Association), Charles Bright (hon. sec. Liberal Association), J. S. Murray, Walter Long, A. J. Hordern (of Messrs. Hordern Brothers, Pitt-street), James Watson (secretary Typographical Association), Percy Hordern (of Messrs. E. Hordern and Sons), W. C. Renwick, W. Mason, A. J. Riley (of Messrs. Riley Brothers), J. Butler (of Messrs. Arnold and Co.), Thos. Caddy, and R. C. Luscombe.

It was announced that the following gentlemen had replied to circulars, apologising, through previous engagements, at not being able to be present, and expressing sympathy and co-operation with the movement:—The Hons. W. J. Trickett, F. A. Wright, and E. Barton, Messrs. Angus Cameron, John M'Elhone, J. B. Olliffe, W. A. Hutchinson, Henry Copeland, John Harris, G. Merriman, Ms.L.A., Very Rev. Dean Mahoney, Revs. Thomas Kemmis, Dr. Kelynack, J. Gardiner, G. Martin, James Jefferis, and Andrew Gardiner, Dr. Brereton, Dr. Burne, Messrs. W. J. Foster, F. H. Trouton, W. Frazer Martin, and one or two others.

The Chairman, who on rising, was received with much applause, said he had been looking round to see if he could, in commencing his address, say "Ladies and gentlemen," but he regretted exceedingly to find that there were no ladies present, because, as that movement affected them to a very large extent, he would have been very glad to have had their presence to aid in so worthy a cause. That movement was intended not only for the benefit of men, but also for the benefit of women. The object of that meeting was a very worthy one. It was the desire on the part of those who felt as members of this community that they had a real grievance to express their grievance, and take such steps as would relieve them from that grievance. There were two ways of settling a question of that kind, and he was very glad the drapers' assistants and those who advocated their cause had taken upon themselves the proper method of settling their dispute, in attempting to appeal by reason and logic to those who could help them in what they desired. There was another method by which the object sought to be attained might be secured; and that was by resorting to the worst of all possible methods. It was open to those who felt they were suffering from an intolerable burden to have followed the example of other organisations and trades by resorting to a strike. Now, he for one deprecated the attempt to attain any object by force in the shape of a strike. He was convinced that the course taken on that occasion by meeting to discuss the whole question and appealing to the sympathies of those outside was one calculated at a sooner period to attain the object they desired to accomplish. He did not for one single moment say there were not occasions when strikes were not necessary. They were there that night to support a movement that involved the liberty of over 4000 persons in this city and in the suburbs. As an employer of labour he would say that if an employer wished to obtain the largest possible amount of work for the money he paid an employee, he could best secure that object by giving to that employee a certain amount of time for recreation and rational amusement. (Applause.) Nearly all the other trades and callings of Sydney had secured a regular period of labour, and now the drapers' assistants had by force of circumstances been called together to advocate their claims and seek reparation. In these days of progress and intellectual advancement, it seemed to him something like slavery of a refined character that so large a number of their fellow-citizens should be compelled to work when there was no real necessity for their labour. (Great applause.) Of course they would have to be assisted in carrying out the objects of that meeting by the common sense, the good sense, and the goodwill of the community as a whole. (Hear, hear.) And he appealed to the heads of families, to fathers and mothers, to do their shopping during the hours of daylight, and to allow so many persons in the community who administered to their comfort and convenience to enjoy the same liberty they themselves enjoyed. (Applause.) In respect to health alone the question concerned the colonists as a young and rising community, especially in a climate such as this. It was absolutely necessary that the hours of labour should be fairly proportioned. Persons who worked 12, 14, and even 15 hours in one day, were not fit to faithfully perform their duties the following day. (Hear, hear.) Thousands of their fellow-citizens toiled in closely-packed shops and warehouses where there was but little light, and where the small amount of air there was was vitiated by the lighting arrangements. Then, from an intellectual point of view, so large a class deserved their support in the movement to reduce the hours during which the shops should be open. He had been informed that the proprietors of some establishments now closed their places at 6 o'clock on five evenings during the week, and at 1 o'clock on Saturday. (Applause.) All honour to the men who had so conceded what they were met that night to advocate. He was perfectly satisfied they had found no diminution in their profits by a just recognition of the rights of their employees. And he was also confident that if the remaining shopkeepers did the same thing they would find at the end of the year their profits not at all touched by giving that liberty which the other shops had accorded their employees. He merely sat there in his individual capacity, and he had come there with very great pleasure to give his hearty support to a movement which concerned so many of his fellow-citizens. (Applause.)

The Hon. G. H. Reid, who was received with great applause, said he had to submit to the meeting the following resolution:—"That in the opinion of this meeting the physical, social, and moral interests of the drapers' assistants demand that the hours of business be shortened in order to afford more time for recreation and improvement." He moved that resolution with extreme pleasure. He was fully sensible of the honour of occupying so prominent a position in those proceedings; but at the same time he felt there were many in this city, and he saw many upon that platform, who had done far more to secure the objects the promoters of that meeting had in view than he had. They had done much. He had done nothing, but he was very ready to help to support that or any similar movement when his services were thought worth asking for. (Hear, hear.) And he would tell them the reason. Unless our industrial classes—and he used that term in its widest sense—had opportunities of cultivating their minds, and of taking an active and intelligent interest in public affairs, all the political institutions of this country were a mistake—(applause)—because they were founded upon manhood suffrage. And what was the use of electoral equality or power—what was the use of their colleges and universities for the people, if the people were to be condemned to pass their lives in a sort of industrial treadmill, which left, after their day's work was done, only the dregs of their priceless energies? (Applause.) He had used the expression, a day's work. Now, he believed there was not a single member of the Drapers' Association of New South Wales who was afraid of an honest day's work. (Applause.) He believed that movement to be an uprising against a pernicious system of working, which took out of the large numbers of their people more than an honest day's work in every 24 hours. (Cheers.) And it was as absurd to attempt to stigmatise them as shirking a day's work as it was to call that camel with a broken back a lazy animal because he could not stand the last straw. Now they wanted to help the drapers' assistants of Sydney, and of every town in this colony, to remove some of those last straws from suffering backs. (Cheers.) But the first practical question was, How is this to be done? Perhaps he should say there was a prior question, What have the drapers' assistants done to help themselves? Well, he found they had formed the Drapers' Association of New South Wales. He found that they had at their head a body of zealous and influential citizens. He found that they proposed for themselves a number of objects admirable from every point of view. And the first was the employment of means for restricting the hours of labour where necessary. The drapers' assistants had taken the very best step towards helping themselves when they founded that association. Their next step was an equally wise one. They sought a friendly conference with their employers. Some good had come from that conference; but the movement was still very far from successful. There were still hundreds of shops which were open for 12 and 14 hours a day, and even for 16 hours on that very day on which thousands of persons engaged in other occupations had the benefit of a half-holiday. (Applause.) He thought that was a state of things which was simply intolerable. It was as cruelly unjust to the assistants as it was injurious to the best interests of the State. It was no real convenience to the public and it was no real benefit to the employers. (Cheers.) All the work which was actually done could as easily be done in eight or nine hours every day—(hear, hear)—and surely eight or nine busy hours were better for all parties than twice the time spent in an exhausted and semi-idle and therefore altogether idiotic state of confinement. (Applause.) The volume of industry would be the same, the profits would be the same. There would be a difference only in the rapidity and density of the returns; but what a vast gain would there be to the physical, to the social, and to the political interests of the country. Hundreds of young men and young women now enfeebled might regain health and vigour; many hours now miserable might become happy; and many intellects now jaded with excessive toil might become bright and useful. (Applause.) For all those reasons he looked upon that as one of the most pressing reforms in our industrial condition. (Hear, hear.) The members of the association having done everything to help themselves, now appealed to the public for support. They brought their great grievances into the light of day—they summoned to the bar of public opinion those employers who persisted in exacting from them more than a fair day's work. (Applause.) They must not forget that there was a large number—perhaps the great majority—of the drapers ready to fall in with the views of the association, if early closing could be observed all round; but there seemed to be a few miserable curmudgeons—(great applause)—who had the power of spoiling the whole movement, and so long as these graballs—(laughter, and renewed applause)—kept their shops open late there were a number of men in a small way of business who felt compelled to do so as well, because they dreaded a loss of custom which they could not afford. Now it was for the public to show to all those people that it would be more profitable to close early than to keep open late. (Hear, hear.) Well, how was that to be done? By giving these late shops a very wide berth by day as well as by night. (Cheers.) And now was that to be done? How were the public to distinguish between black sheep and the pure merinos? (Laughter.) Advertisements had been tried, but they had failed, because people could not be expected to remember. Now he had a suggestion to make, and he thought it was worth trying. His advice was that the association should adopt some distinctive shield, to be placed over every shop which closed at a reasonable hour, so that every member of the general public could tell at a glance which shops to patronise and which to avoid. (Approbation.) And he thought he could predict to the drapers' assistants and to the Drapers' Association that this generous community would obey the signal. Now he was glad to see upon that platform some of the representatives of what was called the eight-hour movement. He looked upon the success of that movement in the Australian colonies as one of the wonders of the age. What a marvellous change had come over the conditions of society when the man of labour was at last able to hold his own with the man of capital. (Applause.) But they must not forget that no more terrible calamity could befal any community than a collision between those two great factors of national prosperity—labour and capital. They were the husband and wife of our great industrial family circle, and those present knew what misery and wretchedness followed when the father and mother of a large family got to loggerheads. Every true patriot would always breathe a fervent prayer that in this, as in every other country under the sun, capital and labour might live peaceably and prosperously together. (Hear, hear.) He believed that the working men of the colony and their good wives would rally round the drapers' assistants, for he never heard of a prudent housewife who bought drapery after daylight. In some of the best shops of London and Paris the female assistants were allowed, when business did not demand their attention, to take a chair, but the privilege was not allowed them here. He appealed to the Drapers' Association to put an end to this compulsion. (Applause.) He felt peculiarly in his place on this occasion, because he was at the head of the Department of Public Instruction. How could this Department be of the fullest public service if a large proportion of the community could not take advantage of its benefits? The people should rise and be encouraged to rise to the height of their grand opportunities, but under present circumstances the drapers' assistants were not able to do so. Unless things were changed it might well become a question whether it would not be the duty of the State to interfere in the matter. (Prolonged applause.)

The Rev. J. W. Brown seconded the motion. He said that they all felt that the full blessedness of life could not be attained without honest work. They believed in work, but they all saw the evil of over-work, and saw the pity of having men and women tied to the counter hours after they should have been freed. There was no need in this young country for over-work, and he was very glad to see the drapers' assistants so much in accord with the artisan class, who had obtained the benefit of the eight hours' system for themselves, and with whom it mainly lay to check the efforts of those employers who did not care how long they kept their establishments open. He seconded the resolution with pleasure.

Mr. G. F. Poole, president of the Masters' and Engineers' Society, supported the resolutions, and in doing so said he appealed to the mechanics, artisans, and labourers in the community to assist in the movement. Indeed, it concerned the whole bulk of the community, for no class should be deprived of the means of relaxation and intellectual training. He felt certain that after this appeal had gone forth to the class with which he was associated, these men who had gained for themselves the privileges of the eight hours' system would assist the members of the drapers' early closing movement to gain their object. (Applause.)

The motion was put, and carried unanimously.

The Very Rev. the Dean of Sydney moved,—"That the social and domestic conditions of the people do not require that the shops be kept open till so late an hour, and that to continue the present system of late shopping is prejudicial to the moral and physical interests of the community generally." He said that he should not have appeared to advocate the objects of the association if he had not felt in full sympathy with them. (Applause.) He congratulated the drapers' assistants of the colony on their having formed such an association as this, which would, he thought, engage the sympathy of everybody. He did not think the interference of the Legislature would be necessary, but that the force of public opinion would effect what the association desired. He himself had always objected to the system of late hours, and had often wished that what was now proposed had been accomplished. (Applause.) There were many places which would be dark at night were it not for the light from the shops, and he hoped that the time would soon come when these shops would be closed at 6 o'clock, and the corporation have to supply the necessary light. As a minister of the gospel he condemned the present system, for he could not expect to see young people who had been for 16 hours on their feet on Saturday, at morning service on the Lord's Day. (Applause.) Again, how could these young people be expected to improve their minds, when their hours of labour were so long; and how could the ties of family and social life be cultivated? He hoped that people who had purchases to make would act on the golden rule to do to others as they would be done by, and he might say that in his household the rule was not to shop after 1 o'clock on Saturdays. (Applause.) He had much pleasure in moving the resolution.

Mr. L. Heydon, M.L.A., seconded the resolution, saying that he felt glad to see the drapers' assistants of the colony banding together to attain an object which the rest of the community would not deny them. What did drapers gain by keeping open late? Nothing! because people only bought to replace what was worn out, and this they would have to purchase, whatever might be the hours of sale. For social reasons, this reform should be brought about, and on behalf of the general public, he could say that the only obstacle in the way of it was the selfish greed of a few employers who persisted in keeping their establishments open late, and oppressing their employees. If ever a bill was proposed to limit by law the hours in which people should work, he in his place in Parliament would be happy to support it. (Applause.)

Mr. D. O'Connor, M.L.A., supported the motion, saying that the persons who were to blame for the present system were the purchasers and not the sellers, because the drapers would not keep their shops open any later than they could make it pay. (Applause.) He saw every element of success in this movement, because it was just and equitable, and was demanded by the people, and the ministers of heaven and earth had joined in a holy alliance to bring it about. (Loud applause.)

The resolution was put and carried unanimously.

Mr. O'Sullivan, president of the Trades and Labour Council, moved,—"That this meeting pledges itself to assist in carrying into effect the early closing movement, and cordially invites the community generally to give its hearty co-operation by not shopping after 6 o'clock." He said that this was the natural sequence of the resolutions already carried, and needed little advocacy on his part to commend it to his hearers. This was a movement which should commend itself especially to the working classes who had themselves attained the privilege of early hours, but at present they were much to blame for the late hours to which drapers' assistants were detained, by reason of their lazy, careless habit of late shopping. He did not see why the Legislature should not interfere in the matter. If the State compelled publicans to close at 11 o'clock at night, why should it not make drapers shut at the same time? (Loud applause.)

Mr. Chas. Bright, secretary of the Liberal Association, seconded the motion. He said that the words Herbert Spencer found it necessary to say to the Americans on his recent visit to that great country were, "Do not work so hard; work less. You are living lives merely for the sake of earning a living. There is something else superior for you to do." These words applied here, and the people should not look to the Legislature for assistance in this matter, but themselves bring about the reform which was so badly needed. The eight-hours' system should be general here, and the drapers' assistants, like other people, should have the opportunity of intellectual improvement and of social pleasure. The public should not shop after 6, or deal at shops kept open after 6; and, with co-operation, the drapers' assistants could themselves bring about the reform they desired. (Applause.)

Mr. Schofield, of Atlas Engineering Works, supported the resolution, saying that everyone could do something to help the cause, and he hoped that the bulk of the people would combine to put down the custom of late shopping. Let the working people who had fought for the eight-hours system for themselves extend the benefits to the drapers' assistants. (Applause.)

The motion was put and carried unanimously.

Mr. M'Millan moved a vote of thanks to the chairman, and in doing so expressed his opinion that the great bulk of the employers would give in their adhesion to the early closing movement at once if they could be sure that it would be general. (Applause.) He trusted that the result of this large and influential meeting would be that all the drapers' assistants of Sydney would join in the movement. He believed the greater the increase of wealth in the colony the greater the increase of civilisation. He would be glad to see spring up a band of men who would Christianise and civilise the community. He trusted that evening they had inaugurated a new movement for the benefit of the community.

The motion was carried with acclamation.

The Hon. G. R. Dibbs having acknowledged the compliment, the proceedings terminated.

The remains of a Danish Queen, born nearly four centuries ago, have (the Copenhagen correspondent of the Standard says) arrived from Ghent, where they had been buried since 1526, and are now finally laid to rest by the side of her husband. "Queen Elisabeth, daughter of Philip le Bel, of Castile, sister of the Emperor Charles V., wife of King Christian II., and as such Queen of Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, was born in 1501, married at the age of 15, went with her husband into exile in 1522, and died broken-hearted in 1526. The history of King Christian, who succumbed in his endeavours to raise the peasants and citizens at the expense of the nobility, his attachment to the lovely Dyveke, her tragic death, the executions in Stockholm, which finally made Gustaf Vasa King of Sweden, King Christian's capture and long imprisonment, are the subjects of many popular ballads and legends."

To be completed within two months.

THE GLEBE ISLAND ABATTOIRS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—With your permission, I desire publicly to correct a wrong impression which has resulted from an unfair or false interpretation of my remarks on the above subject. Several persons, including writers in the press, have inferred from the words I, as an alderman, in my place at the City Council, on Tuesday last, used, that I am strongly in favour of the metropolitan abattoirs being retained at Glebe Island. Such is not my wish. I could not, however, calmly consider the proposal made by our Colonial Treasurer, to have the establishment removed, and to distribute smaller ones of the same kind through the country without being convinced that objections could be urged to it. I thoroughly recognise the validity of those objections which have been taken to the existence of the present abattoirs. That it may be injurious to the health of the citizens is quite possible; but I do not think it is more detrimental or obnoxious than the constant outpourings of the city drainage into the harbour, though, of course, I do not hold that the existence of one source of evil is a justification for another. It is a consideration, however, of some importance that thousands of pounds have been expended on Glebe Island, and that it is no light thing that the expenditure should be wasted. The establishment is by no means perfect, and though I am not a strong advocate for its retention, I think I am not contending wildly if I state that the exercise of judicious discretion might improve it to an extent that would render it innocuous. Be this as it may, my principal contention is that metropolitan abattoirs ought to be within easy access of the city. There are several sites which occur to me as being suitable for them, and I would suggest that, if removed from their present position, they should be erected on an area of land so large that persons could not jeopardise their comfort or health by residing in too close proximity to them. I would also suggest that a light railway should be constructed to them, and that means similar to those adopted elsewhere should be resorted to for converting the refuse from them into marketable manure—the whole establishment to be of course also under the supervision of Government inspectors. It should be borne in mind, as a weighty factor in the Colonial Treasurer's proposal, that if this proposal is carried into effect, the £68,000 or £70,000 of the citizens' money which has been expended on the Metropolitan Cattle Saleyards at Homebush will have been practically wasted, and I think it a matter worthy of the people's serious attention to enquire whether they can afford to expend this large sum of money and the enormous sums which have been also invested on Glebe Island without demanding a legitimate return for them. This return will not be furnished by the effects of Mr. Dibbs' proposals. By establishing abattoirs in various parts of the country, the meat supply is not likely to be improved. It would, I apprehend, prove to be intermittent. The demand for cattle at each abattoir would not be nearly so great as that at a central market, and consequently producers would not—especially as competition in bidding for it would not be brisk—care about forwarding their stock for disposal at such places. Apart from this, the quality of the cattle slaughtered would be likely to be inferior. The people would be at the mercy of persons who maintained such establishments. It is a well-known and a remarkable fact that we have not at present and have not had for several seasons, many good cattle in the colony, and that we have been dependent upon Queensland for our supplies. In fact, but for the abundance of cattle in that colony the price of meat, both here and in Melbourne, would have been much higher than, unfortunately, it has been. If, therefore, abattoirs are established along our railway lines, as Mr. Dibbs proposes, it would, judging from past experience, frequently happen that our growers could not supply cattle and sheep for slaughtering at them. Occasionally there have not been any cattle worth killing within 150 or 200 miles of our railway stations. He should also remember that with these miniature abattoirs meat would become affected detrimentally by being overhandled. By having metropolitan abattoirs in conjunction with our saleyards, cattle could, under existing arrangements, be brought to them from the most distant localities within a comparatively few hours, and our breeders would exercise care in having only the most marketable animals sent to us. In conclusion, I would express the opinion that it would be advantageous to the citizens to have a meat market as an assistant means for providing them with meat at a moderate price. This might also prove an advantage to breeders, as it would open up two markets for their stock.

I am, &c., THOMAS PLAYFAIR.

ANNUAL SALE OF STUD SHEEP.

The principal sale of yesterday was held at the Exhibition building, Prince Alfred Park. There was a fine collection of sheep, representing some of the most popular flocks of Victoria, as also one or two Riverina studs. The sale was conducted by Messrs. Aitken, Jopp, Wilson, and Co., of this city, in conjunction with Messrs. Raleigh, Aitken, and Co., of Melbourne. It was intended that Mr. J. Raleigh should conduct the sale, but as he suffered from the effects of a cold, Mr. G. Maiden acted as auctioneer. There was a good attendance throughout the day, while the bidding for some lots proved very spirited. The Mount Fyans rams realised exceedingly good prices. Ten animals brought an aggregate sum of 2145 guineas, showing a general average of £114 12s. per head. The highest price realised was for a ram by The Duke, which fell to the bid of Mr. J. R. Lomax for 280 guineas. Mr. William Halliday also purchased a fine quality 6-tooth ram from the same breeders for 250 guineas. Another good sale was obtained by Lieutenant-Colonel Buchanan with the Titanga stud. For this lot the competition was very keen, while the prices realised were good. The highest sum paid for a Titanga ram was by Mr. Angus Robertson, of Yarrabee, who secured Sir Alfred for 150 guineas. The average price was £51 2s. per head. Messrs. Thomas Russell and Co.'s well-known stud were not so successful as usual. The sheep, however, had many admirers, and showed a class of wool which would bear favourable comparison with most studs in the building. The bidding, however, was spirited, and the lot was quickly disposed of. The average price realised for 20 head was £21 15s. each, while the prices ranged from 35 to 15 guineas per head. Mr. J. Clark was the principal purchaser, the other buyers being Messrs. Ruyder Brothers, Mr. E. Martin, and Mr. J. Hawkins. Stud rams from Messrs. Thomas Dowling and Sons' Jellalabad flocks sold well, their good quality being well recognised. The bidding in this instance was more spirited than usual. The lot of 30 rams sold at prices ranging from 30 to 13 guineas per head, giving a general average of £21 14s. The same owner averaged £6 6s. for 25 second-class stud rams.

Mr. Edward G. Greeves, Borriyalloak, had a fairly successful sale. This stud is well-known throughout the Australian colonies, and are valued highly for their sterling and profitable qualities. The prices, although perhaps not so good as might have been expected, were sufficiently encouraging to warrant the sheep being sold. The highest price obtained was 35 guineas, the lowest being 7 guineas. The general average for 20 head was £12 12s. Mr. Edward Willis, Koolomurt, had a fair sale, his draft of sheep evidently having been carefully selected. The number was 20 rams, which gave an average of £14 5s. per head. A number of other sheepbreeders were well represented with good, fashionable, and soundly bred stock, which, however, owing to the poor prices realised, were, with one or two exceptions, passed in for private sale.

The Lincoln sheep averaged as follows:—Mr. Thomas Rutledge, Farnham, 7 stud rams, £23 11s. each; 3 flock rams, £10 10s. each; 2 stud ewes, £20 10s. each; Mr. W. H. Hood, Merrang, 4 rams, £10 10s. each; 2 ewes £15 15s. each; Thomas Bath, Ceres, 25 rams, £5 5s. each.

The following is a detailed account of the sale:—

Ruyder Brothers; pen of five at 7 guineas each, Mr. Gilchrist; pen of five at 5 guineas each, Messrs. Ruyder Brothers.

At the conclusion of the sale of merino stud sheep a number of Lincoln ewes and rams were offered for disposal. They were from some of the most popular long-woolled flocks in Victoria, noticeably Mr. Thomas Bath (Ceres), Mr. Robert Hood (Merrang), and Mr. Thomas F. Rutledge, of Farnham. Although the sheep showed great quality, they failed to attract much attention at the hands of buyers, the prices realised not being so high as might have been expected when the importance of the flocks are considered.

Messrs. Wilkinson, Graves, and Lavender held a sale of merino stud sheep yesterday morning at Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin's wool stores. They were in excellent condition, and showed great quality. For some lots the bidding was brisk, while the prices realised were good. The following is a list of the sales:—

On account of F. L. Parker, Quiamong, Deniliquin.—17 4-tooth rams, viz.: One at 75 guineas to S. M'Caughey; one at 72 guineas to same buyer; one at 53 guineas to same buyer; one at 44 guineas to J. K. Clark; one at 41 guineas to E. Martin; one at 31 guineas to Charles Mackinnon; one at 30 guineas to E. Martin; one at 30 guineas to Charles Mackinnon; two at 27 guineas each to S. M'Caughey; one at 25 guineas to E. Martin; one at 24 guineas to H. R. Kater; one at 22 guineas to S. M'Caughey; one at 18 guineas to same buyer; one at 16 guineas to same buyer; 1 at 16 guineas to J. M'Donald; and one at 13 guineas to Charles Mackinnon.

On account of Hon. Philip Russell, Carngham, Victoria.—Two two-tooth rams at 50 guineas each to William Halliday; one at 40 guineas to Sinclair, and one at 29 guineas to Valentine; one two-tooth ewe to Sinclair at 59 guineas, and one at 17 guineas.

Also, on account of John Headlam, Woodbury, Tasmania.—One four-year old ram at 16 guineas to J. K. Clark, and one at 5 guineas to D. Hannah.

From the criminal statistics of the army at home, for the year 1882, it appears that upon an average strength of some 90,000 non-commissioned officers and men, representing about one-half of the army, there were not less than 8319 courts-martial held, and 131,434 minor punishments inflicted by order of commanding officers. The number of fines for drunkenness—for the most part included among the minor punishments—was 18,400. One of the most remarkable facts shown is the great increase in the number of cases of penal servitude as compared with former years, and also in the number of offences of magnitude committed.

COMMERCIAL.

WOOL, PRODUCE, AND STOCK REPORT.

WOOL.—No sales have been held during the week. The first of the new season's clip was delivered in town this week from Mara Creek.

SHEEPSKINS.—In the absence of sales there is nothing to indicate any change in value.

HIDES.—There was a good demand at yesterday's sales, and out of catalogues numbering 5939, 5541 were sold, the market exhibiting very little alteration. Extra heavy hides may be quoted at 4d. to 4½d., a few ruling at 4¾d., medium 3¾d. to 3½d., light from 3d. Calfskins and yearlings were in good request, the former at 1s. to 4s. the latter at 4s. to 7s. 6d. each; kangaroo skins, 5s. to 30s.; opossum skins to 4s. per dozen; emu skins, 6s. each.

TALLOW.—400 packages were offered at yesterday's sales, 310 being sold. There was a fairly good demand, both for shipping and trade lots, with no very noteworthy change in values. Best beef brought £34 to £35 2s. 6d.; prime mutton, £36 to £37.

HORNS AND BONES.—All lots of good sound bones found ready buyers at from 20s. to 35s.; tips from 5s., the inferior lots being in very limited request. Bones command from £4 to £10.

HAIR.—There is a good demand for hair—horse tail being worth 14d. to 18d.; mane 8d. to 10d.; cow from 4d. to 1s. 2d.

Beeswax sells at from 8d. to 10½d.

LEATHER.—A somewhat better demand was noted at the sales of the week. Harness, bridle, and bag sold fairly well. Sole for shipment is dull of sale. The catalogues were cleared at the following ranges of value:—Kip, 9d. to 15d.; sole, 8d. to 10½d., damaged from 6d.; calf, 16d. to 23d.; harness, 10d. to 13d.; shoulders, 6d. to 7d.; kangaroo, 18d. to 26d.; pieces, 1½d. to 3½d.; strapping, 5d. to 16d.; yearling, 15d. to 21d.; bridle, 7s. to 11s.; tweed, 12½d. to 25d.; bag, 6s. to 12s.; basil, 6s to 13s.

STORE CATTLE.—The demand for store cattle has fallen off somewhat. Bullocks are worth £3 to £3 12s. 6d.

STORE SHEEP.—Business is checked by the dry weather in certain parts of the country, 10s. to 12s. is quoted as value of ewes, 8s. to 10s. wethers.

STATIONS.—Owing to the high rates demanded by holders, station properties in the market are not taken by buyers, and no sales of runs within the colony have been reported.

MESSRS. BRUNKER AND WOLFE'S REPORT.

Stations: The stringency of the money market has affected sales. Good properties are, however, held firmly, and no decline in values has taken place. Fat Cattle: 1788 yarded for the week's supply. Best pens of bullocks worth to £8 10s and cows to £7 10s per head, equal to 22s per 100lb. Fat Sheep: 15,717 penned. The market is very firm. We quote 56lb. wethers worth 18s, others at proportionate rates. We sold for Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, and Co. 1062 ewes at 12s; for B. Alcorn, 70 mixed sheep at 19s 3d; for Peel River Co., 300 wethers at 12s 9d to 13s; for J. Arndell, 760 wethers, 13s 6d to 13s 11d; for J. Leonard, 127 mixed, 10s 6d to 16s 3d. Fat Calves: Market barely supplied. Values range from 20s to 60s each. Fat Lambs: These are selling well. We sold 49 for J. Leonard at 11s 6d, 42 for C. Keys at 12s 9d, and 34 for R. Alcorn at 14s 9d. Fat Pigs: We have sold a large number at prices ranging from 46s to 70s each, equal to about 5d per lb. for prime porkers. Milch Cows: These are scarce. Choice young cows, quiet, with young calves at foot, are worth £5 to £15 per head. Store Stock: We have disposed of a large number of bullocks for paddock fattening, good sorts realising 63s to 85s per head. We have inquiries for store sheep for delivery after shearing, and invite our constituents to send us particulars. Wool and Sheepskins: No public sales were held this week; quotations are, consequently, unaltered. Tallow: The market is barely supplied. At our sale on Friday butchers' mixed consignments realised £33 10s to £35 15s per ton. Hides: Heavies are salable at 3¾d to 4½d per lb. according to condition; light and medium weights, 3d to 3¾d per lb.; calf and yearling skins, 1s to 6s; horsehides, 3s to 7s each. Sundries: Hair—Horse mane and tail, 14d to 20d; cowtails, washed, 7d to 11d, and dirty, 5d to 6d per lb.; horns, large, 25s to 33s 6d, medium from 15s, and small from 3s per 100; bones, shanks, 5s to 10s 6d per cwt.; common, 45s to 65s per ton; bacon, 7d to 8½d; honey, 5d to [illegible]; wax, 9d to 11d per lb. Hunter River Farmers' Association: Sales on the wharfs have been well attended, and there has been a heavy supply of produce to dispose of. Lucerne hay sold dull owing to the large quantity of inferior offering; prime samples are scarce. Maize sold firm at 2s 9d to 3s per bushel. The following prices were realised at our auction sales—Lucerne hay, best, 50s to 60s; medium from 45s, and inferior from 30s; oaten hay, 50s to 70s; barley and wheaten straw, 45s to 60s per ton; maize, 2s 9d to 3s 1d per bushel; bran and pollard, 15d to 16d per bushel; millet brooms, 8s per dozen; lucerne seed, 8d per lb; fowls, 4s to 5s 6d; ducks, 5s to 6s; geese, 6s to 8s; turkeys, 8s to 16s per pair; eggs are more plentiful and worth 14d per dozen; potatoes, for seed, 7s, eating, 4s per cwt.; pumpkins, 2s to 3s. per dozen.—July 19.—[ADVT.]

BRUNKER AND WOLFE'S SALE OF MERINO SHEEP.

The sale of stud sheep held by us at Lamb's wool stores, Central Wharf, on Monday, 16th inst., attracted a large and representative attendance of the principal breeders of this and the adjoining colonies. Great interest was taken in inspecting the best sheep from the various stud flocks penned, and the sheep thus brought together formed a really good and attractive show. The consignments from Tasmania, were as usual, in splendid condition; and we succeeded, as in previous years, in obtaining the highest prices realised singly and collectively. Messrs. W. Gibson and Son's stud ram Royal Duke 3rd secured first honours in Tasmanian sheep, at 325 guineas; and 12 of their studs averaged £141 18s, the average of their 59 stud 4-tooths being £56 17s, being £9 over their last year's average for 57 stud, including 13 2-tooths. Mr. Thomas Gibson, of Esk Vale, Mr. Robert Taylor, and Mr. Robert Viney sent some really good sheep. Mr. Gibson's ram by "Billy," a 4-tooth, brought 300 guineas, and returns to Tasmania. This sheep attracted a lot of attention, and the purchaser, Mr. James Cox, of Clarendon, was offered 50 guineas on his bargain immediately after the sale. The total result of our sales is as follows:—W. Gibson and Sons, 59 studs, 3194 guineas, average £56 17s; 28 ewes, 522 guineas, average £21 2s; 218 rams, 1700 guineas, average £8 3s 9d; C. D. Grubb, 21 rams, 304½ guineas, average £15 4s 5d; T. Gibson, 11 rams, 712 guineas, average £67 10s.; T. Gibson, 16 ewes, 356 guineas, average £23 7s; T. Gibson, 21 ewes, 118 guineas, average £5 18s; T. Gibson, 10 rams, 78 guineas, average £8 3s 9d; R. Taylor, 6 rams, 379 guineas, average £64 11s 6d; 30 ewes, 123 guineas, average £4 6s; 27 rams, 213 guineas, average £8 6s; R. Viney, 4 rams, 143 guineas, average £37 11s; 8 ewes, 166 guineas, average £21 15s 9d; 13 rams, 135½ guineas, average £10 18s 10d; J. Mackenzie, 18 rams, 78 guineas, average £4 11s; 22 ewes, 241 guineas, average £11 10s; A. Loder, 28 rams, 433½ guineas, average £16 5s; James Lee, Larras Lake, 16 rams, 80 guineas, average £5 5s: total, 554 sheep, 8966½ guineas, amounting to £9414 16s 6d. We direct attention to our sale of 47 rams and 25 ewes, pure Spanish Vermont sheep, at Shark Island, on Wednesday, the 8th August. These sheep are to arrive per incoming mail steamer from San Francisco, due on the 26th instant.—[ADVT.]

HORSE MARKET.

MR. GEORGE KISS.—Business was much better the past week, and competition for all classes of stock very lively, but the quantity of horses was not equal to the demand. The bulk of those that came consisted of saddle and light harness horses, which found a ready sale; prices for which ranged from £20 to 40 guineas for best description; useful ditto from £10 to £18; hackneys sold from £10 to £25; extra heavy draught were rather scarce, and wanted, the value of which is unaltered, and sold at from £30 to £46. Active cart and van horses were well represented, and in most cases realised good figures, from £15 to £34; some very neat buggy pairs were disposed of by auction and privately at from £50 to 80 guineas; carriage pairs were scarce, and only one pair exchanged hands at 80 guineas, but would bring, according to quality, up to 150 guineas. Some milch cows were knocked down at from £8 to £10 5s.—July 19.

MESSRS. W. INGLIS AND CO.—The market but moderately supplied with horses the past week. We had some very good draught horses in, but not any extra heavy, and very few good harness horses. We note no change in prices, except for light horses, which are something easier. We have a large number of heavy draught mares from New Zealand, Victoria, and Tasmania, which however cannot be inserted in this week's report, but will be fully specified next week.—July 19.

T. COSGROVE AND CO.—A brisk demand is noted for all descriptions of useful horses, especially for extra heavy draught, which, if staunch and big, command long prices; also heavy draught and cart horses that are subject to trial. We had some very excellent horses at the Bazaar this week, from Maitland and the coast districts, all of which sold well. Good upstanding saddle and harness horses with breeding and style are scarce, and when forward sell readily from £35 to £50; carriage pairs of the right stamp are worth from £100 to £150 per pair, according to quality; extra heavy draught horses realised this week from £40 to £52 each; heavy draught horses fetched from £32 10s to £38; active nuggety cart horses from £20 to £27 10s; strong active horses suitable for springvan work, sold this week both freely and well, top price £36. Springcart and other light harness horses sold freely from £5 to £12. Very light horses and town screws, £1 10s to £5. At the Camperdown Yards we sold a mob of mixed horses on account of Mr. Thomas Pearse, of Woorogee; light portion ranged from £4 to £10; heavy up to £22 15s. A large business done in vehicles of every kind, and several sociable, buggy, cab, and other turnouts changed hands at good figures.—July 20.

MELBOURNE LIVE STOCK MARKET.

RICHARD GIBSON AND CO.'S REPORT.

MELBOURNE, JULY 18.

Fat Cattle.—1815 penned for this week's supply, about 1600 of which were from Victoria, the remainder from New South Wales. As usual of late the larger proportion consisted of middling and indifferent qualities, which ruled slightly under last week's prices, but for the best qualities the demand was keen at rates fully equal to those lately ruling. Messrs. Robertson Brothers' station-bred bullocks, from Colac, were much admired for their breeding and quality, and again made the highest average of the day. We quote:—Best pens of bullocks, from £12 to £13 10s; good ditto, from £9 to £10; second, from £6 10s to £7 10s; others, from £5; best pens of cows, from £7 10s to £8 10s (extra, to £9 17s 6d); others, from £4. We sold—90 bullocks for Messrs. Robertson Brothers, Colac, to £13 10s, the station-breds averaging £12 3s, the mob all round £10 10s; 76 bullocks for Mr. David Mitchell, Cave Hill; 48 cows for Mr. J. Greene, Bungowannah, to £6 5s; 42 bullocks for Mr. A. M'Millan, Caldermeade, to £14, averaging £9 14s; 21 bullocks for A. Smith, Lindenow, to £9 10s, averaging £9; 20 bullocks for Mr. E. J. Crooke, Holey Plain, to £10 10s, averaging £9 10s 6d; 9 bullocks for Mr. N. Bedstrup, Wodonga West; 10 bullocks for Mr. F. J. Aitken, Broadford; 8 bullocks for Mr. P. Cain, Blackwood-road; 7 cows and bullocks for Mr. J. Fell, Tungamah; and small drafts for Messrs. Brettle and Gardiner.

Fat Calves.—150 were yarded, consisting chiefly of medium and inferior quality; a few good, but none prime. Best made from 65s to 75s; good, 45s to 55s; second, 25s to 35s; others from 18s. We sold 14 for Mr. J. Fell, Tungamah, and Mr. G. Grant, Myrniong, prices ranging up to 50s.

Fat Sheep.—Only 11,114 yarded, chiefly crossbreds of useful to prime quality. There was a brisk market for best descriptions at fully last week's advanced prices, whilst other sorts were a little easier. We quote best crossbred wethers, 17s to 18s; good, 15s 6d to 16s 6d; seconds, 13s 6d to 14s 6d; others, 10s 6d up; best merino wethers, 15s to 16s; seconds, 13s to 14s; others, 7s 6d up; ewes as usual. We sold: 810 crossbred wethers for Messrs. Robertson Brothers, Colac, at 18s, the top price of the market; 823 crossbred wethers for Mr. J. Taylor, Woodford, to 18s; 395 merino wethers for Mr. T. C. Hope, Barwonleigh; 229 merino wethers for Messrs. J. and J. Phelps, Laverton, at 11s 6d.

Fat Lambs.—A short supply to hand, viz., 1036; consequently, late satisfactory rates ruled for those suitable for the trade. We quote: Best, 9s 6d to 11s (a few extra higher); seconds, 7s 6d to 8s 6d; others, 6s up. We sold: 110 for Messrs. J. and J. Phelps, Laverton, to 8s 6d; 56 for Mr. Hunter, Lancefield.

PUBLIC COMPANIES.

THE COMMERCIAL BANKING COMPANY OF SYDNEY.

The half-yearly meeting was held at the banking-house yesterday, Mr. Richard Jones in the chair:—

The directors have pleasure in submitting to the shareholders the position of the bank on the 30th June last. After deducting rebate on current bills, reducing premises account, paying note tax, and making ample provision for bad and doubtful debts, the profits for the half-year amount to £91,617 9s. 9d.; and undivided balance from last half-year, £10,987 17s. 1d.; total, £102,605 6s. 10d., which the directors appropriate thus:—To payment of a dividend for the half-year at the rate of 25 per cent. per annum, £75,000; reserve for equalisation of dividends, £15,000; undivided balance, £12,605 6s. 10d.; total, £102,605 6s. 10d. During the half-year a branch has been opened at Smithtown, in this colony, while the branches at Merriwa and Tibooburra have been closed. This meeting will be called upon to elect a director, consequent upon the retirement by rotation of Mr. Richard Jones, who is eligible for re-election, and has given the requisite notice that he is a candidate for the office. It will also rest with the meeting to appoint auditors for the ensuing year. The dividend is now payable.

OUR DEFENCES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Certain suggestions as to raising an army for the defence of Australia have been made from time to time by many persons whose opinions are entitled, more or less, to consideration.

In attacking the subject I would venture to lay before you the following conditions, which I think must be fully considered prior to entering into matters of detail:—1. The expense. 2. The class of officers for the force. 3. The class of men for the force. 4. The length of service proposed. 5. Localities where the force should be raised. 6. The question whether it would or would not be advisable to have a triennial change of troops from each colony to the others, so as to make the officers and men conversant with the different natures of the countries where they might be called upon to serve.

If New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia, and Western Australia (perhaps including Tasmania) required a force, say, of 1000 men, then I maintain that each colony should contribute funds in direct proportion to its population (aboriginals excepted), but the numerical allotment of a share of the defending force should be left to the military authorities.

I am further of opinion that the officer in supreme command of the whole should be a Royal Artillery officer who has seen active service, as the defence of our ports is essentially an artillery defence. There should also be a commanding Royal Engineer. In each individual colony there should be an officer of Royal Artillery in command, and an officer of Royal Engineers to assist him.

I would suggest that the entire force should consist of artillery and engineers, but no infantry or cavalry. The artillery should be divided into garrison artillery and horse artillery; the garrison artillery to be sufficiently large to supply gunners to act as infantry, and the horse artillery to be large enough to supply cavalry; thus all would be trained gunners.

The engineer force should be small, and similar in composition to that in the Imperial service.

To commence, it would appear desirable to obtain all the proposed force from home, and to recruit for that force in the colonies or in Great Britain, as used to be done for the artillery of the Honorable East India Company. For officers, at present I would suggest all to be obtained from home, India, or the colonies, provided that they had previously passed through Woolwich; and in order to keep up the supply of officers I would suggest that a certain number of cadetships should be given annually by the Imperial Government, and that when these young men obtained their commissions they should have the option of serving in the colonies permanently or in the Imperial service permanently; at the same time exchange should be permitted between the Imperial and colonial forces.

In past years a soldier in the Imperial service had to serve 21 years, and then could claim a pension on discharge, with the option of joining the reserve force of pensioners. Supposing a man to enlist at the age of 18 years, he would then be 39 years of age at his time of discharge, when he would still be effective as a soldier.

There can be no doubt whatever that in the colonies a higher rate of pay per diem would be looked for by men enlisting, and it becomes a question whether it would be preferable to grant a higher rate of daily pay without pension on discharge, or a lower rate of pay with pension on discharge, or a lump sum of money instead.

In fact, which arrangement would most benefit the soldier, the average cost to the country, by either method of payment, being the same? Moreover, it must be borne in mind that the hope of pension or bonus on discharge would probably tend to check desertion. I am, &c.,

OLIVER HALDANE STOKES,
Captain late Royal Engineers, F.R.A.S.

TYPHOID FEVER IN THE BREAKFAST THINGS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Any new contribution to speculations as to the origin—or rather to any of the probable causes, or contributory causes—of typhoid fever may be of interest, as suggestive of sanitary precautions.

It appears to be admitted that one, if not the principal, of the causes of this fever is certain infinitesimal animalculæ, or germs, contained in decomposing or decomposed animal matter. The modes by which these materies morbi, or germs of the disease, are generated by this matter may not have been as authentically ascertained as is the manner in which they are distributed from such matter so as to produce infection or contagion, and a spread of the malady. These modes, I believe, are generally stated as three, viz., by inhalation from bad smells, by absorption of the germs through the pores of the skin, and by assimilation of them with drink or food.

A friend of mine died of typhoid fever at Sandhurst, Victoria, about 1874. He was a promising young engineer, of admirable physique and powerful muscular proportions, and was attended by Dr. Macgillivray, chief medical officer of the local hospital, and then president of the Medical Society of Victoria. The doctor could find nothing to complain of about the drainage, the closet, or any of the domestic arrangements of the household in which the patient died. I have often thought how the same has been said of households in which wealthy people have died from typhoid fever. But what did seem to arrest the earnest consideration of the doctor was, two tin washtubs full of rain-water, that were set beneath the rain-drips from the roof. He emptied one, and cursorily examined the residuum in a glass, as he was told "they often used such water to drink, in tea and otherwise." The doctor gave a significant toss of his head as he "hoped they scalded the tubs well first, for the tubs should be as clean as the glass they drank from: to be free from deleterious adhesions, otherwise fever might so be generated." I have ever since had a suspicion of washtubs and "a down" upon washtub water, especially as I have often seen washtubs not scalded, and but very insufficiently rinsed, set to catch rain water for drinking and domestic use in cooking, &c.

It is possibly amongst "things not generally known" that a habit is old and not uncommon amongst cooks, kitchenmen, and general servants of occasionally washing up the knives and forks, cups and saucers, plates, dishes, &c., after meals, with hot-water suds taken from a washtub, or, worse still, from the washing-boiler in which the dirty or half-washed clothes of the household are boiling. Says Jane, at the stove, "Oh my! the kettle's nearly empty, and I'm late with my washing up." Her anxiety is thus quelled by Mary, who says, from the washtub, "Oh, never mind, here's plenty nice clean suds in the boiler a boiling away." So the dipper is inserted and the crockery and "things" are washed-up with the suds from the boiler. That typhoid fever does not always or even often result from this filthy process is by no means a proof that the fever may not sometimes occasionally be produced by it. Not everybody who smells a stinking drain or decomposed meat is attacked with typhoid, though it has been presumedly proved that some people have contracted this fell disease in that way. And equally so in connection with the germs of disease distributed and assimilated with food; some people in partaking of such food escape contraction of the malady, whilst others succumbed to it. May it not be possible, therefore, that the germs of typhoid fever may sometimes be contracted from breakfast or dinner table utensils that have been "washed-up" in "suds" from the boiler?

It may be contended that the "suds," being boiled, have so become disinfected from any germs of disease that may have lurked, or been generated from the decomposing animal matter diffused amidst the stale and putrifying perspiration contained in dirty clothes. I should like the opinion of some of your correspondents—some who are qualified specialists—upon such a question as whether the more washing and boiling are a sufficient process of disinfection to remove from the water all germs of disease that may have lurked in the dirty clothes—presuming such to have been there either by infection or decomposing perspiration—so that typhoid fever could not be communicated in the manner I have indicated. If such disinfection is so complete, how comes it that, after the clothes have been removed from the boiler, and the "suds" are allowed to remain overnight, they produce such a pestiferous stench, a stench that becomes the more abominable the longer the suds are kept?

If typhoid fever may or can be communicated in the manner I have indicated, vigorous scrutiny should be resorted to for a suppression of this abominable and dangerous habit. If the disease cannot be so communicated, the publication of this may operate as an acceptable warning to housewives who are unaware that their cups and saucers are "got up" in a stew of dirty linen, and so this dangerous, or at all events disgustingly dirty, practice may be diminished, or, it is to be hoped, abolished.

Having been "in service" myself, I can testify, from experience, that the practice is by no means uncommon one. I spoke to a lady—the mother of a family—about it one day it was in vogue in her kitchen. Looking at me pityingly, as though I were the unfortunate victim of a foolish prejudice, she simply smiled upon her domestics, as much as to say, "We know and do a thing or two that you can't understand." Yet that lady was born and reared a gentlewoman, and would turn up her nose and be awfully shocked at the slightest soil-blemish on a sheet or a towel, or a speck on a tablecloth, a knife, or a spoon, or a plate.

DIOGENES.

Darlinghurst, July 14.

An ancient life of St. Patrick in Latin has recently been brought to light in a manuscript in the Royal Library, Brussels, which formerly belonged to an Irish monastery at Würzburg. This life, it seems, much resembles the account of St. Patrick extant in the manuscript known as the Book of Armagh, ascribed to the ninth century, and of which portions have been published in the "Facsimiles of National MSS. of Ireland, edited by Mr. John T. Gilbert, F.S.A." The initial part of the life of St. Patrick, which has long been missing from the Book of Armagh, is, we understand, extant in the Brussels manuscript, which will shortly be published by the Bollandists.

PARRAMATTA.

THAT VALUABLE and EXTENSIVE BLOCK of LAND, in area 2 ROODS 17 PERCHES, having frontages to SMITH-STREET, near the PARRAMATTA RIVER, together with the
MASSIVELY CONSTRUCTED BRICK STORE, on stone foundations, iron roof, containing four floors and other buildings thereon, known as
ALFRED FRENCH'S TWEED and WOOLLEN FACTORY.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, Sydney, on FRIDAY, 27th July, at 11 o'clock,

The above-mentioned business premises, which are now worked with first-class suitable machinery, driven by a 16 horse-power engine, and capable of turning out a far larger yield of TWILLED TWEEDS.

TO MANUFACTURERS,
WAREHOUSEMEN,
and OTHERS.

The natural situation of this
COMMODIOUS BUILDING renders it well adapted for its present use as a TWEED MANUFACTORY,
being also so easily accessible to the CITY and JUNCTION of our country railways.

The marvellously expanding growth of our premier colony in both points of population and wealth must give hope of an early, rapid, and sure advance in the important industry of manufactures from WOOL, which is the staple product of our large territory, to the aid of which almost perfect machinery will be applied; and this
WELL-KNOWN WOOLLEN FACTORY is now equal to turn out some of the best popular and well-wearing TWILLED COLONIAL TWEEDS, which have proved the appreciation for them by the price paid for the article.

Further particulars at the Rooms of the Auctioneers, and INSPECTION INVITED.
Terms at sale.

Messrs. SALTER and BARKER, Hunter-street, are Solicitors of the Mortgagee.

HUNTER'S HILL.

IMPORTANT and EXTENSIVE Sale of the Properties of H. C. BROOKES, Esq.,

WALSHALE VILLA and Grounds, fronting LANE COVE RIVER, next the residence of CHARLES D'APICE, Esq.
Also,
CHOICE VILLA and BUILDING SITES, fronting DRUMMOYNE and other established streets in this delightful marine suburb.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions from H. C. BROOKES, Esq., to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 27th JULY,
at 11 o'clock,
His well-known and valuable properties at HUNTER'S HILL,
as follows:—

LOT 3, of SECTION 1. MARUNA. A most faithfully built STONE VILLA RESIDENCE, FERDINAND-STREET, near ALEXANDRA-STREET (the main road), and close to the LANE COVE STEAMERS' WHARF.

It contains 7 rooms, kitchen, and servant's room.

The GROUNDS, which are tastefully laid out as flower garden and orchard, have 150 feet 8 inches frontage to Ferdinand-street, with a depth of 280 FEET.

LOT 1, of SECTION 1. WALSHALE VILLA. A desirable family residence, built of stone, with verandah in front, and containing hall, 6 rooms, kitchen, store-room, with room over washhouse, &c.

The GROUNDS are extensive, and laid out into garden and orchard, terraced to the waters of LANE COVE. They have 311 FEET FRONTAGE to FERDINAND-STREET, and very extensive water frontage to Lane Cove River.

LOT 2, section 1.—A MAGNIFICENT VILLA SITE, on the elevated ground overlooking the river. It is partially planted as a garden, and otherwise improved, and has 150 FEET FRONTAGE to FERDINAND-STREET with a depth of 172 feet.

SECTION 1.—Lots 4 to 6, THREE IMPROVED building allotments, two have each 36 feet 4 inches frontage, and one has 38 feet 2 inches frontage to Ferdinand-street, with depths of 147 feet to 148 feet; and lot 6 is a corner with frontage to Madeline-street.

SECTION 1, Lots 7 to 10.—FOUR IMPROVED ALLOTMENTS, having from 33 feet 4 inches to 39 feet frontages to Madeline-street, with depths of 110 feet and 142 feet.

SECTION 1, Lots 11 to 16.—SIX VILLA SITES, having 45 FEET 7 INCHES to 50 FEET frontages to DRUMMOYNE-STREET, with depths of 200 FEET.

SECTION 2.—Lots 1 to 13, THIRTEEN choice building allotments of land, having each 30 feet frontages to FERDINAND and ARAM STREETS, with depths through of 174 feet.

The above improved Properties and Building Lands are in the most elevated part of HUNTER'S HILL, overlooking LANE COVE RIVER and NORTH SHORE; also within easy walking distance of the Hunter's Hill Wharf on the Parramatta River side, as well as being only a few yards from, and within sight of the 'Lane Cove steamers' wharf at the foot of Drummoyne-street.

, INTENDING PURCHASERS wishing to inspect will be shown over the Estate any afternoon by calling at Walshale.
Terms, liberal, at sale.
PLAN on View at the Rooms, and

A subdivision of the above valuable, conveniently situated city lands and premises.

This is a centrally-situated subdivision of CITY BUILDING LAND in the very heart of the COMMERCIAL PORTION of the CITY, in PITT-STREET NORTH, near
THE EXCHANGE,
CLOSE to the CIRCULAR QUAY,
GEORGE-STREET,
THE BANKING INSTITUTIONS, and the PRINCIPAL CITY BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS.

It is now one of the very FEW CHANCES of obtaining A NUMBER OF ALLOTMENTS with extensive frontage in the above important VALUABLE THOROUGHFARES, admirably adapted for what is undoubtedly the best description of premises to hold for PERMANENT INVESTMENT,
COMMERCIAL STORES and OFFICES.

The high prices recently obtained for GORDON'S EXCHANGE CORNER, WOLFEN'S EXCHANGE BUILDINGS, and other properties quite convenient to this CAPITAL SUBDIVISION
stamps the COMMERCIAL value of the POSITION, and the estimation in which it is held by the mercantile community and capitalists.

NOTE the LIBERAL TERMS above.

The large AUCTION PLAN is now on view, and LITHOGRAPHS
obtainable at the Rooms of the Auctioneers.

13,750 ACRES FIRST CLASS COUNTRY.

MORT and CO. have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Sale Room of their Wool Warehouses, Circular Quay, Sydney, on TUESDAY, 28th August, 1883, at half-past 2 o'clock p.m.,

Those choice properties known as
WATERVIEW
ARRAMAGONG EAST
and

situated about 10 miles from the important town of Young, comprising an area of about 10,000 acres conditionally purchased and freehold land, and about 3750 acres of leasehold land, all well watered.

The improvements are extensive, comprising comfortable HOMESTEAD, stabling, sheep-drafting yards, good separate DWELLING-HOUSE for overseer, huts, &c., and a great extent of fencing dividing the property into numerous paddocks.

The salubrious climate and accessible situation of the property in the midst of a favourite sheep district render this a most favourable opportunity to those on the look-out for a comfortable homestead estate.

An inspection of the properties is invited, and further particulars may be obtained on application to the proprietor, CARLO MARINA, Esq., Moppity, Young; F. A. BROCK, Young; or from MORT and CO., Sydney.

COONGOOLA STATION,
QUEENSLAND.

R. GOLDSBROUGH and CO., Limited, in conjunction with Powers, Rutherford, and Co., have received instructions from Messrs. Tobin and Co. to SELL by AUCTION, at Goldsbrough's Wool Warehouses, Melbourne, on FRIDAY, August 3, at 3 o'clock p.m., the Coongoola Station,
Warrego district, Queensland, together with about
62,000 sheep
9000 cattle
300 horses.

The Coongoola station includes an area of about 650,000 acres in one compact block, having 30 miles frontage to the best part of the Warrego River, which here forms a succession of wide deep reaches, never known to be dry; and there are two creeks from the Warrego intersecting the back country, on which there are five large dams, and which a small outlay would render permanent, thus giving nearly 100 miles additional frontage. There are also several large tanks recently constructed, and now full of water, in addition to three wells. The whole is fenced in with wire fencing, the sheep are in paddocks, and further fencing is being rapidly pushed forward, nearly 300 miles having been completed during the past 18 months. A first-class woolshed, fitted for 60 shearers, is completed, with woolroom, huts, yards, and all requirements. There are two comfortable home stations on the frontage, one containing 10 rooms, with large garden in full bearing attached, and stabling, stores, huts, and other outbuildings.

The country consists of open salt and cotton bush plains, intersected by narrow belts of timber, forming good shelter for stock. The grasses are of the best description, consisting of Mitchell blue, and barley grass, with a great variety of fattening herbage; in fact the country is unsurpassed for its grazing and fattening qualities, and it is conveniently situated for the Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide, and Brisbane markets, being only 190 miles from Bourke, on the Darling, and about 200 miles from the terminus of the railway to Brisbane at Muckadilla. Fat stock and wool can thus be disposed of at moderate rates of carriage.

The sheep include 32,600 specially selected Wingadee ewes, now lambing to Wingadee rams; 9000 maiden ewes from Wingadee, and about 19,000 wethers. There are 1000 Boonoke rams, recently purchased for use this next season. The clip of wool and crop of lambs will be given in to the purchaser, the property being for delivery from the shears. The cattle are of fattening ages, the bulls having been taken out nearly two years ago, and the old and young stock sold off. About 2000 fat bullocks and cows are now ready for market; also 10,000 fat wethers.

The horses are exceptionally good, and include over 100 heavy draughts, most of them being now at work tank making.

This grand squatting property was taken up in 1861, when all the district was open, and was specially selected for its grazing and fattening qualities. It is for sale to close a partnership.

For further particulars apply to the auctioneers, Melbourne or to R. Goldsbrough and Co., Limited, 4, Spring-street, Sydney.

PRELIMINARY NOTICE.
MAGNIFICENT PASTORAL FREEHOLD ESTATE and SQUATTING PROPERTY,
in the
Murrumbidgee District of New South Wales.

DAL. CAMPBELL and CO. (in conjunction with Messrs. Wilkinson, Graves, and Lavender, and A. T. Bolton) have received instructions to SELL by PUBLIC AUCTION, absolutely, owing to dissolution of partnership, at Menzies' Hotel, Melbourne, on the 25th OCTOBER, 1883,
That magnificent and highly-improved property, known as YARRABEE PARK,
comprising about 115,000 acres of freehold and 30,000 acres of Crown lands, together with all improvements, plant, stores, &c., and the following stock, viz.:—
106,727 sheep
600 head of superior well-bred cattle
180 well-bred upstanding horses.
Further particulars in future advertisement.

AUCKLAND PROPERTY.

VALUABLE FREEHOLD
ALLOTMENT.

56 Feet Frontage to Albert-street
56 Feet Frontage to Chapel-street, situated close to the Dock.

THE SUBSCRIBERS have received instructions to sell by auction, at their Rooms, Fort-street, Auckland, on MONDAY, 30th July, at 12 o'clock,
By order the Trustees in the Estate of the late
Captain Bowden,
Allotment 10, sec. 18, City of Auckland, having frontages of 56 feet to Lower Albert-street, and 56 feet to Chapel-street, with a through depth of 213 feet (adjoining Star Hotel).

The above affords an opportunity of acquiring an original freehold allotment in the heart of the city; occupying as it does a commanding position in what is undoubtedly one of the principal thoroughfares, and being in close proximity to the new railway station, the Dock, the proposed Custom-house site, and the main outlet of the west side of the city (so rapidly extending), it cannot fail to become in a very few years a very valuable property.

For particulars of title apply to HOLDSWORTH and EVANS, Solicitors, 75, Pitt-street, Sydney.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 7.
AT THE ROOMS, 150, PITT-STREET,
EXTENSIVE SALE IN A TRUST ESTATE.

THE ESTATE OF THE LATE W. REDMAN.

On Terms Specially Arranged to suit the Convenience of Speculators.

MILLS and PILE have received to sell by public auction, at the Sydney Auction Rooms, 150, Pitt-street, on TUESDAY, August 7, at 11.30 sharp,
The following portions of the properties of the late W. Redman, in the parish of Manly Cove:—
The first lot to be offered at the sale comprises 116 ACRES, being an amalgamation of Palmer's grant, 43 acres; Innes' grant, 22 acres; George's grant, 30 acres, and Nickey's grant, in all 116 acres, situate about ONE MILE FROM MANLY PIER, fronting the Pittwater-road, Curl Curl Lagoon and the ocean. A grand block for a private estate, or for subdivision.

Lot 2 consists of a block of land half a mile from the above, containing 40 acres, being part of Mildwater's grant, on which is erected A LARGE STONE HOUSE, which only wants furnishing to become a choice family residence. The land extends on each side of the Pittwater-road from Curl Curl Creek.

Lot 3 consists of a choice and carefully-selected BLOCK of 100 ACRES, admirably adapted for market gardens or for subdivision, situate adjacent to the Pittwater-road, and partly intersected by the same. It is about three miles from Manly Beach.

Lot 4 consists of 2 BLOCKS of 24 ACRES and 51 ACRES respectively, originally granted to Alexander Park, 75 acres in all. These lots are situated about a mile off the Pittwater-road on the high land above, and command a magnificent view of the ocean and surrounding country, and are well worth the attention of speculators, as they are sure to go cheap.

Lot 5 consists of a BLOCK of 24 ACRES, originally granted to W. Redman, and on the very top of Rodborough Heights. The situation of this block is charming.

Lot 6 comprises 3 GRANTS to W. Redman of 20 ACRES, 20 ACRES, and 18 ACRES, 58 acres in all, situate on and near to Barnet Bridge Creek, and adjoining D. Wentworth's 380-acre grant. This is a really choice position.

Lot 7 comprises 5 GRANTS to W. T. Cape of 25 ACRES, 22¼ acres, 22 acres, 20 acres and 18½ acres respectively, 107¾ acres in all, adjoining the above. The situation of these lands is superb, and they are well worthy of inspection.

Lot 8. The allotments on the Clontarf Heights Estate, situate close to the ferry across Middle Harbour, and just behind the Middle Harbour Church, consisting of 5 lots fronting M'Millan-street; 14 lots fronting Peacock-street, and 12 lots fronting Alleyne-street; 31 lots in all. For further particulars see small lithos.

Lot 9. Sundry allotments in the Brighton Heights Estate, situate on and near the Main Sydney-road, about a mile from Sydney, consisting of section 1, lots 1, 8, 9, and 10; section 2, lots 1, 2, 3, 7, 9, 10, and 14; and section 8, lots 3 and 11; 13 lots in all. See small lithos.

Lot 10. 12 blocks on the Wentworth Estate, selected by Mr. Redman at the subdivision sale, consisting of lots 6, 7, 10, and 11, 31 to 38 inclusive, each lot in area from 5 to 7 acres.
ABOUT 75 ACRES IN ALL.
These were chosen after a careful inspection of the estate, and will be sold in consecutive order.

Lot 11. Half-interest in M'Eveley's grant, of 10 acres 2 roods 13 perches, situate fronting and on both sides of the Main Sydney and Manly Roads. This is a splendid block for subdivision, and the purchaser is certain to do well with his purchase.

Lot 12.—WILKINSON'S GRANT, 12a. 1r. 1p., situate adjoining the above, and also adjacent to Alleyne's grant recently sold as a subdivision on the ground. This block also fronts, and is intersected by the Main Sydney and Manly Road, and if subdivided and sold in lots on the ground would realise much more than Alleyne's.

The Auctioneers are happy to be able to announce that they have succeeded in arranging admirably suitable terms, so that speculators may buy at this sale, and make a few thousands, viz.:—
25 per cent. deposit
25 per cent. in 3 months
25 per cent. in 6 months
25 per cent. in 9 months
by promissory notes secured upon the property; or if the purchaser has any portion of the loan recently floated, he can at his option pay cash.

Lithographs are now ready, and can be obtained at the Rooms, Pitt-street.
For particulars of title apply to Messrs. Allen and Allen, solicitors, Elizabeth-street.

CATALOGUES NOW OBTAINABLE
at Auctioneer's Office, 197, Sussex-street, Sydney.

SALE BY AUCTION.

TO PAINTERS, DECORATORS, FANCY GOODS DEALERS, and OTHERS.

F. A. ARTLETT has received instructions from the Executors of the late Herbert Coates, Painter, to sell by public auction, at his late residence, George-street, Parramatta, on MONDAY, 23rd July,
The whole of the large and varied stock of paints, oils, colours, varnishes, spirits, and turps; a very large assortment of plain and fancy glass, assorted sizes, suitable for the building trade; a well-selected stock of picture frame mouldings, as well as a great stock of pictures, jewellery, and fancy goods generally.

To the trade this is a chance seldom met with, as the Stock-in-trade and Goodwill of a business, unequalled out of Sydney, can be purchased at 50 per cent. less than the English cost of the stock only. The auctioneer is prepared to treat with buyers for the whole in one line if desired, if not sold; or if not so sold before MONDAY, the goods will be sold in lots to suit purchasers without the slightest reserve, as the executors are anxious to close the estate.

Sale to commence at 11 o'clock,

SALE OF
"THE LEVELS" STUD FLOCK.

Descended from C. B. Fisher's well-known Flocks, exhibits from which have during the last 14 years taken 327 prizes, viz., 228 first, 85 second, and 14 third prizes, including many cups, medals, and diplomas, at home, abroad, and in the Australian colonies; and, as highly profitable sheep, have fully held their own in competition with the best Merino Stud Flocks.

POWERS, RUTHERFORD, and CO., of Melbourne, and ELDER'S WOOL and PRODUCE COMPANY, Limited, of Adelaide, are jointly instructed by E. W. Pitts to sell by auction, on THURSDAY and FRIDAY, 16th and 17th AUGUST NEXT, commencing at 11 o'clock each day,
at
"THE LEVELS," DRY CREEK, SOUTH AUSTRALIA,
eight miles from Adelaide,
The whole of the above celebrated Flock of Pure Australian Merino Sheep, about 3400 in number, comprising—
162 FIRST-CLASS STUD RAMS
6 FLOCK RAMS
85 RAM LAMBS
6 SUMMER LAMBS
1165 CHOICE BREEDING EWES, with over 100 per cent. of lambs at foot, viz.:—
622 RAM LAMBS, and
574 EWE LAMBS
109 CHOICE BREEDING EWES, which had summer lambs
123 MAIDEN EWES, first studs, 2 years old
344 ditto ditto, first studs, 1 year old
71 ditto ditto Weaners
42 ditto ditto, 1 and 2 years old, selected for show purposes
20 PRIZE FAT WETHERS.
3402

The Stud Rams will be sold singly. The Breeding Ewes will be sold in lots, ranging from 27 ewes to 141 ewes, and the Ram Lambs and Ewe Lambs belonging to these ewes in separate lots. The lots of lambs will range from 7 to 79 lambs.
The Maiden Ewes will be submitted in lots to suit purchasers.
The breeder, on account of bad health, is unable to devote the care and attention necessary for the successful management of such a flock, so has determined that the whole shall be sold
POSITIVELY WITHOUT RESERVE.
Flockmasters will therefore be able to secure choice selections of Stud Sheep eminently adapted to all parts of Australia and New Zealand, the results of much painstaking labour for many years.
Catalogues with full particulars may be had on application to the auctioneers. The sheep will be open for inspection at the Levels from 9th August.

CANOWIE STUD RAMS.

Now on View at Hill, Clark, and Co.'s Wool Warehouses, Circular Quay.

Sale will be held punctually at 10.30 a.m.
THIS DAY, 21st instant.

HILL, CLARK, and CO. desire to draw the special attention of Flockmasters to the sale of these celebrated rams, which are now landed and on view at their Wool Warehouses, Circular Quay, where inspection is particularly invited.

The present shipment of 20 STUD RAMS
far excels any previous consignment in point of quality, and for sound constitutions, length of staple, weight of carcase, and intrinsic paying qualities these rams are unequalled.

Catalogues are now ready and may be had on application.

TRADE NOTICE.

HILL, CLARK, and CO. are instructed to sell by auction, on MONDAY, the 23rd July, 190 prime fat cattle, for W. Crowley, Esq.

PURE-BRED AYRSHIRE CATTLE.

GREAT SALE OF AYRSHIRE CATTLE,
from Victoria,
at
ELLIS' YARDS, GEORGE-STREET.

WILKINSON, GRAVES, and LAVENDER have been instructed by Mr. William Lawrence, of Moreton Beilo Stud Farm, Victoria, to dispose of about 30 HEAD PURE-BRED AYRSHIRE BULLS, COWS, and HEIFERS, among which will be found some very choice beasts of both sexes.

They will arrive by Saturday morning's train, and will be immediately ready for inspection, at the above yards.
The AYRSHIRE CATTLE are rapidly coming into favour, being such grand milkers. The very high prices paid by the Americans for Jersey and Ayrshire cattle alone stamps them as being worthy of the attention of the Australian farmers and others connected with stock. This consignment comprises drafts from the best breeders in Victoria. Inspection is invited.

Terms at sale.

For further particulars apply to
WILKINSON, GRAVES, and LAVENDER,
12, Spring-street, Sydney.

From the flocks of those celebrated breeders of pure Spanish Vermont Sheep, Messrs. Hammond, Rockwell, Dean, Pete, and Severance.

BRUNKER and WOLFE have received instructions from Mr. Thomas C. Jones, California, to sell by auction, at Shark Island, Port Jackson, Sydney, on WEDNESDAY, 8th AUGUST,
at 12 o'clock,
47 RAMS, two and 4 tooth
25 EWES, two-tooth.

These sheep are selections from flocks of the best Merino studs in the States, and represented to us as very choice and pure, evenly clad all over with soft, lustrous wool.
BRUNKER and WOLFE,
Sydney and Maitland.

FOURTH ANNUAL SALE
of the
HAVILAH STUD SHEEP.

To be sold at Havilah,
near Mudgee,
on
WEDNESDAY, 25th July, 1883.

GRIFFITHS and WEAVER have received instructions from the present proprietor, Mr. H. C. White, to sell by auction, at HAVILAH,
on above date,
the
FOLLOWING CHOICE SHEEP, being the usual ANNUAL DRAFTS from
the
CELEBRATED HAVILAH FLOCKS, so well known as the
PROPERTY of the late Mr. N. P. BAYLY, viz.:—
5 SPECIAL STUD RAMS, including the celebrated ram "REFORMER," now rising 5 years old
100 STUD RAMS, ages from 10 months to aged
40 STUD HOGGET RAMS, by "PRINCE 2nd"
1600 FLOCK HOGGET RAMS
800 STUD EWES, 4 years to aged
1000 STUD EWES, rising 3 years

Memo.—"Prince 2nd" was bred by Messrs. W. Gibson and Son, of Scone, Tasmania. He was purchased by Mr. White for 510 guineas, and was considered by competent judges to be the best ram ever imported from Tasmania. The 40 hogget rams to be offered at this sale, sired by this noted sheep, are a grand lot, and should be especially valuable for stud purposes, as stock by Prince 2nd have always realised very high prices, six of his sons averaging £157 3s. 2d each at the sales held in Sydney in July, 1882.

The ewes have been tupped by special stud rams, to drop 15th September.

The sheep may remain for fourteen days at Havilah after the sale, free of charge, in order to give purchasers time to arrange about drovers.

The sheep will be divided into suitable lots, the special studs being sold separately; and the flock rams in pens of 50 to 100, with the option to purchaser of taking 400.

The Havilah sheep have long maintained a pre-eminent position among the merino flocks of Australia, having been widely distributed throughout the colonies with the best possible results, as seen by the following extract from a letter received by the present proprietor from Mr. Hankey, of the firm of Messrs. Chas. Balme and Co., London. Mr. Hankey, writing under date 9th March, 1883, says:—"We have had an opportunity lately in several cases of learning that some of our friends in New South Wales, whose flocks have during the past few years made the most striking progress and improvement, have been breeding from the NPB rams, which fully bear out the statement you made to me some time ago as to the value of your sheep for stud purposes. We have, in correspondence with these friends, encouraged them to continue to use this strain of blood, and have felt justified also in other instances in recommending its adoption." It is only necessary to add that the whole of the sheep to be offered on July 25 have been carefully selected and culled, and Mr. White offers all his selected ram lambs of 1882, except the usual 80 retained for station use.

Intending buyers are requested to give the auctioneers intimation of their intention to attend the sale, so that sufficient coach accommodation may be provided.

Pamphlets, with full particulars, to be obtained from the agents.
GRIFFITHS and WEAVER,
Sydney.

FOR SALE BY PRIVATE CONTRACT.
Possession given on or about the 1st of August, 1883.

BRUNKER and WOLFE have received instructions from Mr. Thomas Cooper to sell by private contract,
The above extensive BUTCHERING BUSINESS, established for upwards of 40 years, together with the properties worked in connection therewith, and at present occupied by the proprietor.

The business was established by Mr. Cooper in 1843, and has been continuously conducted under his personal supervision. It embraces every line of the retail branch; and Mr. Cooper having at all times made it a rule to purchase only the very best stock in the market, has attained the highest repute as purveyor to the principal consumers in the town and district, thus rendering the business steady, genuine worth, and permanently lucrative.
Mr. Cooper finds it impossible in his present state of health to devote that energy and attention to the trade which are necessary to ensure a perpetuation of the success which has constantly followed him; he has consequently determined to retire, but is willing to assist his successor for a reasonable time as a means of securing the retention of the business.

Further particulars can be obtained upon application to the Auctioneers; or to Mr. Cooper, on the premises, opposite the Post and Telegraph Office, High-street, West Maitland.

BAKING BUSINESS for SALE, doing over 4 tons per week, full price; cash takings, £90 per week; everything complete, room to increase, good position. Address Loaf, Herald Office.

FOR SALE (a sure fortune), one of the best known and oldest established Confectionery BUSINESSES in best part George-street, well-stocked, oven, and plant complete, and capable of turning out large quantities of goods; retail takings, £30 weekly. Also, two smaller Confectionery Businesses, first-rate positions, cheap. Crocker and Lovett, 244, Pitt-street.

BUSINESS, with long lease: a rare chance for wine-growers, merchants, and others. Apply Mr. Thorne, 250, George-street.

TO FURNISHING IRONMONGERS, IRON MERCHANTS, &c.
For SALE, by private treaty, an Ironmongery BUSINESS, established in 1867, in the central part of Queensland coast. The town is rapidly increasing in population and manufactures, and is now second to no town outside the metropolis. All particulars as to present proprietor relinquishing the business may be obtained from Messrs. ALFRED SHAW and CO., 13, Little Collins-street W., Melbourne. Capital required, about £5000; terms easy.

POWELL'S BALSAM OF ANISEED
Sure remedy against Cough.

READ. Sufferers from Cough and Bronchitis, the following letter from the Rev. Horace Roberts, D.D.:—"Dear Sir,—A few years ago I addressed a letter to you in commendation of your famous old cough remedy, and having since known its efficacy as superior to any other preparation, I consider it to be merely a public duty to certify, as the experience of my own family and friends, to the value of the Balsam of Aniseed as the cheapest and best remedy for coughs and colds.—Yours, faithfully, H. ROBERTS, Olney, Bucks.—To Mr. Thos. Powell, Albion-place, Blackfriars-road, London."

EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF A COUGH.
"H.M. Gunboat Netley, Wick, Scotland.
"Dear Sir,—Having had a most distressing and severe cough, which caused me many sleepless nights and restless days, I was recommended by his Lordship the Earl of Caithness to try your most valuable Balsam of Aniseed, and I can assure you with the first dose I found immediate relief, even without having to suspend my various duties, and the first small bottle completely cured me. Therefore I have the greatest confidence in fully recommending it to the million.
(Signed) "W. LINZELL."

POWELL'S BALSAM OF ANISEED.
The following letter has been received by Mr. T. Powell from Wm. Boards, Esq., an agriculturalist and land agent, residing at Nightingale Hall, Edmonton:—
"Dear Sir,—I have recently suffered much from a most violent cough, proceeding from a tickling in my chest, which no remedy out of many I resorted to could allay. My head was constantly aching, and my whole frame entirely shaken. Having seen the good effects of your Balsam of Aniseed in several members of my family, I purchased a small bottle, and when going to bed at night took a teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water, just warm. The effect was immediate: it arrested the tickling in my chest. I slept well, and arose perfectly restored in the morning, with the exception of debility, arising from fatigue by incessant coughing for some days previous. My cough entirely left me, and has never returned. Having since heard of a lady in the neighbourhood who for a long time had laboured under a most distressing cough, and who had resorted to every remedy within her knowledge, I sent the remainder of the bottle to her; and that long-standing, obstinate, and (as she thought) incurable cough was perfectly cured. For coughs, colds, shortness of breath, asthma, tickling in the throat, and all pulmonary affections, this medicine will be found invaluable. I am, dear Sir, yours very truly,
"WM. BOARDS.
"To Mr. Thomas Powell."

POWELL'S BALSAM OF ANISEED.
"Sir,—I have for a long time suffered from a severe cough, and tried all manner of remedies. Dr. Liebrecht advised POWELL'S BALSAM OF ANISEED. It cured me after a few days. You are at liberty to use this letter in hopes that others may benefit by it.
"I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

DUC DE MONTABOR WRITES:—
"Chateau de Montabor, Aveyron.
"Sir,—Having suffered for some time from an obstinate cough, accompanied with fever, continuous headaches, and sleepless nights, I resolved, after having vainly tried several other medicines, to have recourse to your BALSAM OF ANISEED. I cannot resist, Sir, the desire of making you acquainted with the really marvellous results which I derived from it. From the first dose I felt great relief, the bad symptoms grew feebler, the irritation of the throat was calming down, and I recovered the sleep which nearly left me. The third dose delivered me completely, and I am now completely restored to health.
"Receive, Sir, with the expression of my gratitude, the assurance of my distinguished sentiments.
"DUC DE MONTABOR."

LOOSENS THE PHLEGM IMMEDIATELY.
The Dean of Westminster's Verger writes:—"I was advised to try the Balsam of Aniseed; I did, and have found very great relief. It is most comforting in allaying irritation and giving strength to the voice."
Lionel Brough, Esq., the eminent actor, writes:—"I think it an invaluable medicine for members of my profession, and have always recommended it to my brother and sister artistes."

THE EFFECT OF ONE TEASPOONFUL taken in a little water on going to bed is EXTRAORDINARY. No family should be without it.

STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDERS FOR CHILDREN CUTTING TEETH.
CAUTION TO PURCHASERS.
The value of this well-known Family Medicine has been largely tested in all parts of the world, and by all grades of society, for upwards of FIFTY YEARS. Its well-earned extensive sale has induced SPURIOUS IMITATIONS, some of which, in OUTWARD APPEARANCE, so closely resemble the original as to have deceived many purchasers. The proprietor, therefore, feels it due to the public to give a special caution against the use of such imitations.
Purchasers are therefore requested carefully to observe the four following distinctive characteristics, without which none are genuine:—
1. In every case the words JOHN STEEDMAN, Chemist, Walworth, Surrey, are engraved on the Government stamp affixed to EACH PACKET.
2. Each SINGLE POWDER has directions for the dose, and the words "John Steedman, chemist, Walworth, Surrey," printed thereon.
3. The name Steedman is always spelt with the two EE's.
4. The manufacture is carried on solely at Walworth, Surrey.
Sold in packets by all Chemists and Medicine Vendors at 1s 1½d and 2s 9d each. Sold in Sydney by ELLIOTT BROTHERS.

SPECIAL DAY, Saturday.—Invitation Day.—All are welcome, purchasers or not. American Novelty Co., Pitt-st.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—Times, July 13, 1864.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne.—The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, December 31, 1864.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne "is prescribed by scores of orthodox practitioners. Of course it would not be thus singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"—Medical Times, January 13, 1866.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is the best and most certain remedy in coughs, colds, asthma, consumption, neuralgia, rheumatism, &c.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is a certain cure for cholera, dysentery, diarrhoea, colic, &c.
Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne.—Caution: None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle. Sole manufacturer, J. T. Davenport, 33, Great Russell-street, London. Sold in bottles at 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, 4s 6d, and 11s. Agents, Sydney, ELLIOTT BROTHERS.

ARNOLD'S BALSAM of HOREHOUND, A PURE VEGETABLE EXTRACT.—Nothing so quickly cures Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Loss of Voice, Influenza, Hoarseness, and Weak Chest as this BALSAM. Where children have Whooping Cough or are liable to Croup, always keep it. A single dose quietens and gives relief. A small bottle often cures. This is the best expectorant now in use; rapidly relieves Bronchial Tubes by dissolving the congealed phlegm. Ask for "Arnold's," and get it. Spurious imitations are sometimes offered. Sold by all Chemists and Storekeepers throughout Australasia.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.
A CURE GUARANTEED.
Dr. E. C. WEST'S
NERVE and BRAIN TREATMENT.
A guaranteed specific for hysteria, dizziness, convulsions, fits, nervous neuralgia, headache, nervous prostration caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco, wakefulness, mental depression, softening of the brain, resulting in insanity and leading to misery, decay, and death; premature old age, caused by over-exertion of the brain or over indulgence. Each box contains one month's treatment. 5s a box, or 6 boxes for 25s. Sent by mail, prepaid, on receipt of price. We guarantee six boxes to cure any case. With each order received for six boxes, accompanied with 25s, the purchaser will receive the manufacturer's written guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not effect a cure. Guarantees issued by all chemists and druggists in Australia.

Importers of Patent Medicines, Druggists' Sundries.
Dye Goods, Surgical Instruments and Appliances, Perfumery, Fancy Soaps, Sponges, Brushware, Cordial-makers' Machinery, Corks, Patent and Plain Sodawater Bottles, Labels, Sundries, and Photographic Chemicals, beg to invite inspection of their new goods ex s.s. Aberdeen, Clifton, and other vessels.

All articles will be sold at reasonable rates, to command a continuance of the liberal support hitherto accorded to them.

LIVERCOMPLAINTS.—Dr. KING'S DANDELION and QUININE LIVER PILLS (without mercury).
THE BEST REMEDY FOR BILIOUSNESS, STOMACH DERANGEMENT, FLATULENCE, PAINS BETWEEN THE SHOULDERS, BAD APPETITE, INDIGESTION, ACIDITY, HEADACHE, HEARTBURN, and all other symptoms of disordered liver and dyspepsia. The safest and mildest pills for every constitution.
In Boxes at 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, sold everywhere.
Prepared by Jas. Rorke, London.

PEPPER'S QUININE AND IRON TONIC possesses all the powers of these valuable tonics in banishing diseases and symptoms traceable to weakness. It rouses and develops the nervous energies, causing increased action of all the nerve centres, enriches the blood, promotes appetite, dispels languor and depression.

PEPPER'S QUININE and IRON TONIC strengthens the nerves and muscular system, improves digestion, animates the spirits, thoroughly recruits the health and strength. Bottles (32 doses), 4s 6d. Sold by chemists everywhere. Insist on having Pepper's Tonic. Made only by J. Pepper and Co., London.

SULPHOLINE LOTION.—An External Means of CURING SKIN DISEASES. There is scarcely any eruption but will yield to "Sulpholine," and commence to fade away in a few days. Ordinary pimples, redness, blotches, scurf, roughness, vanish as if by magic; while old, enduring skin disorders that have plagued the sufferers for years, however deeply rooted they may be, "Sulpholine" will successfully attack them. It destroys the animalculae which cause these unsightly, irritable, painful affections, and always produces a clear, healthy condition of the skin. "Sulpholine" Lotion is sold by most Chemists, and ELLIOT BROTHERS, Sydney. Bottles, 2s 9d. Made only by J. PEPPER and CO., London.

TARAXACUM and PODOPHYLLIN.—This fluid combination, as a stimulant to disordered liver, is safer than calomel, blue pill, or destructive antibilious medicines. In all cases of congestion or liver complaint, Taraxacum and Podophyllin sets the sluggish liver in action, moves the stomach very gently indeed, giving a sense of cleanness and comfort within a few hours. The symptoms of liver derangement—headache, torpidity, costiveness, flatulence, heartburn, sense of over-repletion, shoulder pains, repugnance to food, general discomfort and depression—are quickly dispelled by Taraxacum and Podophyllin. Prepared solely by J. PEPPER and CO., London. Insist on having the correct preparation. Bottles, 2s 9d and 4s. 6d. Sold by Chemists everywhere.

MELHADO'S GOUT and RHEUMATIC PILLS are highly recommended to persons suffering from Gout, Rheumatism, &c., &c., and only want a trial to prove their wonderful curative power. Price, 2s 9d per box, by post 3s 1d.

DERMATOLOGY.
JAMES H. ADGER, Dermatologist,
Office: 131, Elizabeth-st., Sydney, treats successfully all diseases of the skin and scalp, loss of hair, premature blanching, and general cultivation and growth of the hair; and, as a result of this experience, he may point to his flattering success during several years' practice in this city, without reference to the many special cures he has effected, as the best proof of the general efficiency of his system of treatment.
Mr. Adger may be consulted at his office, 131, Elizabeth-street, where letters and testimonials are open to inspection, which must satisfy the most sceptical, signed as they are by persons of the highest positions in society. It will be obvious that no person could have obtained such names as an endorsement of his professional ability without constant proof of merit.
